COURTS MAY DECIDE ON RECALL

ROAD COMMISSION TO FIGHT OUSTER MOVE

Rollie L. Lewis, Counsel for Commission, Says Mandamus Will be Sought to Halt Election

Present indications are that holding of a special election in Charlevoix county for recall of members of the county road commission will depend upon a circuit court decision.

While steps were being taken to determine the validity of signatures and headings of recall petitions filed March 30 by William Tryon, county CIO organizer, Rollie L. Lewis, retained as counsel by the road commission, announced Tuesday that mandamus proceedings would be instituted to restrain the county election commission from calling a special recall election until a hearing is held in circuit court.

In the meantime, County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow has announced that sufficient signatures of registered electors had been affixed to the recall petitions and that legality of the headings was now under scrutiny by Prosecuting Attorney Norman D. Ance. Signatures on the petitions, after those of unregistered electors had been removed ranged from 1440 to 1474, while the required number, based on 25% of the total vote cast for governor by all parties at the 1940 state election, was 1401.

Designation of time for the special election is vested in the county election commission, composed of the judge of probate, county clerk and county treasurer, it is understood. The law allows 30 days for examination of the petitions and 35 days additional, or 65 days from date of filing until the election is held.

The Charlevoix mixed chorus and concert band will present a radio type concert at 3:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon, April 12, in the high school gymnasium, under direction of Max Smith.

The band will resume the concert with an interestingly contrasted program, which follows: "Stars and Stripes Forever," "Mignonnette Overture," "Hungarian Dance No. 5," "From Tropic to Tropic," march, "Blue Danube," "The Vanished Army," march, "Guadalajara," "Phantom Trumpeters," "Hail, America," march, and "Star-Spangled Banner."

CADET ALBERT McMILLAN KIWANIS SPEAKER

Review of U. S. Air Corps Growth Proved of Great Interest

Air Cadet Albert McMillan, son of Dr. and Mrs. F. F. McMillan of this city, was guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Charlevoix Kiwanis club held at the I.O.O.F. hall, Tuesday evening.

He reviewed the growth of the air force from its beginning with thirty-five planes, attached to the signal corps, at the beginning of the first World War to the thousands of bombers and pursuit ships manned by highly trained pilots, gunners and bombardiers.

High tribute was paid to the fine character of his comrades and instructors and their devotion to duty. The Kiwanians appeared sort of dazed when they were told the cadets, during the first five weeks of their training, are allowed five minutes after reville to dress and "fall in" for inspection.

Mr. McMillan is home on furlough from Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Alabama.

NEED HUNTING TO PRESERVE GAME BALANCE

Warn Though Against "Marketing Hunting" for Food Supply

While joining the federal fish and wildlife service in a warning against "market hunting" raids on wildlife as an emergency wartime food supply, Michigan conservation department officials point out that the normal yield of regulated hunting and sport fishing in Michigan exceeds 33,000,000 pounds of food each year.

The 1941 estimates of 17,000,000 pounds of meat from game birds and animals and more than 16,000,000 pounds of fish are based on license sales, game kill reports, and a variety of creel census records. They are believed to be conservative.

Declaring game to be a crop, state conservation officials say the annual surplus, if not harvested, cannot be "saved" for future years, but would be largely wasted—a condition to be avoided in wartime as carefully as excessive hunting and fishing.

LIGHT VOTE CAST AT POLLS MONDAY

NO CONTESTS, BAD WEATHER, DETRACT INTEREST

D. C. Nettleton Named Second Ward Alderman, Only Change in City, Ward Officials

Casting one of the lightest general election votes in history, Charlevoix electors chose city and ward officers Monday.

An absence of contests, either city-wide or ward, and unfavorable weather, apparently combined to hold the vote down to 105, which, as far as records are available, has no equal as a low mark.

Robert Bridge was elected with no opposition to his fifth term as mayor, Ray S. Hamilton was named city clerk, Nelle A. Hammond was elected city treasurer. Robert C. Emrey received the highest number of votes for the office of justice of the peace and qualifications to hold the office will be determined when the vote is canvassed by the city council Thursday night.

One change in ward officers resulted from the election. D. C. Nettleton was named second ward alderman to succeed Charles Heise, who was not a candidate at the primary or general elections.

Following is the full slate of ward officers:

First ward—Supervisor, Angus L. Fochtman; alderman, Clarence Wood; constable, Joseph Howard.

Second ward — Supervisor, Arthur Bergeon; alderman, D. C. Nettleton.

Third ward — Supervisor, Clarence B. Meggison; alderman, W. E. Goss; constable, Harry Glossenger.

PYTHIAN PLANNING UNUSUAL ENTERTAINMENT

Program April 17th to Finance Awards to Honor Students

Something sensational and unique in the way of basketball is being concocted by members of Pine Lake Lodge, Knights of Pythias.

The mystery will be unraveled the evening of Friday, April 17, at the school gymnasium, according to the meager information now available. Occasion for the entertainment will be to finance scholastic awards to Charlevoix high school honor students, 25 of which will be given in conformity to a plan inaugurated several years ago.

If predictions are true, those in attendance will see one team of players ranging in age from 40 years up pitted against another of midgets, something unique in the way of band entertainment and other numerous features.

The complete program we hope to be able to divulge in these columns next week.

I.O.O.F.-Rebekah Supper

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

Buy a stamp and scotch a scamp; buy another and get his brother.

You've heard the old saying: "A tooth for a tooth; an eye for an eye." Well, now its a tuba for a tube, or no tube at all, applying of course, to the new WPB ruling that nobody can buy a tube of toothpaste or shaving cream unless they have an empty tube to turn in. The retail dealer is directly responsible for the trade-in transaction. If he makes a sale in violation of the trade-in provision, he's liable to a $10,000 fine, and that's that.

The mushroom season being not far away reminds me of what Mark Twain said: "The way to identify deadly toadstools is to eat 'em. If you die, they were toadstools."

Typographical errors many times will innocently change the meaning of a sentance such as the following taken from an exchange: "For sheer fight and tricks and stamina," says Pat Smith, local fishing expert, "give me a small mouth bass about sundown any evening."

Charlevoix is to be complimented on its display of flags in observance Monday of Army Day. In front of business and public places, there were 66 flags on display.

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

"My father works for Hitler." Thesa boastful words, uttered by a lad at a Michigan public school, led to the identification by the Michigan State Police of a Nazi agent.

The agent was employed by the German Library of Information with offices in the United States at New York City, and it was his duty to circulate propaganda favorable to the Nazi cause and to establish friendly contacts.

But here are two significant facts:

The Nazi sympathizer is an American-born citizen. He speaks English fluently.

While he is denied access into Michigan war plants, through friendly cooperation of plant managers with the state police, he is at liberty today, free to speak and to act as he pleases providing he is not caught in the act of espionage or sabotage.

Peril of sabotage exists in Michigan today. And the Michigan State Police and the Federal Bureau of Identification know it well.

But to finish our story. The revealing words of the Nazi agent's son, uttered in a moment of youthful bragging, finally reached the attention of police detectives through a long chain of events. One of the boy's chums told his father about the conversation at dinner table. The father reported it to the school teacher. The teacher questioned the boy after school hours and verified the statement.

Identification of the Nazi agent occurred prior to the outbreak of war last December. It occurred also when diplomatic immunity existed for German agents and when German propoganda was permitted to circulate openly thru the United States mail.

Such agents are known to the subversive squad of the state police, headed by Detective Lieut. Edward Mulbar. In fact, a long list of suspects has been compiled, and the activity of these individuals is carefully followed.

THE HOME FRONT

It was n year ago on April 9 that Hitler plague fell on Norway.

Nazi invasions nre black dates in the history of many nations once free and proud. Their anniversaries pass in bleak and sorrowful silence. Let us hope and pray and work and sacrifice that the shame of December 7 be erased from the history of our nation; that anniversnries of this date be celebrated, not in Berlin and Tokyo, but instend throughout a democratic world, as marking the rise of American courage upon which was wrecked the nefnrious Nazi scheme to enslave the world.

— Remember Pearl Harbor —

A peace-loving Amerien was slow to awnken.

As the effects of war rench more and more of us in Michigan and elsewhere on the Home Front, it becomes increasingly apparent that the great resources nf our country are united to preserve freedom for ourselves and our children—and to free such brave peoples as the Norwegians.

It was apparent as management and labor worked side by side, and knee-deep in flood, to keep a war plant at work—come hell or high water.

It was npparent as farmers—in Michigan and elsewhere—responded to a request of the office of defense transportation to pool their trucks for drives to market, to conserve trucks and tires.

It was apparent as plnns developed daily for greater production from farms and factories.

It was apparent as housewives and merchants accepted cheerfully the restrictions which changed their normal course of life.

It was appnrent as brnve young men marched ungrudgingly to army camps, some of them heroically to the battle lines.

— Unity—Courage—Victory —

With most of his 130,000,000 nieces and nephews willingly shouldering their part of the job, Uncle Sam is going to get tough with anybody who doesn't plny the gnme.

The reeently adopted new War Powers Act provides for heavy fine nnd imprisonment for willful violators of WPB priority orders or OPA rationing regulations.

— No Shirkers Wnnted —

The OPA has opened a field office in Detroit (Penobscot Bldg.) "to prevent inflntion and protect the consumer." It will serve all Michigan, although enforcement of the vast program of controlling prices and rents likely will lead to other offices in the state. Draper Allen, who wns stnte sales tax director in the Gov. Frank Murphy administration, is in charge of the Michigan office.

The new de-centrnlized WPB organiznton nlso divided Michigan. The upper peninsula becnme a part of the Minneapolis region. All the rest of the state, plus the Toledo, O. district, form the Detroit region. Ernest Kanzler, chief of the nutomotive braneh, is director of the Detroit region. These WPB offices will handle problems of production, conversion, machining and equipment, contract distribution, procurement and expediting; and priorities.

— America Will Win —

Recent war orders reached almost literally from the cradle to the grave—and deep into the household—in an effort to meet the ever-swelling remaad for metal. A WPB order limited the iron and steel which may be used in burial caskets. Another decreed that after June 30, no more metal shall be used in making children's toys.

Use of iron, steel and sinc in a long list of kitchen utensils and household articles was limited. No copper and brass will be permitted for zippers, and hooks and eyes. Fewer lawn mowers will be made. No vacuum cleaners will be manufactured after April 30. Metal used in paper clips, thumb tacks and office supplies was cut in half. The output of safety razor blades has been reduced.

We can do without these things. We can NOT do without victory.

CHAPTER XII

"We'll rent before we make up for Cape Stiff," Richard reminded him. "But we've got business to attend to around here first." Mat Forbes went on deck. "It won't take more than a couple of these fat old bulls to fill us bung up," Richard said; and then Mat spoke softly through the open skylight above them.

"Whales close aboard, Cap'n Corr."

Richard leaped toward the companionway. He called back to Tommy: "Tell the harpooners to grab a bite. I'll have cook pass along the mess kid forrad. Sharp." He scrambled for the deck, and Peter more slowly followed him.

Mary and George went on deck together. The day was fair, and for the season—early spring in these latitudes—mild enough; the wind light. Mary saw broad streaks of yellowish red upon the water, to starboard where the great school of brit were near the surface; and a moment later a black back showed and twin spouts rose straight as fountains. Richard himself was in the main rigging, watching the whales now so near the ship that voices aboard were hushed and whispering.

"Mr. Forbes, you play loose boat and stay clear," he directed. "The mate and I will fasten if we can. Tommy, go aloft and keep your eye peeled if they sound. Ready the boats."

Peter said, to no one in particular: "Where's Feik?" Without waiting for an answer, he dropped down into the after 'tween decks to find him. A moment later he came on deck again.

"He's sick, Dick," he said.

"Corkran will take Feik's place. Mr. Forbes, lend Borst to the mate's boat. You can manage without him," replied Richard.

Peter protested: "Blast it, Dick, I don't want to tackle a whale with a green man."

"I think Corkran knows his business," Richard said curtly. "Lower away."

He turned toward the boats, not waiting for any further word; but George moved quickly toward him, caught his arm. "Cap'n, may I go with Mr. Forbes?"

Richard looked down at him, grinned and clapped George on the shoulder. "Go ahead, man," he agreed. "Mr. Forbes, mind you keep clear."

And a moment later the three boats were in the water. Mary from the rail above them called softly down:

"Good luck, George!"

George grinned happily; and Corkran, bending the tub line to the box warp, looked up at her and nodded in a cheerful reassurance. The boats stepped their masts and under sail crossed the Venturer's bow. Richard took the lead, Peter close behind him, Mat Forbes bearing away beyond them to keep clear.

Isaiah, beside Mary at the rail, looked after them in muttering wrath.

"Like as not young Starn-all give Feik something to sicken him a-purpose! He'll always stay astern the lighter if he can, when it's time to lower."

"He and Richard are different, aren't they?"

Isaiah exploded scornfully: "Why wouldn't they be?"

"Well, after all, they're brothers."

"Act like brothers, do they?" he demanded. She turned to him in astonishment, and he said triumphantly: "Well, they ain't!"

"You mean, not at all?"

"Not a mite!" he assured her.

"But—they must be!" She was wholly bewildered; and her incredulity, working on his anger, drove him to a loquacity he would regret. He said stubbornly:

"Must be or not, they ain't Cap'n Ira'd ought to know! Here the night he died, Ira told Richard that Pete wa'n't even his own son! Mo and Hiram was there and heard him. Old Ira told Richard he'd heir everything, only a dollar to Pete."

Realizing he had said too much, he pointed across the water; said: "The boats will be on 'em in a minute now."

Mary, turning to look, found herself shocked and confused by this incredible intelligence; but as the distance between boats and whales narrowed, she forgot what Isaiah had said in the excitement of the imminent encounter.

Mary saw Big Pip in the bow of Richard's boat half a mile away drive home a harpoon.

CHAPTER XIII

She thought for a moment then that Pip had harpooned not one whale but a dozen. The great flukes rose and whipped from side to side with a terrible rapidity. The boat backed off, the sail and mast came down. Richard and Big Pip were changing ends. Isaiah cackled in shrill glee.

"Never saw Pip mux it before. They don't take to that! Look at him cut for 'em!" And then suddenly, in a long, whistling sigh: "Ah-h!"

For the boat yonder was in the air. Then the bow seemed for no reason to break off in small fragments; and then men and boat were in the sea, lost in a shuddering confusion of torn water and flying flukes and a great black body swinging to and fro.

"Ah-h!" For the boat yonder was in the air.

She had forgotten Peter. She saw his boat now, the sail down, the oars springing. He was at the steering oar, leaning on, making the boat swerve toward the fighting whale. Mat Forbes, well away from them, was racing toward the fight. Peter's boat shot in alongside the black bulk. She saw Corkran in the bow erect, the harpoon ready.

She had an instant's pride in Peter. This time at least he had not failed! Then she saw Corkran drive home one iron and then another.

Mary saw then that Corkran was in fact lancing, his shoulders pivoting like a boxer's as he drove the keen shaft home. The whale in the instant after these new irons struck him had rolled a little, giving Corkran a chance; and he was bold to seize it. She saw the thrust; and a moment thereafter, above that turbulence of foam and flukes, she saw a red flag of blood like a fountain playing.

Isaiah cackled in a sort of gleaful wonder:

"Got him first jab! Say, that Corkran won't ever go ashore t'wind'ard!"

Then the whale drove away, on the surface, thrashing flukes, breaching half out of water, its spoutholes streaming blood like a crimson banner. Mary watched the men in the water. Mat's boat reached them and began to pick them up, pulling man after man over the side. All of them. Saved! A great relief swept her; and she held hard to Isaiah's arm.

Isaiah said disgustedly: "Blast! That whale's sunk."

Her eye swept the water in all directions and saw nowhere a spout, no glistening back, nothing but Mat's boat yonder now full of men, and Peter's bobbing on an empty sea.

"Corkran went in too high with that lance," Isaiah said, and spat. "Can't blame him. He had to work fast. But he went in over the shoulder blade. Right whale's got an air bladder same as a fish. You let the air out and down it goes.

He looked at her sidewise. "There's times I talk more'n I'd ought to," he admitted awkwardly. "Like telling you about the mate not being Cap'n Ira's son. Richard told me not to, and he'd give me fits if he found out I did; but it's so. Cap'n Ira married a widow woman, and the mate was her young 'un. She wouldn't marry him only if he'd tell folks Pete was his. They kep' anybody from knowing, somehow." He added: "But I'd oughtn't to've told you. I was kind of worked up at Pete for trying to get out of lowering."

She said reassuringly: "I won't tell anyone. It's not our business, is it. Does Peter know?"

"He ain't supposed to." He cackled with a relish. "It's going to be some supprise to that young smelt when he hears the will read out. I'd admire to be there to see."

The boats were near; and they moved to the rail. Mat was ahead, Peter some distance behind, towing the stove boat; and Peter was standing up, using the long steering oar instead of the tiller which he might sensibly have preferred for this peaceful return to the ship. Richard faced forward, and he seemed to droop in a discouraged, broken fashion. Mary lifted her hand and called to them, a greeting without words. The boat came alongside, and she called: "Was it fun, George? Are you hurt, Richard?"

George grinned happily, and Richard shook his head. "I'm all right. Sassnet's ankle's twisted. The flukes just licked me on the arm. But if it hadn't been for Peter it would have been bad. The whale was ugly."

Yet she saw then that he was more seriously hurt than he had said. He was needing help to reach the deck. His left arm appeared to be of little use to him; and he was white with pain.

Mat said: "You'd best get into some dry clothes and see how bad that arm is."

Richard nodded and went aft, and Mary looked after him, wishing to follow him; but George was beside her, flushed, full of talk, trembling with the excitement of the past few minutes. She heard him telling her what he had seen, and tried to listen, and caught broken phrases. "One so near we could have hit him with our oars . . . Peter didn't hesitate this time." And then she heard him say: "Losing his boat will make Richard a little more human. Not quite so sure of himself."

She wished to say loyally that an accident might happen to anyone; but instead she spoke of Peter. "I'm glad Peter killed the whale. He's been feeling so badly about Uncle Tom."

"It was Corkran who killed it," he reminded her.

Peter's boat in fact drew near; and when he saw them watching, Peter called: "Well, Mary, you saw something today!"

She felt suddenly pity for him, thinking how crushed he would be when he knew the truth about his fatherhood, knew himself disowned by Captain Ira Corr.

"That was fine," she told him. "Wonderful!"

"You have to know how to handle 'em," he said complacently. "There's more to whaling than bull luck. Dick isn't the only man aboard can kill a whale. Where is he?"

"Gone to change his clothes," Mary said; and as the boat came alongside George added:

"His arm's bruised. The flukes hit him."

Peter laughed. "Probably rubbing liniment on it," he said. He swung up to the deck. George called to Corkran:

"Great job you did!"

Corkran shook his head apologetically. "I went in too high with the lance, sir. Over his shoulder blade. If I'd got him right he wouldn't have sunk."

"Good job, just the same," George insisted. He and Mary went aft with Peter.

Mary told George: "I'm worried about Richard. I'll see if he's all right." George nodded, and she went below.

Richard was in the common room, by the desk; and he had stripped off his shirt. When she appeared, he looked across at her in an abashed way. She saw his bewildered eyes, and then he said as though ashamed of his own weakness:

"Darned arm's broken, Mary!"

"Broken?" she echoed.

He extended his left arm for her to see.

She saw that it was swollen between elbow and wrist, already beginning to show a dark, discolored bruise. Also, it was twisted in an unnatural way, the hand in the wrong position, as if put on by an awkward workman. Her breath caught with pity, and she touched his arm tightly. His eyes followed her fingers as they approached; but when they touched his skin, his eyes leaped to meet hers, and for a long moment their glances held, as though each had been startled by some distant sound.

She tried to speak, and shook her head without knowing she did so, and ran to the foot of the companionway and called: "George! Peter! Richard's arm's broken. Come quick!"

George was beside her in an instant. Richard was leaning against the desk, grinning in rueful apology. "Makes me kind of faint," he said. "Takes the pith out of me." His lips were white with pain. Peter came below, asked sharply:

"What's the matter?"

George said: "His arm's broken."

Richard tried to laugh. "Funny," he said. "Joke on me."

'42 MAY SEE RISE IN HOG CHOLERA

Michigan farmers are due for heavier than usual losses in 1942 from hog cholera if the observations of pathologists at Michigan State college can serve as a guide.

In fact, the college staff issues a request that farmers refrain from bringing sick or dead hogs to the campus at East Lansing for diagnosis.

"Transporting a sickly hog is a dangerous practice and should be discouraged," says Dr. B. J. Killham, extension pathologist at the college. "Vehicles used for conveying cholera-infected hogs become contaminated and the possibilities for spread of the disease are increased."

Usually the height of a cholera epidemic comes in July in Michigan. With an early start, the disease this year may strike more hog herds than usual unless farmers take precautions.

One step is to vaccinate hogs. Cost of this is lowest shortly after the pigs are weaned, for it takes far less serum for a small pig than for a half-grown hog. Farmers are advised to take no chances with cholera especially if there is any prevalence or suspicion of the disease in a community. Flood waters of recent days have increased the possibilities of cholera spread.

Another factor in the cholera situation is that many farmers are new to the hog business, but that only emphasizes the cholera danger because these farmers may make mistakes in dealing with the disease.

When cholera enters a herd of hogs, Dr. Killham explains, usually only one hog is affected at the start and symptoms may be obscure. When a hog goes off feed, the owner should isolate the animal and if in doubt use the services of the local veterinarian.

4-H MOBILIZATION WEEK, APRIL 5-11

In 1914 congress authorized the establishment of a rural youth movement. In the 28 years that have followed, the movement has grown until 1,420,000 farm boys and girls are "in 4-H club work." Many of those first members now have children of their own who are in the movement. And what has it accomplished? Let's look first at what it is.

The four H's stand for head, heart, hands and health. Together they stand for the improvement of these human parts: Heads are pledged to clearer thinking, to finding the why and how of things. Hearts are pledged to greater loyalty. Hands are pledged to greater service to home, community and country. Health is pledged to better living. The 4-H pledge is a living thing, living in all those who have been in club work and grown up, living in the million and a half now enjoying it.

Now they have called a Mobilization Week—a national gathering of 4-H members—to renew their pledge of loyalty, service and self-improvement. Not in the shadow of the Washington monument, not in any great hall or stadium, but right in their own homes, on their farms, right here in our county. 4-H boys and girls are mobilizing themselves and their friends to take part in the most important thing that ever happened to these United States, the contribution of every man, woman, and child to preserving our way of life.

You may ask what the work of our boys and girls can do to slap the Jap and hit Hitler. Well, during 1941, 4-H boys and girls produced 2 million bushels of garden products, raised 5½ million birds, 75 thousand head of dairy cattle, 260 thousand head of swine, and 186 thousand head of other livestock. The girls canned 11 million jars of farm products. Wouldn't Mr. Hitler like to have that food for his people? And these aren't all their accomplishments. They collected aluminum, paper and scrap iron. They purchased Defense stamps and bonds. They organized fire patrols in rural areas. Nearly a million of them are checking their food and health habits to make their bodies stronger. A quarter of a million are learning how to care for what they now have, clothes, tools and other farm equipment. More than that, they have set out to study democracy — the art of living with others. These 4-H members are a national asset not measurable in terms of manpower or wealth or energy. We thank God we live in a democracy where such things can be. Remember, every one of these million and a half boys and girls is carrying on his or her projects without coercion, without orders from anybody, but because they want to. That is democracy. Let's have more of it.

You fathers and mothers will do well to encourage your boys and girls who are not in 4-H club work to get in during this 4-H mobilization week. And after they are in, help them, with their projects. They are the farmers and the farm women of tomorrow. In them is the future of America. If they are strong in mind and body, America will be strong.

"Consider thine inheritance and be thankful that thy lot is cast in such a land."

ROY D. STAFFORD IS VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

Died Saturday at Charlevoix Hospital After Brief Illness

Roy D. Stafford died Saturday at Charlevoix Hospital, following two weeks' illness with pneumonia.

Born at Norwood on December 8, 1883, Mr. Stafford spent his early years in that community. He had sailed on Great Lakes ships for nearly forty years, holding mate's papers at his death. During the past winter he was watchman on the Str. Wilbur C. Smith at Chicago.

Mr. Stafford married Rose Turcott, of Boyne City, in 1906. She died December 31, 1909. To this union was born a son, Lawrence. Following the mother's death, the son was adopted by Mr. Stafford's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Parmelee.

Mr. Stafford was a 32nd degree Mason in the Grand Rapids chapter.

He is survived by his son, Lawrence Parmelee, of Midland; three sisters, Mrs. W. E. Parmelee, of Midland, Mrs. H. W. Ogden, of Grand Rapids, and Mrs. H. L. Smith, of Petoskey; and a brother, Robert, of Charlevoix.

Funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the See Funeral Home, by Rev. G. Russell Parker of Northport. Interment was at Maple Lawn cemetery, Boyne City.

SMELT DIPPERS NEED NO IDENTIFICATION

As Long as Anglers Stay Out of Boat, No Card Required

Smelt dippers need no photograph-and-fingerprint identification cards so long as they stay out of boats, the conservation department reports, but at practically all smelt dipping locations they will need a state fishing license.

As explained by Lieut. H. A. Myer, captain of the port of Detroit, the coast guard regulations do not require cards of persons visiting or fishing from docks, piers and shores of the Great Lakes and connecting waters except where use by private businesses or governmental agencies require persons to have a pass. The regulations do require the cards of anyone using a boat on these waters, and it is this rule the conservation department seeks to have liberalized for the tens of thousands of sport fishermen who use rowboats and canoes.

Generally speaking, no cards will be required on those waters on which a state fishing license is necessary. Sport fishermen pay an license fees to fish Great Lakes waters. "Inland waters" on which licenses are needed include inland lakes and rivers up to the point at which they empty into the Great Lakes.

POOL OF FARM LABOR IS SOUGHT FOR REGION

Employment Service Names Placement Representative for Area

Plans are now being developed to assist farmers in securing farm labor workers, according to Walter H. Henley, chairman of the Charlevoix county USDA war board. The work of placing farm labor will be handled primarily through the office of the local farm placement representative of the United States Employment Service. The farm placement representative for Charlevoix county is Walter Rice, Petoskey.

Due to similar interests and activities, the chairmen of the county USDA war boards throughout the state are cooperating with the farm placement representatives in an effort to expedite the solving of local farm labor problems.

Farmers in Charlevoix county who are looking for hired help, or anyone wanting work on a farm may contact Walter H. Henley, chairman of the county USDA war board, whose office is in the county AAA office, postoffice building, Boyne City.

WPA TRUCK TO GATHER UP FARM SCRAP IRON

Farm-to-Farm Campaign Scheduled for Spring

Every farm in Michigan will be visited by WPA trucks to collect sorely needed scrap metal and rubber for war plants, Kenneth M. Burns, chairman of the Salvage for Victory Committee of the Michigan Council of Defense, announced.

The campaign to comb farms of all available salvage material will be conducted jointly by Abner E. Larned, state WPA director; Maurice A. Doan, state chairman of department of agriculture war boards, and the state salvage committee.

Farmers may either sell the scrap or donate it to the nation's war effort. If it is to be sold, the scrap will be weighed when it is collected and a check sent to the farmer later. WPA collection trucks will work under the direction of the farm war boards and local salvage committee.

The drive is expected to yield an average of 500 pounds of metal scrap from each farm.

Office supplies of any description may be obtained quickly through the Charlevoix Courier.—Adv. 29

Chicks Need Clean Yards

Trouble in the poultry yard is due for poultrymen who put a new crop of pullets out on range occupied last summer by a flock of old hens. The yard should be plowed up and seeded, or disinfected or rotated.

The cost of living, it is estimated, will be about seven or eight per cent more in 1942 than in 1941.

Tuberculosis—A Thwart to America's War Effort

Dr. James Chapman, director of District Health Department No. 3, comprising the counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego, called attention today to the early diagnosis campaign being directed by the Michigan Tuberculosis association during April.

"Disease fights on the side of the enemy," Dr. Chapman said, pointing out that tuberculosis seems perfectly designed to thwart America's war effort — it is the chief cause of death in the 15 to 45 age group. Last year it killed more than 60,000 Americans. In Michigan alone 1,723 died in 1941 while 5,371 others broke down with the disease.

Tuberculosis has always increased during war. Crowded industrial areas, pressure for increased production, malnutrition, physical and mental strain cause persons who have for years withstood the germs, to break down. Already England reports a 15 per cent increase in the disease, noticeable especially in young women between the ages of 15 and 25.

Tuberculosis is hard to find in the early stage because it has no symptoms. Only by tuberculin testing and x-raying apparently healthy people, particularly those who have come in contact with the disease, can the early cases be found.

The advantages of early diagnosis are: (1) the patient has a chance to be cured in about one-third the time needed for advanced tuberculosis; (2) by finding the early case and placing him in a sanatorium, others are saved from infection.

This month, as for the past 15 years, the Michigan Tuberculosis Association will observe its early diagnosis campaign. This campaign is conducted with the help of physicians, health officers and nurses and is directed particularly toward youths of high school age, those of any age in contact with known tuberculosis patients, and those having recovered from this disease.

In this particular county, Dr. Chapman and Miss Anne Lawrence, county nurse, do skin tests on selected persons. Those who show a positive reaction indicating that at some time or other tuberculosis germs have been present in the reactor's body will be given an opportunity to have their chests x-rayed. The x-ray will show whether or not an active lesion is present in the chest. If an active lesion is present and the person is capable of infecting other individuals, that person is required under Michigan law to seek treatment in a sanatorium.

The health officer and nurses of District Health Department No. 3, cooperating with the physicians of this area, are constantly searching for active tuberculosis. Michigan has an excellent tuberculosis program and only four other states provide more beds in proportion to deaths than does Michigan. If we are to increase our strength, and we must to overcome our enemies, we must strive harder than ever to prevent diseases which sap our strength.

VICTORY GARDENS
Michigan Council of Defense

By George Tomlinson, Director
Michigan Garden Program

If you wish to get a jump on the weather and have vegetables two or three weeks ahead of your neighbors, now is the time for advance indoor planting of tomatoes, cabbages, cauliflower, peppers and eggplant, for later transplanting outdoors.

Any wooden box which is shallow and wide can be used as a flat bed to start seeds. Put an inch of gravel or cinders in the bottom for drainage and fill to the top with good soil. Plant seeds eight to 10 to an inch and in rows two inches apart. Set the box where the light will hit it and keep the soil damp. Inside a few days your plants will be well sprouted.

When the plants are an inch high, thin out by transplanting them to other seed boxes, spacing plants two inches apart, to insure having good, strong roots.

Before the final transplanting to the garden outdoors, set the box itself outdoors in mild weather so that the plants can be toughened up. Each plant should then be watered, and transplanted with a ball of dirt sticking to the roots. Don't shake the dirt away from the roots. Make a hole larger than is needed to hold the roots and a little deeper than the roots grow. Then pack the soil firmly around the plant.

You'll find transplanted plants cannot stand strong sun at first, and so it is far best to do your transplanting on cloudy days or late in the afternoon.

Don't plow up your lawn for a Victory Garden if a fertile plot is not available adjacent to your home. There is an abundance of fertile soil in favorable locations in practically every community which can be used for community gardens. If you do not have any garden space on your own property, why not use the community facilities and not try to use sandy plots, or the front lawns?

Many folks try to grow gardens in a spot where grass never would grow. A vacant spot on the lawn is a grand space for a Victory garden. But they're going to be mighty surprised when they find no turnip seeds or radishes or whatever they plant there won't come up. Plants need food, just like anything else. If grass won't grow on some spot in your soil it usually means the soil is very acid, or something is the matter with it. Use a little care in selecting the site for your Victory Garden and you'll get far better results.

Children with their bicycles and tricycles cut up the lawns and terraces spring and fall when the ground is soft.

What mother and father in Charlevoix, or elsewhere, would permit their children and the neighbors' children to make a playground of their front lawn and yard if they were trying to maintain a good lawn, and to keep things neat and from being broken. Belvedere Club is as private and personal as any citizen's lawn and yard, and its efforts to keep its lawns and parks and cottages in good condition should be respected.

Thrifty Tips for the Homemaker

"THINK twice before you throw anything away" is a wise war-time slogan for every homemaker. Empty baking powder cans, for instance, enameled, make good looking cigarette boxes. Pound coffee cans, enameled and decorated with a stencil or transfer design, can be transformed into cookie jars suitable for gifts.

Olive-oil castile soap that the medical profession has long recommended for hair, skin and baby care is fast disappearing because of war conditions. Fortunately for family thrift budgets, a new white floating soap called Swan has been invented that is just as pure and mild as expensive castile and meets all of the doctors' specifications for a fine textured soap that is perfect for shampoos and infant baths too. And it's thrifty to use for washing dishes and silks besides.

And here's another war-time tip. You can prolong the life of the family's precious rubber boots if you stuff them with enough cardboard to keep them erect when not in use. The cardboard will encourage the circulation of air that's necessary to prevent cracking.

You can make tired looking cretonne curtains look practically like new if you wash them with Swan soap. This thrifty, fine-textured new soap suds twice as fast as old-style soaps and guarantees a richer, creamier lather that will stand up until you've gotten out all the dirt. Rinse three times in clear lukewarm water before wringing. Hang evenly on a line out of the sun. Pull edges straight several times while drying.

Don't throw away sugar, flour or feed sacks; they make good dish towels. Rip open carefully; hem raw edges and launder.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS
By Ruth Edwards

Girls in the Sunshine Patrol have been doing a fine piece of work during the past month. They have been holding a free nursery in the basement of the Congregational church on Sundays. The girls say the nursery is coming along just fine. They seem to have plenty of business, I notice.

Troop I's first aid course will be brought to a close this week. Rev. Hagle will give each of them a test. The girls all wish to thank him for his fine lessons. Added bits of personal experience clarified and verified the necessity of first aid. Our only disappointment is the fact that he is not a registered first aid instructor and that no certificates will be given. However, we will all have completed our first aid badge. In the near future Troop I plans to take a hike. It will be for the express purpose of practicing first aid with those facilities a biker would usually have handy.

We are sorry to announce a postponement of the cookie sale. Supplies necessary for ordering were delayed at headquarters. Orders will be taken from Thursday until next week, and delivered from the 20th to 25th.

We've got Axis to grind. Buy Defense Bonds.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

VERY OFTEN these days, I get to thinking about the soldier boys at camp. And the sailors, too.

What worries me is . . . what happens when they get a day off after working their heads off all week? They go to town . . . and what then?

What happens? The answer is . . . mostly nothing! Because most towns near army camps just don't have nearly enough entertainment facilities to take care of the soldiers on leave. So the boys just stand around, leaning against lampposts or sitting on doorsteps. And sometimes, the local townsfolk find themselves wondering what's changed the town . . . instead of pitching in to help the boys have a good time in decent surroundings.

In many towns, however, the situation is better. Many towns have nice, community places where a soldier can go sit down and "chew the fat" and enjoy some cake and milk, or maybe a good glass of beer. The boys like that. And they're not likely to get in trouble . . . because common sense tells you nothing can be wrong about a couple of glasses of beer.

There's another reason, too. The beer industry is cooperating with the army and with the law-enforcement officers to help keep the places where beer is sold, clean and decent. The brewers don't want their beer sold to soldiers in places where bad conditions exist . . . and they're right.

Seems to me that we Americans ought to get together and do everything we can to make things pleasant for the boys who are in training. They're doing their duty . . . maybe we have some duties, too, in this direction.

There are lots of ways of helping. We ought to support them all. All of us have our part to play in winning this war . . . and making life a little easier for the boys in camp is something we all can do something about.

Peter took the arm in both hands, feeling it, pressing with his fingers. "It's broken all right," he decided. "I can feel the ends scrape together."

Richard drawled: "So can I. Don't play with them unless you get a special lot of fun out of it, Peter. It's no fun for me."

They all smiled. Mary could not speak. Richard was so strong and splendid, to stand thus weak and broken now. Her eyes burned with unshed tears.

George reflected helplessly: "All I know about broken bones is to keep them quiet till you get a doctor."

Mary whispered: "Can't we go into port, somewhere?"

No one answered her. Their minds were dulled by this emergency. It was Richard who suggested calling Isaiah and Hiram. Isaiah volubly assured them that he had set more broken arms than you could shake a stick at.

"You go make a splint, Hiram," he told the carpenter. "What we want is a couple flat pieces of cedar, 'bout so long and 'bout so wide."

Hiram went to obey, and Mary to tear some of her own garments into bandages. When they set the broken bone, she bit her lip, watching Richard's mouth twitch as they tugged at his arm. Isaiah and Peter held the arm stretched in position while Hiram laid on the splints and bound them in place. [illegible] was done, Isaiah nodded in satisfied approval of his own work.

"There ye be!" he said. "Month from now, Cap'n, you won't know it ever happened."

Richard protested: "A month?"

"A month anyways. Yes, sure."

Mary asked: "Shouldn't he have a sling?"

Isaiah shook his head.

Richard grinned at his own plight. "Well, a fine lot of use I'll be around here for a while," he said. "Peter, you're going to have to handle things."

Peter nodded carelessly. "Sure," he agreed. "I'll look out for you." Before noon they sighted whales again; and Peter lowered, and Corkran got two irons home handsomely. Peter himself lanced this whale as easily as killing a chicken, and he came back to the ship drunk with swaggering with a new sense of power.

The blubber and the bone were safe aboard by dark that night; and a great moon rose to silver the slippery, stained decks and pale the glare of the fires under the trypots.

They had buoyed the whale which sank, and while they were cutting in and trying out this new kill, they stayed near the buoy. On the second morning they saw the dead whale afloat, swollen with gases. They brought it alongside too. Despite the steady work, everyone aboard was in good humor; for one more whale, Richard said, would fill their lost casks. They finished trying out, stowed the oil, scrubbed ship, cruised daily to and fro.

But their luck did not repeat itself; they went day after day vigilant and yet without success. On a steady westerly they moved down again toward Juan Fernandez, working offshore for a while; and inaction began to weary them and frot the patience of every man aboard, till at last Richard decided to put in to Taiohaeano.

"We might strike oil at the Cape Verdes," he said. "And if we don't, we've done well enough. It's time to be getting home."

There was, Mary would find, a surprising lot to be done by way of refitting. Richard warned her that rounding Cape Horn they were sure of cold weather; and she saw the sailors in their spare time on deck busy with mending and patching, preparing warm clothing for the high latitudes. And in the land-locked harbor of Taiohaeano the ship herself put on a new dress. Her old sails, patched and repatched and dingy with smoke, were unbent. The rigging was tested and repaired where repairs were needed, and freshly tarred. Richard bought beef cattle and had them butchered and the meat salted down; he bought biscuit and molasses, tea and coffee; and fruits and vegetables were brought aboard. Richard himself went to a physician, who found it necessary to break his arm afresh and reset it to prevent a malformation; and in the reaction from that ordeal, and in a rising impatience to be at home, he decided to forego the chance of another whale. So the bricks of the try-works were thrown overboard, the pots stowed below, the sheathing on deck and at the gangway removed; and early in December, stripped and fit, the Venturer was ready.

Feik and Barbo left them at Taiohaeano. Feik's illness had passed within a few days; but the two islanders found a chance to sign on the Nancy Drake, a bark bound westward, which had put in here for repairs after a rough time off the Horn. So Richard paid them off, and he did not fill their places. To work ship he had men enough. Soon after noon one day the Venturer put to sea.

The next morning Mary rose and went on deck to view the day as though it were something new and beautiful, never seen before. She was completely happy; but before the day ended, her world had changed.

She was in her cabin alone, George and the others all on deck; and she began to put her things in order, as though it were already time to pack to go ashore. So doing, she remembered the pearls Jarambo had given her.

And looking for them, found they were gone.

CHAPTER XIV

The loss of the pearls did not in itself grieve Mary; but the manner of their going had alarming implications. Whoever had stolen them was by the very fact of his guilt made potentially dangerous to the ship and to them all. Peter knew of the existence of the pearls, knew they were somewhere aboard; and he could not be surely crossed off the list of suspects. Certainly he held himself to no strict rule of honorable conduct, since Mary came aboard the Venturer he had wooed her who was George's wife.

Yet this consideration, which might have damned him, actually persuaded Mary at last that he was innocent. She was woman enough to understand that Peter—or any other man—might love her; and she was woman enough to forgive Peter.

But she was sure at last that, loving her, he would never have stolen her pearls.

Who, then?

Feik might have taken the pearls before he and Barbo left the ship at Taiohaeano; and Mary hoped he had! If he had them, they and the thief were gone. But of the men still aboard, there remained only Rannels. Mat Forbes' harpooner was a fat young man, with a deceptive [illegible] that hid strength behind it. There was something shifty about Rannels.

Thinking of Rannels made her suddenly afraid, and as much to reassure herself as from any real conviction, she decided that Peter had found the pearls and had put them in some place of greater security. But when she asked him whether this were true, he shook his head.

"I've never seen them since you showed them to me," he declared. "Where were they hidden?" She told him, and he listened, frowning soberly. "I'd have thought they'd be safe there," he admitted. "Did Richard know about them?"

"He knew I had them, but not where they were." She added: "I hope it was Feik. I hope he's got them, hope they're gone."

Peter chuckled. "I don't," he protested. "I liked the look of them. If anybody gets them, I'd like to be the one. I'm betting they're still aboard."

"I think we ought to tell Richard," she decided. "If they're aboard, whoever has them, it might mean trouble. But I don't want George to know about them unless he has to."

Later she reported the disappearance of the pearls to Richard. He said good-humoredly: "Shucks, you probably took them yourself, hid them somewhere else; and now you've forgotten where."

"You must think I'm an idiot!" She was at once hurt and angry.

"Sure you didn't?"

"Of course I'm sure."

"Then it was probably Feik," he decided. He frowned. "Now, I'm wondering if that barrel of ambergris is still in the cabin stores. I'll have a look and see."

The ambergris was safe, and nothing new happened to alarm them; but there was after that day an added vigilance in Richard's manner. He kept a more watchful eye upon the men, and went out of his way and outside any real need to keep them busy. He was forever shifting sails, trying this way and that to get greater speed out of the Venturer.

In the end it became necessary to tell George about the pearls. Mary and Richard and Peter were apt to discuss the pearls whenever two or all three of them were together and out of reach of other ears; and a man less sensitive than George must have seen that he was excluded from some secret which they shared. He was for a while too proud to confess that he saw this.

But in the end he questioned Peter. "I've had an idea you, Mary and Richard have a secret between you."

Peter laughed. "Secret? You can't keep a secret aboardship. No. Don't you worry, George!" he urged. "Richard's all right, and so's Mary. Of course, it would go to any man's head the way she looks at him; but they'll be all right once we're ashore."

George said after a moment: "I trust Mary, and Richard too, of course. Only I've wondered, sometimes."

The observance of Army Day, April 6, marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of America's entry into the World War in 1917, signalizes also the beginning of the nation-wide movement for the assistance of soldiers' families and dependents. Every community in the country today has its quota of men in the Army and the home folks of these communities are organizing units of the Army Emergency Relief.

The Army Emergency Relief is a fund being raised to provide for the assistance of dependents of any soldier who wears the uniform of our country. It operates without official "red tape." Emergency conditions are recognized and relief is given promptly. The mother who visits her boy in camp and finds his outfit suddenly moved, leaving her stranded, is immediately provided with necessary funds by the Army Emergency Relief. When a soldier becomes a casualty his dependents are given sympathetic care and funds are advanced until the payment of a pension or his insurance.

The Army Emergency Relief is incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia as a non-profit organization. General John J. Pershing is honorary president. The chairman of the board is Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, the acting president being Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson. The fund is administered by Major General William N. Haskell, formerly commander of the 27th Division.

Donations and contributions are accepted from any legitimate sources, organizations or enterprises, and already a great deal of money has been received. Families of soldiers and patriotic citizens in the cities and towns and the smaller villages throughout the country are taking the initiative in the work. It is a spontaneous movement of the people, without high pressure campaign methods, and its entire service is voluntary.

Outside of the larger cities committees formed by the citizens have had the whole hearted cooperation of local newspapers, and in many communities the press is promoting the organization of the movement, in some cases the funds being raised as a memorial to a home boy who already has made the supreme sacrifice. All persons interested in organizing local units to assist the Army Emergency Relief have been asked to communicate with Col. John Thomas Taylor, assistant director, Bureau of Public Relations, War Department, Munitions Building, Washington, D. C. Said Col. Taylor:

"We praise our country's defenders but our greatest service to the man on the battle line is the assurance that we are looking after his loved ones at home. In doing this we take the load off his heart."

Lack of opposition for any city office probably accounts for the light vote at the city primary election Monday, as only 125 out of 800 qualified voters displayed enough interest to go to the polls.

AT THE MOVIES

Fun, Hit Tunes and "Lovelies" In New Film

Abounding plentifully in gags, gals and melodies, "Louisiana Purchase," the new Paramount Technicolor film based on the smash hit Broadway comedy with music, arrives April 12-13 at the Palace Theatre, starring Bob Hope, Vera Zorina and Victor Moore.

Featuring the tunes by Irving Berlin which were standouts in the stage production, the new film extravaganza was produced in Hollywood by the same Buddy De Sylva who wrote the original story and produced the Broadway version.

"Louisiana Purchase" comes to the screen with lovely Zorina in her original stage role and Victor Moore continuing in films the same comedy character part that made Broadway audiences and audiences all over the country howl at the mere sight of his comic face and his somewhat awkward, naive gestures. Here we have two expert performers whom we know can be depended on for a solid delivery of entertainment.

Bob Hope, of course, was not in the original production; that young man was much too busy getting on with the business nf delighting radio and movie audiences alike. The young master of the double-take went on climbing in pictures on such substantial rungs as "Road to Singapore," "Road to Zanzibar," "Caught in the Draft" and recently, "Nothing But the Truth." From advance notices, Hope boosts himself still another rung higher with his performance in "Louisiana Purchase."

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Plans for Your Victory Garden Should be Made Now

Every family in Charlevoix county should definitely make plans for a Victory garden not alone for their own health and well being but also as a definite contribution toward winning the war. Already the rural communities are organizing themselves to bring about a 100% garden program in their localities. At the same time all the cities in the county are proceeding rapidly in their efforts to have a great expansion in home gardens. Never has it been so important as right now to develop a garden of sufficient size to take care of the needs of your family and perhaps, even more if possible.

As a means nf giving the home gardeners the latest information available as well as timely hints and suggestions, it is planned to have a short article in your paper each week during the year. Right now the big thing is to prepare the seed bed and think about adding humus to the soil. The garden should be plowed or spaded carefully to a depth of at least 6 inches. This should be done as early in the spring as the conditions will permit. Heavy soil should not be worked when it is wet. Unless it is well rotted and fine, care should be taken to cover manure deeply enough to prevent it's being pulled out by a harrow or a rake. If manure is spaded under it is a good plan to make a trench on one side of the area to be spaded, place a few inches of manure in it and turn the soil from the next trench, lower side up, in the first trench. More manure should be placed in the new trench and the operation continued until all of the garden has been spaded and manured.

As a general practice where manure is used it is applied in the spring just before plowing. Whenever applied it should be spread evenly over the surface and not left standing in piles.

In preparing a satisfactory seed bed the soil should be worked over thoroughly to a depth of at least three inches. The plants will do better in a soil which is made fine to a good depth than in one which may be smooth on the surface and lumpy underneath.

MSC Lends Another

Another member of the Michigan State college staff has been enrolled in special war work. Dr. Irma H. Gross, head of the department of home management and child development, has been called to Washington to participate in a study of the cost of living in war time. As a field supervisor Dr. Gross will collect data on family incomes and family living expenses for the project conducted jointly by the federal bureaus of home economics and labor statistics. The survey is being made at the request of the Office of Price Administration to aid in the allocation of materials between war and civilian uses. Dr. Gross has been granted a three months leave of absence by the college.

Insidious acts of propaganda have already been detected in Michigan.

Here are several examples. A barber advises a customer to withdraw money from any bank. He says he can't reveal the reason, but insists that the information is "very confidential."

Investigation discloses that the barber obtained the so-called "tip" in a letter sent to him by a friend in New York City. FBI locate the individual who admitted he had merely heard a rumor.

Whispered propaganda is easy to spread.

You recall the incident a number of years ago when rumors were circulated that a Republican nominee for the presidency had negro blood? Every president has been the target of vicious rumors, from George Washington to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

A second illustration, reported recently to the Michigan State Police, was a story that war defense bonds and stamps were not a safe investment, that the government was going to repudiate them and so on.

Who would benefit from such a lie? The answer is obvious.

Albert Carl Kaltschmidt is a name better known in World War I than today.

Kaltschmidt was the leader of a gang of traitors, members of the Deutschbund in Detroit, who plotted to destroy Michigan-made munitions. Others in this conspiracy were Walter Scholz, Carles Francis Respa and his brother-in-law, Carl Schmidt.

They decided to blow up the Detroit Screw Works. This plan was changed because Kaltschmidt decided that the place was too well guarded, and the Peabody Overall Company factory in Walkerville across the border in Canada was selected instead.

Another target was the Windsor Armory which housed many Canadian soldiers.

The factory bomb exploded, but luckily for the Canadian soldiers the one at the armory did not.

Kaltschmidt and his gang of saboteurs were finally arrested and sentenced to serve terms in prison.

While enemy bombing raids by airplanes are expected to be made against Michigan military centers, such as the St. Mary's river locks at Sault Ste. Marie, the Willow Run bomber plant near Ypsilanti and the Chrysler tank plant in Macomb county, a greater danger lurks in the possibility of disastrous sabotage being committed by a handful of enemy agents. Most of them would be emigrants or American-born citizens, Quislings to the cause of the United Nations.

When can we expect such sabotage? Will it occur in the factory at the assembly line?

Here is one guess, and we cannot quote our authority: It will happen when the finished product—the tank, airplane motor, or other material—is ready for shipment. Fire is the chief weapon of the saboteur. It could destroy a million feet of valuable timber in northern Michigan or thousands of bushels of valuable grain in elevators in country towns.

There will be other Kaltschmidts in this war. Michigan must be alert to the peril of these American Quislings who would misuse American freedom in order to destroy it.

Ask Kelly to Run for Governor

For the first time in history, a prospective candidate for the governorship finds himself in the enviable position of having his party's members in the state legislature back him for the role of party standard bearer, indicating Kelly will have widespread support of his party if he decides to offer his services as a gubernatorial candidate. Hundreds of Republican officials throughout the state likewise have asked Kelly to run.

Senator Hale Drake, Stanton (right), president pro tem of the senate, and Howard Nugent, Bad Axe (left), speaker of the house of representatives as they presented letters from house and senate members to Secretary of State Harry F. Kelly at his home in Detroit, asking him to become a candidate for governor at the next November election.

FOURTH REGISTRATION APRIL 27TH

INCLUDES GROUP BETWEEN 45 AND 65 YEARS OF AGE

Registrants Will Not Be Subject to Military Service Under Present Selective Service Act

Michigan local boards today were authorized by Col. E. M. Rosecrans, state selective service director, to organize their plans for the conduct of the fourth registration, which will be held throughout the nation in accordance with the president's proclamation on Monday, April 27, between the hours of 7:00 a. m. and 9:00 p. m.

Persons required to be registered in the fourth registration will include all males residing in the continental United States or in the territories of Alaska, Hawaii, or in Puerto Rico, who were born on or after April 28, 1877, and on or before February 16, 1897. With the registration of this group, there will remain to be registered only those males between the ages of 18 and 20. Registrants of the fourth registration will not be subject to military service under the Selective Service Act of 1940, as amended.

Col. Rosecrans estimated that 570,000 persons in Michigan will be subject to registration on April 27. Approximately 225,000 of these will be registered in Wayne county. More than one million Michigan residents are now registered with local boards in this state.

Local boards have been instructed to establish places of registration in public schools and other public buildings similar to those used for the third registration in February. Approximately 25,000 volunteer registrars will be called upon to assist local boards in the conduct of the registration. School officials and other local governmental agencies have been called upon to assist local boards in every way possible to insure accurate and complete registration.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

Last week I called your attention, and particularly the attention of our young people to the navy's urgent need for a half million scale models of the fighting aircraft of the world. Then I commented on how model building and progressively stepped up courses in aviation had been so effectively used in Germany, and finally how the Germans and Russians had built up their tremendous reserve of military airplane pilots through intensive and extensive courses in glider and soaring training.

Our American youngsters are the most airminded people in the world and during their school years hundreds of thousands of them have built and flown model airplanes. So much so that within recent years this model aircraft industry has grown into a seven million dollar a year business. In building these models, our boys and girls learn thoroughly the fundamental principles of aviation. They learn by practical experience what makes an airplane fly. Many of our improvements in aviation have sprung from ideas worked out by these youngsters, believe it or not. They work out these ideas because they are not hidebound by accepted principles of engineering.

Not long ago, I was talking with my former pilot, Bob O'Dell, who is now a captain on the Pennsylvania Central Airlines, and he told me frankly that he frequently likes to take time off to go a few blocks north of the Detroit City Airport where there is a great open field and watch the many youngsters flying their rubber-powered and gas-powered airplanes. He likes to go out there in civilian clothes because when they do not recognize him they love to talk about their planes and he finds their knowledge of fundamentals is most remarkable, and even when they produce some entirely unorthodox design and are questioned, invariably they have some logical answers to support their theories and very often their actual flights bear out their contentions.

But when our youngsters reach the age of 14, most of them begin to tire of model building, and there comes a period when their interest, enthusiasm, energy and indeed their genius is lost to aviation. Something must be done about it, and will be done if congress will act favorably on measures now before it which would provide for glider and soaring training for these youths, but which measures so far have not had the active and enthusiastic support of either the army or navy. Not that our army needs fighter pilots 14 years old, but the 14 year old who takes up glider training will become a far better fighter pilot at 18 with such experience behind him.

Originally neither our army nor navy were enthusiastic over our present civilian pilot training program. Yet since this program has been in effect, the Civil Aeronautics Authority has taught over 75,000 boys and girls to fly, of which at least 15,000 boys are now in the armed forces and many of the others are presently engaged as instructors or replacing reserve pilots in civilian pursuits who have been called to the colors. It is likewise of interest to note that 75 per cent of the famous Eagle Squadron of the R.A.F. are C.P.T. graduates from the United States. Now our armed services recognize the value of this program and have recently requested that the C.A.A. double their present program of graduating 2,000 pilots per month. Graduates of this program who show the necessary aptitude and physical fitness are being taken into the services for their military pilot training. Today we are faced with an ever increasing demand for pilots which must be satisfied. The civilian pilot training program, like the army and navy, has in the past required that an applicant must have two years of college training. College training is preferable for those who may later become ranking officers, but it is not necessary to make a good pilot. The college training requirement would have eliminated many of our greatest aces in the last war, including Captain Eddie Rickenbacker and Major 'Shorty' Schroeder. Schroader is now vice-president in charge of safety on the United Airlines and strongly advocates glider training. He stated "The youth who are interested in the flying of glider and sail-planes make the best pilots. Such education and training is basic; it is an essential to the art of flying. Flying in a sail-plane that soars through the solar movement of the ascending air is really true flying.' No pilot has ever really flown until he has soared in a sail-plane, seeking out and riding the silent and invisible solar movements of the ascending air of our atmospheric ocean. A good airline pilot would be a better pilot if he had such experience. Time so spent is not wasted." Captain Rickenbacker, our World War ace of aces says—"Teach our youngsters to soar, and the future of aviation will take care of itself."

I hope congress will shortly approve of legislation to provide for the institution of widespread glider and soaring training for interested youth between the ages of 14 to 18, the management and supervision of which training should be in charge of the Civil Aeronautics Authority so that the armed forces be not further overburdened at this time.

SHOT AT RANDOM

common knowledge. They spend much of their time in places where liquor flows freely. Experience proves that they can't afford to trifle with the stuff. Opinion is sharply divided on the effect of liquor, those who take a liberal view seeming to have the better of the evidence. Taken in moderation and at the right time, liquor is not harmful to the average man. The staunchest advocates of drinking, however, concede that no task, mental or physical, can be performed as well immediately after a drink as without a drink. The rule of sensible drinkers is to avoid even the mildest form of intoxicants until the day's work is done. In the case of professional baseball players the rule among the sensible probably is to put off drinking until the season's work is done.

As I understand it, the Pythians are going to stage a Whiskers vs. Diapers basketball contest along with numerous other didos at the school gymnasium Friday evening, April 17th. When Bill Supernaw was telling me about the thing, he mentioned something about girls teams, too, and seeing how I'm not sure just how he explained the matter, perhaps you'd better plan to go and see for yourself. All foolin' aside, purpose of the entertainment is to finance awards to high school honor students, something the Pythians have been doing several years. It is one of the finest gestures I know of, this award giving. It has set a reward for scholastic attainment for many a student. Make your plans now to be there.

If any smelt are running creeks in this vicinity yet, those who know it must be keeping the information to themselves.

As a nation, unless we are prepared for the worst we aren't prepared at all, so let us begrudge no effort, no precaution.

REGISTRANTS TO GET BLANKS SOON

IS FIRST OF TWO OCCUPATIONAL QUESTIONNAIRES

Men of Third Registration to Receive First Blank Between Apr. 20-25; Ten Days to Return

Occupational questionnaires, the first of two which men registered in the third registration February 16 will be required to fill out, will be mailed between April 20 and 25, it was announced today by Fay Davis, Charlevoix county draft board clerk.

Registrants will have ten days in which to fill out and return this first questionnaire, Mr. Davis stated. The second questionnaire, that seeking information for selective military service, is expected to be sent registrants in the February 16 registration around May 1st.

The first questionnaire, a 4-page affair, appears quite complicated on first glance, but is simple if instructions are followed closely. It is an elaboration on the occupational sections of the regular selective service questionnaire. The usual identification questions on birth, name and address are asked in addition to present occupation and possible capabilities, education and other confidential information. It is designed to provide a register of the nation's manpower.

As a means of aiding registrants to fill out the questionnaire, additional members who may be asked for assistance, have been named by Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner to the advisory board of the local draft board. Those named in addition to the original membership composed of Roy Winegarden and E. A. Ruegsegger, Boyne City, and E. K. Rueling, of East Jordan, are: John Hausler, Boyne Falls; Theophile R. D'Anjou, Gilbert Lindsay, Cecil Ormsby, Wiley R. Vought and E. Dudley Ruegsegger, of Boyne City; Rev. Francis Branigan, St. James; C. M. Bice, Foy A. Bradley and M. A. Levinson, of Charlevoix. Assistance may also be obtained from the registrants' employer, a labor union or the U. S. Employment Service.

MOVIES OF TRAINING IN NAVY SCHEDULED

School, Kiwanis and Legion Showing to Be Given April 21

Opportunities available for men who enlist in the U. S. Navy will be depicted by picture in Charlevoix on Tuesday, April 21 through three showings of movie reels by Recruiting Officer C. J. Kelley, officer in charge of the navy recruiting office at Traverse City.

Three subjects will be shown, the first, a 2-reel movie entitled "Eyes of the Navy," which depicts training of naval aviators; the second, "First Line of Defense," showing life aboard ship during maneuvers; the third, "American Sea Power," which depicts bottle maneuvers.

Several hundred musicians from schools of his area will participate. William Revelli, director of the University of Michigan band, Ann Arbor, will be the critic-guest conductor.

Charlevoix's school band is preparing numbers to be played before the judges and also for a program of numbers for the massed band concert.

AWARDS TO HONOR STUDENTS FRIDAY

PYTHIANS SPONSORED ENTERTAINMENT AT GYM

Basketball Frolic Features Teams Under 14, Over 40; Band Program, Other Novelties

Following a custom inaugurated several years ago, Pine Lake Lodge No. 122, Knights of Pythias, will award medals in recognition of scholastic attainment to 26 honor students of the four upper grades of Charlevoix high school at the school gymnasium Friday evening, April 17.

As a means of financing this very worthwhile venture, Pythians are staging an entertainment of unique nature which they name a "Basketball Frolic." Main attraction will be a contest between Coleman's Midgets, ages under 14 years, and a group of men over 40 years young. Playing for the older group will be such well known characters as Ralph (Washy) Washburn, Bill (Doc) Kerns, Earl (Speed) Shapton, Ed. (Beau) Edwards, Harold (Spec) Miller, Arthur (Viper) Fagan, Milt (Tubby) Block, Chas. (Lippy) Heise, Clarence (Lard) Heise, Mike (Parson) Hamlin and others. Just how the game is to be played remains to be seen.

Other features include a basketball game starring local girls teams — described as beauteous and charming—and a novelty band concert being worked out by Max Smith, school band director.

Award of scholarship medals will be between games or at the half of one of the contests, it is understood.

EXPECT LAKE LEVELS TO REACH HIGH MARKS SOON

Rainfall in this and the next few weeks may bring northern Michigan ground water levels to the highest point in the eight years for which accurate records have been kept, the conservation department's geology division predicts.

KELLY WILL SEEK GOP NOMINATION

ANNOUNCED CANDIDACY FOR GOVERNOR AT PRIMARY

Secretary of State Complies to Urging of Legislators; Is Seen As a String Candidate

Secretary of State Harry F. Kelly announced Monday that he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor.

Kelly's announcement was the result of a 6-month draft campaign by Republican legislators and state officials. According to Vernon J. Brown, auditor general, Kelly "is the strongest possible candidate we could put in the field."

Harry F. Kelly

"In making this decision," Kelly said, "I am fully mindful of the many responsibilities of the chief executive of this state in normal times, and also the all-important duties associated with the high office during this national crisis, and the reconstruction period to follow."

LOCAL YOUTH REPORTED MISSING

BEN GILL IS CHARLEVOIX'S FIRST WAR CASUALTY

Parents Notified Friday; Navy Reveals Submarine Unreported for 30 Days and Presumed Lost

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gill received a wire Friday morning from the navy department advising them that their son, Benjamin S. Gill, 24, fireman 3rd class of the U. S. Navy, was reported missing in action. He was with the Asiatic fleet, on the submarine U. S. S. Perch.

According to Sunday's news releases, the navy department had stated the Perch was unreported for more than a month, and must be presumed to be lost. It was operating in the Java Sea.

Ben was a graduate of the Charlevoix high school class of 1937. On September 30, 1940, he joined the navy at Macon, Ga. He received preliminary training at Norfolk, Va., and was later transferred to San Francisco where he served for a time aboard the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Lexington. Last spring he volunteered for transfer to the Asiatic fleet, and served on the U. S. S. Canopus before being assigned to the submarine Perch.

Mr. and Mrs. Gill last heard from Ben in January, in a letter written November 20 from Manilo, P. I. Two weeks ago the Red Cross advised them that he was apparently all right, although no definite information was given at that time.

TYPEWRITERS TO BE RATIONED BY BOARD

Application from Eligibles Will Be Received at Any Time

While regulations and required information has not yet been received, Fenton R. Bulow, administrator of the Charlevoix county rationing board, has stated typewriters will be rationed through the board in a short time.

In view of the fact it is believed eligibility requirements for obtaining typewriters will follow closely requirements for release of tires and automobiles, Mr. Bulow said applications will be received and acted upon when full regulations are received.

FEDERAL USE TAX ON LARGER MOTOR BOATS

Rate of $5 Starts With Boats Larger Than 16 Foot Length

The ordinary Michigan fisherman will have no need to worry about the federal tax on boats, comparable to the new stamp tax on automobiles, the conservation department learned from the office of the collector of internal revenue, in order to reply to inquiries of northern resort owners.

As defined in the law, the tax does not apply to rowboats, nor to any boats less than 16 feet long. But boats 16 feet long and over that are propelled by soil or machinery (including outboard motors) must pay a tax graduated according to length, with a $5 rate for craft 16 to 28 feet long and a $200 tax on ships more than 200 feet long. An exception is made for commercial fishing boats, and for other special cases also.

TWO NEW HIGHWAY JOBS ARE STARTED

Brush Right-of-Way on U.S.31; Resurfacing 9.851 Miles M-66

One highway project near Charlevoix is now under way and contractors are awaiting location of equipment to start a second.

Marsman & Tabor, Grand Rapids highway contractors, have a crew of men brushing the right-of-way for relocation of U.S.31 from Charlevoix to Boy Shore. It is understood work will continue until grading is completed on this project.

Cooke Contracting Co., of Detroit, is locating equipment for macadam surfacing of 9.851 miles on M-66 from the start of relocation on Loeb Farms to East Jordan. Highway load restrictions have so far prevented moving heavier equipment onto the job, it is understood. Operations will be carried through to completion of the project after it is started.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

If this is civilization, we'll have to revise our ideas of what savagery was like.

Had the unusual experience of seeing three bald-headed eagles flying together last Sunday out toward Horton Bay. Seeing them singly, however, has been quite common for several years.

Some live to a ripe old age while others think a small cut or scratch won't amount to anything.

Tuesday was all that could be asked for a beautiful spring day and it reminded me of the weather we had a year ago last week end. On the Saturday corresponding to last Saturday, the thermometer stood at 75, on Sunday at 70 and on Monday at 78. We had a thunder shower, too. Last week end was quite a contrast. Though bright, a cold north wind drove you inside for comfort.

One thing the new law governing the limit on trout is going to do this year is to stop the "fish hog." I have in mind particularly those fellows who the first night of the season each year went below the power dam on the Boyne river and came away frequently with a limit catch of big spawn-laden rainbows weighing perhaps up to and in excess of 50 pounds. This year they're allowed 10 pounds and one fish, which is enough for anyone. In other words, if one, two or three fish taken weigh 10 pounds, one more can be caught and that's the end. I still think a better remedy for such a situation as that on the Boyne would be to prohibit fishing for a half mile below the dam until the spawning period is past, and furthermore, to stop the practice of dipping the fish and carrying them over the dam to fall victim of illegal spearing farther up the river. The congregation of rainbows impeded by the dam on the Boyne river is an unusual situation and should be treated as such.

I'll bet Charlevoix is the only municipality that has an honest-to-

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

In addition to the Van Wagoner-Kelly state act, which is billed to take place in the political circus next November, Michigan's 1942 campaign may have several interesting sideshows.

Reapportionment of the state legislature, the urban vs. rural issue, may appear on the ballot. Rural members of the legislature have declined to reapportion the state on the basis of the 1939 or 1940 census, although the state constitution clearly says that such must be done. Why? Many upstate counties would lose legislative seats, and rural folk are distrustful of sinful cities anyway.

Plagued by scandal, involving a mayor, a sheriff, county officials and numerous policemen, Detroit civic leaders are determined to "clean house" by reform of local government.

Top crusader for better city and county government is William P. Lovett, secretary of the Detroit Citizens League and a professional reformer. Lovett intends to submit an amendment in November to the voters of Michigan for "home rule" in Wayne county.

While farmers sniff suspiciously at the aroma coming from Wayne county, Reformer Lovett is girding himself for righteous battle against the forces of corruption and evil-doing.

A practical and astute observer of Michigan affairs is another Lovett by name only—John J. Lovett, general manager of the Michigan Manufacturers association and a resident of Bloomfield Hills in Oakland county.

Hard-headed Lovett, one-time legislative correspondent for the Chicago Tribune, is involved in a verbal feud with his namesake. He believes any home rule amendment would be snowed under by upstate voters. Why? The voters would link home rule to reapportionment, and the traditional city vs. county prejudice would lend to defeat of a good measure as well as a bad one. So reasons John.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

Triple-A committeemen and their wives enjoyed a very interesting and instructive meeting at the Hotel Dilworth on April 7. The day's program and discussion was lead by Charles Bonine, state committeeman, Stanley Yuill, district fieldman, and Mrs. Ruth Southern, assistant to the State Farmer fieldwoman. Very interesting talks were given by them on the duties of all farmers and their families in the war effort, covering the need for full farm production, maintaining the ever normal granary, victory gardens, dangers of possible air raids and the women's place in helping to get full production during the coming season.

After a splendid dinner at the hotel, two sound pictures were shown in the dining room, through the courtesy of Harold Lees, REA manager. Just before the afternoon session started on its work, Mr. Mellencamp, county agent, gave a short talk and presented the committeemen with a copy of the compiled land use planning report of Charlevoix county. The major portion of the afternoon meeting was devoted to panel discussions. Mrs. Countis Mascho, Charlevoix county farmer fieldwoman lead the discussion among the women present. Many topics were discussed informally, principally dealing with the women's part in the present national emergency. Following the women's discussion panel, Mr. Bonine selected several men and the same procedure followed. Among the men, the shortage of labor provoked the greatest interest, especially when it was suggested that war prisoners and interned aliens be used to remedy this situation. The opinion on this subject was divided. The use of the panel discussion proved, that when called upon the farm women as well as the men have put considerable thought on the triple-A war time farm problems.

Melvin J. Somerville, county committeeman, left on the "Rambler" for Beaver Island Monday morning, for the purpose of assisting in the distribution of several tons of commercial fertilizer which will be used under the provisions of the triple-A program. Recent soil tests made on Beaver Island show a deficiency o phosphate and potash, therefore this commercial fertilizer will greatly improve the hay and pasture lands and provide for an increased amount of beef cattle which is the major product of Beaver Island.

VICTORY GARDENS

Michigan Council of Defense

Registration for victory gardens is being launched throughout Michigan this week by victory garden committees of the Michigan Council of Defense. If you have space and fertile soil in your own yard, or if you wish to join a community victory garden program, you are urged to volunteer and submit registration cards to either your local victory garden committee, your local or county council of defense, or at public libraries or for community gardens through the junior chamber of commerce.

Registration cards and free pamphlets charting the planting time of various garden crops were made available this week by the state victory garden administration. A supply has been shipped to each county war garden chairman.

Volunteers in the garden program are asked, even if gardens are not to be grown. Helpers are needed to organize, harvest, store or preserve vegetables and fruits for school or community use; to help in a neighbor's garden; or a school or community garden; to distribute donated flowers from gardens to hospitals, service camps and so forth; and to do the necessary office work involved in supervision of the gardens.

Plan your garden in advance. Remember that a small garden, well-planned and well-tilled, is better than an acre neglected. A carefully planned layout will save many hours work in planting and cultivating your victory garden.

Every individual has his own problem as to where a garden should be located. Therefore, it is best not to follow too closely any suggested plan laid down by a magazine or by someone attempting to establish an ideal.

Get out a paper and pencil, draw an outline of your available garden space, and then plan from there just what flowers and vegetables you want and where to put them. Every experienced and amateur gardener finds that a good seed catalog will contain an almost unlimited fund of information about the heights, colors, growing habits and cultural needs of flowers and vegetables.

What size garden should you have? The best advice we can give as to size o n garden is not to grow food which cannot be used, or which is greater than our own needs. Great care, rather than great space, makes the successful victory garden. A small garden, viewed psychologically, does not tire one out when you consider weeding or cultivating on hot summer days.

Rows running north and south are best to let sunshine reach the soil after the plants are well grown. The distance between rows may vary considerably. In small gardens, well supplied with plant food, rows of low-growing crops may be as close as six inches. The best distance for crops not exceeding two feet in height is 18 inches, which enables you to cultivate each aisle in one trip with a wheel hoe.

Plan your garden or the whole season. This means, in some cases, two or more crops grown in the same row. You can sow early, midseason and late bearing varieties at the same time, waiting for them to come into yield at different times, or make several sowings of the same variety, 10 days or two weeks apart.

Plan straight rows and narrow rows, as they are easier to cultivate. Plan your garden's size in accordance with the tools you have to work your garden. A spading fork and a strong back will prepare the soil of a small plot. A plow will prepare the soil of a large garden. The plowing can be hired done by a farmer. A small garden may be hoed; a large garden must be cultivated. Take these things into consideration.

"Here, I'll show you you're wrong." Peter spoke easily; he took George by the arm, led him across to the other side of the deck and forward, so that they would approach Richard and Mary unseen, from behind. "We'll get near enough to hear what they're saying," he proposed.

But George stopped. "No," he said curtly. "I'm not a spy!" Before Peter could urge him, he called to Mary, still some distance from them.

He called her name, and there was a note of warning in his voice. That call startled her, made her turn with guilty cheeks; for when she had followed Richard forward, she was thinking of his forbearance toward Peter, and when they were alone, on sudden impulse she said: "Isaiah told me Peter's not really your brother, Richard."

He said in a low tone: "I'd have Isaiah whipped for that, if he weren't old enough to be my grandfather."

"Everyone will know when we get home."

Richard shook his head. "No, they won't! Not even Peter, if Isaiah and Hiram keep their mouths shut. I'm going to have the lawyers tear up Father's will, or else I'll take Peter in as partner. He can run things ashore."

Peter laughed. "Secret? You can't keep a secret aboard ship."

"I haven't even told George."

"Don't," he urged. "If Peter knew about it, it would knock him all to pieces, Mary."

"I won't, of course. I noticed in the log one night that your father never called Peter his son; but he always did you. He was pretty proud of you, of course."

Then George spoke her name behind them, and she turned in quick guilty dismay; and George saw her confusion and his cheek paled. She went toward him, forced herself to speak casually.

"Well, they're gone, almost out of sight now . . ."

George nodded. "I think I'll go below," he seemed hoarse. "I'll try to take a nap."

He turned away. Mary, after a moment's doubt, went with him.

He did not protest when she followed him; but neither did he look around. He walked rapidly aft to the companion, descended before she overtook him. At the foot of the companionway she found that he had stopped to wait for her; and when she faced him he asked a flat question.

"Mary, what were you and Richard talking about?"

He cried wretchedly: "Oh, I'm sorry, Mary! I don't want to be this way! But I've seen you so often lately talking to him, and if I come near you, you stop. I try not to notice. I try as hard as I can. But—I can't help it, Mary."

Desperate to reassure him, and to stop his questions, she remembered the pearls. "Richard's worried," she said. "There were some pearls in a packet in his desk, and they've been stolen."

"Pearls? Where did Richard get them?"

"They were mine." Once begun, she must tell him everything; but at her word, his hand tightened on her arm.

"Where did you get them, Mary?"

"Jarambo gave them to me the day we left Gilead."

"Jarambo?" His eyes cleared with relief. "I suppose he'd had them for years. Probably dove for them himself. Was that it?"

"No," she said. "I think I know what happened." She told him the truth, or her best guess at what the truth might be; she related now at last the massacre at the island, and the burning of the ship.

"They had killed Aulgur, you know," she reminded him. "I suppose these were his pearls, and they got them, and Jarambo found them on their schooner."

He sat down, shaken by what he heard, fumbling for solid ground again. "Our Islanders slaughtered those men?"

"Yes!" She said. "But they did it because they loved you, George."

After a moment he cried in a sudden strength: "Mary, I'm glad they did! The world's better without them."

"Yes."

"Mary, why didn't you tell me all this before?"

"You were so ill."

"Did Cap'n Corr know about the massacre?"

"Yes."

"Does anyone else aboard know?"

"Corkran knew, of course. He's probably told everyone. And they all saw the smoke from the burning schooner before they reached the island."

He nodded briefly, said in a slow scorn of himself: "Everyone knew but me, but no one told me."

"I knew how unhappy it would make you."

He laughed shortly. "I know now where I stand with you all. You think me a weak woman of a man, who has to be guarded and cajoled and shielded, protected from the truth."

"Please, George."

He shook his head. "Oh, I suppose I'll be all right when I've thought it over; but it's pretty hard to find yourself so contemptible in the eyes of other men!" He went to his own cabin and shut the door behind him, shutting her out.

When he appeared for supper, he seemed to be himself once more. They were all cheerful at the supper table. Peter did most of the talking, as he was apt to do. Since that day when he killed the whale which had broken Richard's arm, he was exuberantly sure of himself, inclined to condescend.

At dark that night, the weather changed; the wind came more southerly, and it stiffened, and was cold. Richard shortened sail a little, stayed on deck most of the night watching his ship, using as much wind as he wisely could, extracting from the half gale all it would safely give. The weather got no worse next day, but it got no better; and Richard drove her carefully that day and the days that followed.

CHAPTER XV

George coughed more and more; but in spite of Mary's urgings, he went on deck every day, refusing to be coddled, interested in this westward passage of the Horn which they were approaching; and he asked Richard many questions.

"We're all right," Richard assured him. "The only thing I don't want to hit is fog. We're apt to see icebergs any time. I'm shortening sail at night. As long as it stays clear, we can see ice a long way from the crosstrees, and we can tell pretty well before dark if there's any ice ahead of us. And the nights are short. That helps."

He himself now kept the deck during the brief hours of darkness, not going below at all, sleeping in the daytime. Their course was by this time southeasterly, and Richard took every opportunity to catch the sun, or to take a lunar.

They sighted the Diego Ramirez Rocks one morning an hour after breakfast; and Mary put on her coat and went up the companion and found Richard exuberant as a triumphant boy in the knowledge that his calculations had been accurate. The men forward were shouting instead of talking, their voices high-pitched with triumph, knowing that presently they would turn at last northeasterly for the long run home.

"Now, I'll snatch a wink, Mr. Forbes," Richard told Mot. "Call me when we come abeam of the Rocks."

So he and Peter went below with George and Mary; and Richard stripped off his great sea coat.

Mary said: "You're dead for sleep, Richard. Go lie down."

He nodded. "I could sleep three days in a row," he agreed. He went into his cabin and closed the door behind him.

Mary made George lie down in his bunk for warmth's sake, and covered him over. She returned to her own cabin, and drifted off to sleep. Later she roused a little; heard Peter say in the common room outside her door:

"I tell you you're wrong. But anyway, watch yourself. Dick will blow you to pieces. He keeps a gun in the top drawer."

She sat up in swift alarm. As her feet touched the floor, she heard Peter go on deck again; and then George opened her door.

He grasped her arm, his fingers crushing it so that she uttered a low cry of pain. She looked up into his face and saw it twisted and convulsed by some terrific passion; and she whispered in a quick terror:

"George! What's the matter?"

He said harshly, "Come out here! I want to talk to you and Captain Corr."

Holding her, he wrenched open the door of Richard's cabin; and Richard asleep in the bunk opened his eyes, his head rising from the pillow, and then his whole body rose as he came to his feet in a sharp alarm, steadying himself with his good hand.

"What's wrong?" he asked. He brushed past them into the common room, leaped toward the companion, thinking only of the ship, thinking her in danger.

When Richard, emerging from the cabin, brushed him aside, George had lurched toward the desk; and before Richard reached the foot of the companionway, George dragged open the top drawer of the desk and lifted out of it the heavy old revolver always kept there. At his cry, his command, Richard turned and saw the weapon leveled at him firmly. For a moment he did not move, staring in a bewildered astonishment; but then, his concern still for his ship, he said curtly:

"I'll be back!" And he went up the companionway.

Mary began to understand what was coming; to foresee the content of the next half hour. She heard, as though far away, voices over their heads; but she did not look up. She stared at George as though he were a stranger seen for the first time; and she waited for Richard to return as for a reseuer.

When he descended the companionway, he closed the scuttle behind him, shutting them in. He stopped at the foot of the ladder, looking from one of them to the other. George had turned, stood braced now with his feet wide apart, his back to the desk. The Venturer, quartering the seas, was combining a pitch and a roll in an exasperating motion, slithering upward at an angle, poising, lurching down again.

George had put on some composure. He was steadier now, and quieter. He backed against the desk, still holding the revolver, and faced them both; and he spoke in crisp, slow tones. He said evenly: "I want this business between you stopped, today, now."

Richard stared at him; he looked helplessly at Mary. "I'm so tired I'm dumb," he said, speaking to her, not to George. "Maybe it's because I'm short of sleep. I don't know what he's talking about."

But Mary knew. So many incidents out of the past came now to enlighten her. This man facing them with a weapon in his hands was the same George who could not endure the thought of leaving her with Joseph Neargood at Gilead. He was the same George who could not see Fritz Aulgur give her a pearl. He was the same George who was forever tormented by a devil of jealousy. It did not occur to her to wonder why the passion in him had thus suddenly come to a head. Certainly he had lost control of himself.

She moved toward him, said pleadingly: "George, you're sick. Let me put you to bed. Please!"

"I'm sick to death," he told her. "Sick of you! Don't touch me. I've shut my eyes to your wantonness long enough."

His word stopped her like a blow. Richard protested gravely: "George, you're talking in circles. If you've got anything to say, say it. What's on your mind?"

"I'm talking about you and Mary making love to each other all the time," George told him; and his own rage choked him, and he coughed, bending double, clutching at his chest, his face dark with lack of breath before he could speak again. "Do you think I'm blind?" he challenged then.

"I think you're crazy!"

"I'm crazy, am I?" George visibly fought to control himself; to speak impassively. "Oh, I don't blame you so much. Why wouldn't you make love to her, when she begs for it? Captain Corr, leave her alone. No matter what she says. Because if you ever touch Mary again, or speak to her, I'll kill you."

Richard said miserably: "Man, you're sick!"

"Maybe I am. But I'm not too sick to pull a trigger. I've killed as big a man as you, with a pick-axe, and he had a gun! Don't you touch Mary again, or speak to her.

"Speak to her?" Richard echoed. "Why, sure I will; and I'll touch her too if it comes that way. Have some sense! Why wouldn't I?"

George cried explosively: "Because you're in love with her, and she with you!" But on his own words, a paroxysm of coughing swept him, bent him, silenced him. He dropped the revolver on the desk, clutching at his chest with both hands. It was long before he could speak again.

Through that long moment Richard looked at Mary, and Mary looked at Richard. Before the moment ended, each knew.

It was true! While their eyes met in that long exchange like a revelation, like vows exchanging, these two forgot George, racked and helpless by the desk. His words unlocked at last a long-closed door. What he said was true, and while their eyes held now, they both knew it! They knew that they had loved each other always, and would love each other always. They had not guessed the truth before; but they knew it now forever, beyond doubt, beyond change, beyond forgetting.

Each thought wonderingly: I was blind not to know then that this was true.

RUMMAGING through my desk the other day, I came across some snapshots of friends of mine made back in 1933.

If you don't think time flies . . . if you don't think this world ever changes . . . you ought to look at the women's hats and dresses in those pictures taken 9 years ago! Wuw!

It gave me quite a start . . . and then it set me to thinking . . . and rememberin'! Lots of things sure happened in 1933. A new administration in Washington . . . the turning point of the depression . . . and the coming of Repeal.

I remember the re-legalization of beer. It came before Repeal, when Congress amended the old Volstead Act to allow legal sale of "3.2" beer.

What talk and arguments they had in those days! One argument I remember well . . . was that beer would do a lot to help bring back prosperity. I wondered at the time whether that argument could be proved.

I thought about that again, the other day. I decided to check up and find out.

Well, I found out plenty. I found out that legal beer has paid more than 3 billion dollars in taxes since 1933. It has made more than a million new jobs.

According to one of the reports I've seen, beer has put more than 15 billion dollars into general business circulation. Goodness me, that's a lot of money.

Beer is sold today in every state in the Union. Every state benefits from beer's jobs and taxes. And I guess there's no denying that beer did do its share in bringing back better times.

I'm glad it did, too, because beer is such a pleasant, appetizing beverage. And it stands for moderation and moderate people . . . it's not likely to get you in trouble.

SURVEY FARM, FACTORY WORKERS IS UNDER WAY

Members Legion Auxiliary Conducting Campaign in Charlevoix

Many women, equipped with identification cards and forms, today began a door-to-door survey in Charlevoix and surrounding communities to develop a "reservoir" of workers who could be called upon for work on Michigan farms or in factories.

The survey, conducted by local members of the Womens Auxiliary of the American Legion, will run for ten days, through April 25.

All of the information concerning skills, abilities or willingness to volunteer for work on farms or in factories, will be turned over to Karl Harvey, manager of the Petoskey office of the United States Employment Service.

The employment service, in turn will use the information to meet anticipated shortages of labor.

Backed by Mayor Robert Bridge, federal and state officials, and by all local civic organizations, the survey is the first of its kind ever conducted and will produce "information of inestimable value."

"When Michigan's war production program swings into full stride," declared Mayor Robert Bridge, "our state and our local communities will be faced with a drastic and critical shortage of labor to fill available jobs.

Save Antifreeze

—The need for chemicals for war purposes may create a scarcity of anti-freeze solutions for automobiles, tractors and trucks next fall. Which leads to the suggestion that when radiators are drained this spring, the solution should be saved for use next winter. The solution keeps best if stored in a cool place in airtight containers such as glass or stone jugs. Even the antifreeze in tractor tires can be saved, but this should be stored separately to avoid putting dirt and tire particles in radiators filled again next fall.

MANY DAM AREAS ARE BANNED TO FISHERMEN

Anglers Warned to Obtain Information Before Planning Trips

Fishermen planning spring and summer trips to favorite fishing spots can cross waters next to several power dams off the list right now, as the state emergency protective defense board, created by act 2 of the first extra legislative session of 1942, has designated them "special emergency protective defense areas."

Already listed are Tippy dam in Manistee county, Rogers dam in Mecosta county, Hodenpyle dam in Wexford county and Croton and Hardy dams in Newaygo county. The area surrounding each dam will be posted, both above and below, at the nearest point to which fishermen may approach. The number of such designated special defense areas is expected to increase.

Local conservation officers, traditional source of information about conditions, will be able to inform anglers about the closed areas. Fishermen may inquire also of district headquarters of the conservation department about doubtful dam goods, before setting out on trips.

DICKENS CLUB CLOSES YEAR WITH DINNER AT BARNARD GRANGE HALL

Members of the Charles Dickens club closed their year's work Thursday evening, April 9, when they and their husbands enjoyed a 7 o'clock dinner served by the Barnard ladies in their grange hall.

Tables were decorated with sweetpeas and snapdragons, with places informally set for 48 guests.

Mrs. Clair Webster, program chairman, introduced past president Mrs. Arthur Ranger, who in poetic form gave an interesting resume of the year's work.

New officers for next year were introduced, with a response from each one. Officers are: president, Mrs. Archie Livingston; vice-president, Mrs. Harry Bingham, secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Charles Bleha; librarian, Mrs. Norman Ance.

After the program, all enjoyed games in the hall recreation room. Highlight of the entertainment was the Virginia Reel, which concluded the evening.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

In my column last week, I expressed the hope that congress would shortly enact legislation to provide for gliding and soaring training for our interested youth between the ages of 14 and 18, under the management and supervision of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. I do not want any parent to think that I am advocating any dangerous program for our young people. On the contrary, gliding and soaring are far safer than is powered flight and far safer than bicycling, roller skating or even driving an automobile on many of our crowded streets and highways.

Many airplane pilots, who learned their flying in powered aircraft, are inclined to frown on the value of glider training and the reason they do is exactly the same as the motor-boat enthusiast who frowns on the sailboat enthusiast. In the motor-boat, as in the airplane, the pilot relies primarily on his power to take him where he wants to go; he avoids troublesome water or turbulant air. If he is bucking headwinds, his speed is proportionately reduced and if the wind is behind him, it is proportionately increased. If he drifts off his course, he relies on his motor to pull him back on. In the case of flying, however, there comes a time in every young pilot's experience, and perhaps his hair stood on end, when his motor cut out for the first time and he was forced to make a dead stick landing. Generally, under our supervised courses of instruction today, pilots are sufficiently well trained so that they land safely, but sometimes they badly damage their plane in landing and if some of those pilots had had some training and experience in soaring and gliding, they would have far more confidence in themselves and would have profited by their earlier experience to make an even better and safer landing.

In the sailboat, as in the soaring plane, the pilot has no power except the power of nature, upon which he must rely to take him where he wants to go. The power of nature generally fluctuates on the water and in the sky, and hence the soaring pilot, no less than the sailor, must apply himself diligently to the careful study and observation of the forces of nature to be able to tell in advance what forces he may utilize and what he must avoid, and this he must do at times instinctively, based on the fundamental knowledge he gained from experience in the past, and from such observations as he may be able to make of the sky and other atmospheric conditions surrounding him.

The beautiful part about gliding and soaring is its safety and an experienced pilot can land or launch his sailplane almost anywhere in the smallest of fields, close to highways, with perfect safety to himself, because most of these planes can be safely maneuvered and landed at speeds as low as 20 miles per hour, which is far safer than some military planes, I have ridden in, which have to land at speeds over 100 miles per hour. These latter absolutely cannot land except on prepared airports.

Accomplished glider pilots have been known to solo power airplanes with but one hour of dual instruction and have proven to be exceptionally good power plane pilots.

In Pensacola some years ago, the navy tried an experiment with an incoming class of students, they were all given glider training first, even though the test was entirely too short to be conclusive, and no soaring instruction whatsoever was given them. It was found, however, that none of those who failed to make good glider pilots could later qualify to become airplane pilots. It costs us $30,000 each to make a good military pilot. Don't you think we could save Uncle Sam a lot of money, a lot of headaches and a lot of wasted time; and don't you think we could save a lot of broken hearts and even a few broken bones in some youngsters, if we started right out now with civilian courses in glider training? And once those youngsters have mastered the art of gliding and soaring, we would find ourselves in possession of the world's greatest pool of the best potential military aircraft pilots in the entire world, and we are going to need that pool to win this war.

Attendants were Miss Reanette Green, of Ypsilanti, and Harry Goldstick, of Detroit.

The couple will make their home in Detroit, where Mr. Smith is employed at the Packard plant and Mrs. Smith teaches in Lincoln Park, a Detroit suburb.

PIONEER HOSPITAL SERVICE AIDS WAR EFFORT

Associated Mutual Elects Officers and Reports Record for 1941

The Associated Mutual Hospital Service, first association of its kind in Michigan, which also serves the individual who cannot obtain group hospitalization insurance, held its fourth annual meeting of members on April 13th at the home office in the Majestic building, Detroit.

Joseph L. Milburn, president and executive director, reported cash assets of $185 for each $100 of liabilities. Forty per cent of the association's assets are invested in United States government and war bonds and in order to further help the war effort, all regular employees will be made a gift of a $25 war bond every three months.

Premium income and enrollment fees were $114,131.65 as compared to $75,065.00 the previous year and claims paid since incorporation amount to $117,275.16.

The officers elected in addition to Mr. Milburn were Jesse E. Hatch and Joseph W. Landon, vice presidents and Helen M. Smith, secretary-treasurer. All trustees on the board were re-elected.

KELLY WILL SEEK G. O. P. NOMINATION

Kelly declined to say who he expected would be his running mate for lieutenant governor or United States Senator. At one time Kelly was known to favor making the race for the United States Senatorship against Sen. Prentiss M. Brown. Republican leaders persuaded him he would do the party more good by heading the state ticket.

There was no indication of opposition against Kelly in the Republican primary. If nominated, he will run against Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner, who was expected to seek re-election.

The Kelly candidacy was expected to create a delicate problem on the administrative board.—Van Wagoner, a Democrat, is chairman of the board and chairman of the defense council. Kelly is chairman of the defense committee of the administrative board, which distributes defense aid from the $5,000,000 war fund.

Attorney General Herbert J. Rushton, when informed of Kelly's announcement, commented, "Good. I'm too busy to issue a statement now, but I will."

RECORD SALE HUNTING LICENSES LAST YEAR

Deer, Small Game Permits Were Highest in State's History

Record breaking sales of hunting licenses in 1941, not likely to be approached for the duration of the war, are announced by the conservation department as computed to the close of the first quarter of 1942.

Small game hunting licenses sold last year totaled 608,360, which is 71,536 more than were recorded for 1940 at this same time a year earlier. Deer hunting licenses totaled 221,494, an increase of 46,318. The most recent figure for camp deer permits is 18,871, where only 700 were issued in 1940. More than 1,000 licenses were issued to archers, doubling the number sold in the previous season.

The 841,707 sport fishing licenses sold in 1941, though exceeding the previous year's sales by more than 70,000, still fell more than 16,000 short of the 1939 peak.

FSA LOANS AVAILABLE FOR VICTORY GARDENS

Receive Applications Saturday, April 18 at Boyne City

Every farmer, 4-H club member and F.F.A. boy is out to produce all the food possible to help win the war. All Charlevoix county families are planning a "Victory Garden" for a better living at home and to relieve transportation for war materials.

If local banks or other credit sources cannot finance needs for stock, tools, seed, fertilizer and other supplies necessary to farming, FSA may be able to help out. Repayment terms are one to five years. Parents sign papers with club members. The Boyne City office in the post office building will be open all day Saturday, April 18, 1942, to receive applications.

FSA's special real estate loans are also available for refinancing land contracts and mortgages in danger of foreclosure.

LANSING LETTER

dustrials see it. Hence the employers' hostility to reapportionment. The same situation exists in Illinois, Pennsylvania and New York where metropolitan problems clash constantly with rural interests.

County Board of supervisors are elected on the basis of laws enacted by the state legislature.

George Welsh, newly re-elected mayor of Grand Rapids, who fathered the last reapportionment law in Michigan (based on the 1920 census), reports that the Kent county board is dominated by out-city interests although Grand Rapids eclipses easily in population.

The same situation exists, he says, in many other counties of Michigan. As a student of government Mayor Welsh is not optimistic over the prospects of a reapportionment victory in November. Why? Too much indifference; issue is complicated.

Checks for farmers will be paid by Uncle Sam for scrap metal. A letter from Donald Nelson of the War Production Board was mailed to farmers in Michigan this week, asking them to report by an enclosed card any scrap metal which could be converted into needed munitions.

The card is to be mailed to Michigan headquarters of Works Progress administration which will send a truck to call for the metal.

Standard prices will be paid. Payment may be made in war saving stamps if farmers prefer, so we hear from the Michigan Council of Defense which is sponsoring the collection through its "Salvage for Victory" committee.

The rubber tire situation is critical, but few motorists seem to believe it.

Governor Van Wagoner's appeal for 40-mile-per-hour automobile driving has not resulted in general observance by motorists. More automobiles are licensed in 1942 than in 1941.

William L. Batt, director of material for the WPB, says it is downright subversive propaganda for anyone to say there is no rubber shortage. S. L. A. Marshall, military commentator for the Detroit News, recently observed: "Most of us are driving on the last tires we'll ever own until peace comes again to this world." These are hard words, but they may be prophetic by 1943.

One of Michigan's growing pressure groups is organized labor.

Organized labor—A. F. of L. and C.I.O.—favored the reapportionment amendment as a means of obtaining more favorable consideration of labor bills in the legislature.

Labor regards the typical farmer as conservative and reactionary.

It is no secret to observe that the Michigan Manufacturers Association looks to upstate legislators to maintain "sanity," as in-

ATTENTION FOLKS!

Don't burn or waste old rubber. Our country sorely needs it.

Bring or send in to us your discarded golashes, rubbers, boots, water bottles, also shoes with rubber soles or heels.

We will remove the rubber from soles and turn over this rubber collection to our Boy Scouts.

But now they knew. Now they knew; and the knowledge was a gulf, deep and terrible and hopeless. Their eyes held hard, till George recovered; and they did not know he had recovered till he crossed to thrust at Mary with a movement like a blow, to break the bridge of their exchanging glasses, and to cry, pitifully furious:

"Don't! Stop! You shan't even look at him so!"

She spoke in a panic of haste, desperately denying, as much to persuade herself as her husband.

Mary whispered: "George, George it isn't true!" She looked at Richard again. She knew it was true, knew he knew. "It isn't, please!" she cried like a prayer.

George faced her, challenged: "So it's not true?"

"Of course not!"

He lifted one hand, brushed it past her like a scornful blow. "You're a liar!"

Mary begged: "George, please!"

He swung to her, staring at her narrowly. "You want me to believe you don't love him?" he demanded.

Mary begged: "George, please."

"I don't, George."

He grinned mockingly. He slipped his arm through hers. "All right," he said. "I believe it. I believe you. You're my wife, and you love me. Is that true?"

"Yes, yes, yes."

"You love me with all your heart?"

"Yes."

"And soul?"

"Yes."

"Fully and completely and passionately?"

"Yes, yes, you know I do."

He had begun this catechism in tones derisive; but under her earnestness, his derision faded. He was so lost without her, wanted so much to believe her, that he began to do so.

She saw with a slow rising hope that he did begin to believe her; and she thought fear would live with her always now, fear lest he discover the truth. She thought: All my life I'll have to lie to him, pretend, make him believe I love him. If he knew I don't, he would die.

He caught her to him, held her close, the thin muscles in his arms tightening in nervous spasms.

Then George freed himself and stood erect again and turned to Richard, while he still held Mary's arm like an owner in possession. He spoke haltingly.

"I'm sorry, Cap'n Corr," he said. "I was wrong." He coughed twice. "You must lie down," she said. "I'll tuck you in. You're cold and sick and tired."

"Come." He tugged at her. "I'm not tired. I'm strong now, Mary."

The cabin was small, with a high bunk against the ship's side, a locker at one end, drawers beneath the bunk, a seat and a drop-desk where his Bible and his two or three other books lay. George shut the door and turned to her and caught her hands and whispered hoarsely:

"You do love me, Mary?"

She said mechanically: "Of course I do."

He threw up his head, half laughing. "There's no 'of course' about it!" he cried. "I know you do, now; but I never knew what it meant before, Mary. I love you too, today. I always have, without knowing it. I love you, Mary."

"I know you do, George dear! I know you do!"

Then George began to cough again, and had to release her; and she stood, watching him as remotely as she watched herself, thinking how little he was, and thin, and weak, and frail.

He coughed and coughed, half-sitting on the bunk, clinging to the edge of it behind him with both hands, trying to stand, till he began to bow forward, and she realized that he was slipping down, lower and lower. Then suddenly he was a sprawled lump, all legs and thin arms in a coat too big for him on the floor at her feet.

She was strong enough to lift him, with what help he could give, into the bunk; and to wipe his stained lips gently, and to loose his garments and take off his shoes and cover him. She brought blankets from her own bed to warm him; but when she felt his body under the blankets he was cold, cold, cold.

Sometime, minutes later or hours later, Peter came down to speak to her. He stood in the doorway, asked warily: "What happened?"

"George is sick."

"What happened to him?"

"Nothing. I think he caught cold. He started coughing."

"Anything upset him?"

"No, no. He's just sick, Peter."

Peter said, watching her narrowly: "Dick's gone crazy!" She looked up at him in quick concern. "Crazy as a coot," he said, in a fretful anger. "He came on deck and piled every stitch on her. He just said he was in a hurry to get home."

Richard did not come below for dinner or for supper.

CHAPTER XVI

Mary stayed beside George's bunk all that night. She thought the motion of the ship had eased. There was no longer much roll. Once next day Mary went up the companionway. She saw, standing somewhat sheltered by the companion, that the great seas astern were forever about to overtake them. Solid water piled up behind them higher and higher, seemed to hang above them for a while, moving nearer and nearer, till its crest broke into wind-driven foam, and the mass subsided. There were two men at the wheel, fighting it hard. Peter came to Richard's side and shouted something; but Richard, staring stonily ahead, did not even nod. Peter turned to the companion; and Mary backed down into the cabin with him following.

He said, hoarse with panic: "He's crazy, I tell you."

She saw that he was shaking with simple fear; but she was not afraid. No emotion could touch her now. She went in to George, to sit beside him, holding his hand. He would be better when the sun shone again and they were all warm. She thought she had been cold for weeks, could not remember when she had not been stiff with cold. Time passed. At intervals, Peter or Mat Forbes came below for a brief moment of rest in their cabin across from George's. The lamps were lighted day and night, swinging and flaring crazily; but night ran into day without division.

She thought of Richard, never leaving the deck, his face set like granite, staring ahead yet seeing nothing, forcing the ship along this road that might have death at the end like a man fleeing blindly from something dreadful. She knew what it was from which he fled. Her thoughts kept him company, hovered over him, wished she might comfort him, while the tortured Venturer drove on and on.

Disaster struck them in that hour between midnight and dawn when men are at low ebb.

For it was then a sea overtook the Venturer, solid water like a wall, so high that it becalmed the fore course; and before the topsails could lift her it came aboard over the stern. The mass of it boiled through the after house; the stern was pressed down by the weight, and the ship's way checked. Then, as the stern rose, the water swirled and eddied about the decks like a school of fish meshed in a net trying this way and that to be free. It tore out bulwarks here and there. It ripped one of the boats from the gripes and left it hanging stern down against the ship's side, battering to splinters there.

When that sea caught them, Mat Forbes and Gibbons were at the wheel together, but Gibbons was torn away by the solid water and flung forward head overheels. One of his booted feet smashed through a pane in the skylight, and his foot in the hole it had made and held his body hanging head down. Mat Forbes held to the wheel. Richard and Peter were saved by the lifelines to which they clung; and the watch on deck forward had warning enough to give them time to grab at hand-holds.

As the stern lifted, Richard leaped through water that was still knee deep to help Mat with his one good arm. The Venturer had begun to broach to, but the foretopmast staysail helped pay her off; and they held her. The splitting crack when the foretopmast broke a foot above the cap warned Richard what was happening forward. The stick as it fell caught Eddie Few a sidewise crack that stunned him or killed him outright. He slid overboard as the great sea, sullenly relinquishing the attack, drew off from the decks of the Venturer.

The driver of the bus, when examined, was discovered to be an open case of tuberculosis."—Canadian Public Health Journal.

Dear Ken:

Well, here it is Easter Sunday and it is about 90 degrees in the shade and we had a parade for an hour and a half and the sweat was running about like sap is up there. Guess everybody survived the ordeal alright.

I want to thank you for the paper as it is sure swell to read about the happenings in the home town. I was glad to read that they heard from Ben Gill and hope he is o. k.

We have been drilling so much lately that when we go out for a few hours we have to step out of the holes we wear in the ground. We spit Missouri dust for a couple of hours and now I understand why they say, "you have to show me," as they get a taste of everything around here, even the Missouri river catfish, and they would make any self-respecting cat hide its head. But all in all, it isn't too bad, as everybody seems to gain weight on it.

Thanks again for the paper, as it is sure enjoyable reading.

Bud Gebeau.

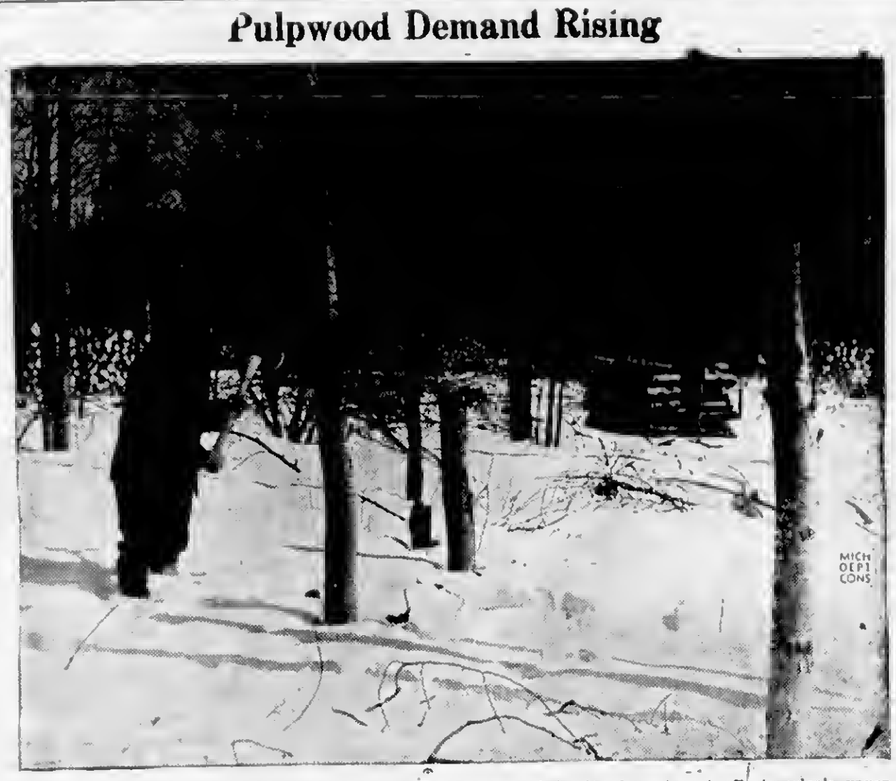
Pulpwood Demand Rising



With extra demands of war industry to meet and normal foreign imports cut off, America's paper industry is drawing more heavily than ever on Michigan's forests for raw material. Prices of spruce, balsam, jackpine and hemlock pulpwood have risen sharply, and more poplar is being cut. Above, a pulpwood cutter working on a stand of over-mature "popple" in Higgins Lake state forest.

According to information just received from the Michigan Transit company, Charlevoix is to have two freight boats a week during the coming season, instead of one as last season. The steamer Missouri will leave Chicago Saturday, April 22 on her first trip of the season, and after June 1st will make two trips a week. Schedules of the Manitou and Puritan are not changed.

Showing a complete reversal from their former opinion, voters of Charlevoix School District No. 1, city and township, passed the $125,000 bond issue for a new grade school and gymnasium last Thursday, in a special election. School students expressed their approval by ringing the school bell loud and long. The sign on the Pennsylvania station at Clarion, one time prosperous mill town south of Petoskey, has been changed to Walloon Lake, to serve that rapidly growing resort rather than the former well known milling community of Clarion. Five or six saw mills, a three-story hotel building, barber shop, churches, feed and grocery stores, school, have all vanished. Fires have taken their toll of the village, though some of the better built homes still stand. Victory Gardens Require Careful Planning and Management

In last week's issue we discussed the preparation of the seed bed and the use of manures. This week as we near the time of planting, perhaps, it is very necessary to purchase our seed. As we think about purchasing seed we should get varieties that are recommended and which from past experience have been known to give satisfactory results. Fortunately for the home gardener the Michigan State college is offering the following recommended varieties. This does not necessarily mean that other varieties are not satisfactory but these are perhaps the better ones to consider:

Asparagus—Mary Washington.

Beans—Green: Stringless green pod, tendergreen, refugee (late for canning). Wax: pencil pod black wax, round pod kidney wax. Lima: Henderson bush (small seed), Fordhook (large seed).

Beets—Early wonder (early), Detroit dark red (main crop)

Broccoli—Italian green sprouting.

Brussels Sprouts—Long Island improved.

Cabbage—Early: golden acre, Copenhagen market, resistant Detroit (yellows resistent). Mid-season: mid-season market, Marion market (yellows resistant). Late: Hollander or Danish ballhead. Wisconsin No. 8 or Wisconsin ballhead (yellows resistent). Savoy: chieftain. Red: mammoth red rock.

Carrot—Red cored Chantenay, Morses bunching, Nantes or coreless.

Cauliflower — Snowball, snowdrift or white mountain.

In view of the scarcity of some types of seed and the probability of price increase it certainly would be good wisdom to purchase your seed immediately. Kindly bear in mind that your local seed dealer has purchased his seeds in sufficient quantities to take care of the prospective needs. In some localities in the county different groups are selling seeds delivered to your door. The big thing to remember is to be wise and have your seeds well ahead of the time they are needed.

One other detail you should not neglect is to use liberal quantities of manure and the proper quantities of commercial fertilizer to be used as a supplement to manure. A ready mixed fertilizer carrying 4% nitrogen, 16% phosphoric acid, and 4% to 8% potash is satisfactory for the average garden. The rest of the application may vary from one to four pounds to each 100 sq. feet of ground. The fertilizer should be applied after the ground is plowed or spaded and before the seeds are planted. It should be thoroughly and evenly mixed with the soil and worked as much as possible into the moist soil. This year it may not be possible to get just the analysis you desire but certainly purchase one that closely approaches the above recommendation.

Home Extension Leaders Completing Home Furnishing Project

The home furnishing project carried on by 13 groups is rapidly drawing to a close. The last lesson was given by Miss Ruth Peck, extension specialist, last week. The last lesson certainly was greatly appreciated by the leaders as it was divided into three separate days in three different homes.

The first day the leaders from five different groups on the east end of the county met at the home of Mrs. William Petts and studied furniture arrangement. The living room was the main point under consideration. All factors in room arrangements were carefully scrutinized such as suitable pictures, proper color harmony, location of rugs and arrangement of furniture. The second meeting was at the home of Mrs. Rowley Williams, Charlevoix, attended by the leaders from four communities and the last discussion was held at the home of Mrs. Charles Fett, with four groups carrying on the activity.

After carefully analyzing the suggestions and recommendations for the achievement day it was decided to hold this event at the East Jordan tourist park on June 18th to start with a potluck supper at 6:30. The main features of the program will be a summary of the project results by Miss Ruth Peck, games and recreational features, an address by Dr. Thelma Porter, of the Michigan State college and then moving pictures showing the London air-raids. Other interesting features will be added later but please keep in mind the date is June 18th and that the entire family is invited and urged to attend the supper and program.

Poultry Meeting Wednesday and Thursday, April 22-23

The increased production of eggs and the increased numbers of laying stock has been noted throughout the county. Poultrymen generally have responded to the requests of the agricultural adjustment administration in increasing the output of eggs. It is felt that a good share of this increase is due to better feeding and better management of poultry. At this time of the year a person is caring for baby chicks in preparation for next winter's laying program.

To discuss the latest poultry information and practices that can be recommended for greater returns we are glad to announce that J. M. Moore, extension specialist in poultry, Michigan State college, has been secured to appear at four meetings. The first meeting will be held in connection with the Boyne Falls agricultural day program at the Boyne Falls high school on Wednesday, April 22nd, beginning at 11:00 (standard time). The evening session on Wednesday will be held in the Boyne City high school agricultural room at 8:00 (war time). During the past two months a group of interested poultrymen have been attending a series of ten meetings on poultry.

The afternoon meeting Thursday, April 23rd will be held in the city building, Charlevoix, downstairs at 2:00 p. m. (war time). The Thursday evening session will be conducted in the East Jordan high school agricultural room beginning at 8:00 (war time) and will be in connection with the series of night classes.

It is hoped that all farmers interested in poultry will attend their nearest meeting. Certainly it is always in order to receive the latest information and recommendations that are available in any line of farming operations. Kindly bring any poultry problems you may have with you and be sure to have them discussed at these four meetings. Remember to mark your calendar right now for your nearest meeting and be ready for a real discussion.

goodness flag raising ceremony each day. Whether you've been on hand to observe it or not, this patriotic gesture, sponsored by the American Legion and inaugurated a week ago Monday, is held at East Park. Joe Howard, harbor master, fires the cannon salute, L. W. Nicholson blows colors in the morning and retreat in the evening, Leo Allard, street commissioner, raises and lowers the flag. The morning ceremony occurs at 8 o'clock, the evening ceremony at sundown.

Smelt fishermen are having their inning now. The "run" is on in full swing, they say, in Loeb, Miller, Wood, Stover, McGeagh, Susan and Inwood creeks. The limit possible is how many a fellow wants to take home, but in case you haven't been out and are figuring on going, don't forget your 1942 fishing license.

Another thing on the "don't forget" list is the Pythian entertainment Friday night at the school gym. A lot of fun is in store, I'm told, and then, everyone should get out and see who the honor students of C. H. S. are.

FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

Garden Work to Do Now

Bird houses should be cleaned out now, if this has not been done. Some of the early arrivals are already looking for nesting sites.

Cannas may be started into growth indoors to be set out later.

Carrots may be planted outdoors in sections where the soil is ready to work. The same is true of beets.

Sweet peas should be planted outdoors as soon as the ground can be worked or started indoors in small pots.

Continue turning house plants growing on window sills so that they do not become one-sided at this time of year.

Pansy plants may be set out whenever the soil is ready. They make excellent companions for many spring bulbs.

Refrain from severe pruning of maples now, because of the bleeding which would take place after a major operation.

Do not attempt to "iron out" the bumps in a lawn with a roller. Raise the sod and remove enough of the soil beneath it to bring it down to the proper level.

Climbing roses that have been laid down for the winter may be tied up now. Choose a cloudy, windless day so that the stems will not dry out too rapidly.

Be careful not to cut off the emerging shoots of lilies in the course of early hoeing. Protect the shoots of eremurus on frosty nights by covering with boxes or fruit baskets.

Remove some of the leaves around spring bulbs so that they may come up more readily and not become disfigured by too heavy a mulch. Remove the rest later.

When raking up the lawn in spring do not scratch too deeply or vigorously so as not to pull the grass out. Broom rakes are safer and more effective than the regular steel garden rakes.

Economical cold frames may be fashioned from boards and covered with one of the new improved glass substitutes. These are far more satisfactory than the earlier ones and should also last much longer.

Lilacs may still be sprayed with lime sulphur to control oyster shell scale. Whenever possible, try to keep the spray off white-painted buildings.

BRADLEY AVERS SOO LOCKS WELL GUARDED

Tells of Defense Preparation Before Petoskey Audience

"The Soo locks are most heavily fortified spot in the United States," Congressman Fred Bradley declared at a public meeting held in the Hotel Perry last evening.

"Six weeks ago the Soo was a pushover," the congressman said. "But now the picture is entirely changed. I believe it is next to impossible for the enemy to hurt the locks. Unless planes are based on land, nearby, I believe it would be impossible for them to get thru to the locks. Certainly they couldn't if they tried to operate from carriers at a great distance."

Replying to a question regarding the stationing of negro troops at the Soo, Rep. Bradley declared the negro contingent was sent there because it was the best anti-aircraft unit available.

"The people at the Soo are now very well satisfied with arrangements made by the army for the defense of the locks," Rep. Bradley declared. "Those locks must be protected. When you remember that 90 per cent of a tank comes through the Soo locks as iron ore, it is easy to realize the great strategic value of the locks."

Rep. Bradley said the government has never told the entire story of the Jap attack on Pearl Harbor. He declared that after the attack seven U. S. battleships rested on the bottom. Later in his address the congressman said that not all had been sunk by Japs. Some were settled on the bottom by U. S. orders so that they would be more easily recovered. Two of the battleships were definitely put out of commission and cannot be placed in service again, he said. The other five have been re-commissioned or will be shortly, he asserted.

The success of Hitler's spring drive for oil supplies in Iraq and the Caucasus will play a large part in determining the length of the war, Rep. Bradley said. If Hitler's drive is successful in obtaining much needed oil supplies, a war of from five to 10 years is seen by experts, the congressman declared. —Petoskey Evening News.

PROSECUTOR RELEASES STATEMENT ON RECALL

Says Legality Petitions a Matter for Courts to Decide

Norman D. Ance, prosecuting attorney, of whom Fenton R. Bulow, county clerk, has requested an opinion regarding the legal sufficiency of the headings on the petitions filed for the recall of the county road commissioners, has issued an opinion that it is not the duty of the county clerk to weigh or determine the sufficiency of the reasons stated in the petitions as a basis of demanding a recall election.

That is, that as long as the statutory form of the heading is complied with the reasons stated are not to be considered by the county clerk. That the county clerk's duties regarding the petitions are ministerial, that he is to determine if there are enough proper signatures to the petitions and properly certified and if there are it is his duty to call an election.

The Supreme Court has determined that the sufficiency of the reasons for recall stated in the petitions can only be challenged by a suit brought in a proper court by an interested elector, therefore Mr. Ance, in his opinion, made it clear that he was not passing one way or another on that question.

Mr. Bulow has determined that there are a sufficient number of signatures upon the petitions and is proceeding to call an election, according to the statute, tentatively for May 25.

Fire Destroys Chicks

KIWANIS NOTES

At its weekly meeting Tuesday evening at the I. O. O. F. hall, the Kiwanis Club and several guests enjoyed numbers sung by the Barber Shop quartette consisting of Dr. D. C. Nettleton, Dr. G. B. Saltonstall, Rev. Donald Evans and Charles Hamlin.

Following this, Harley Ochs, program chairman, presented W. F. Meyer, who was to report on his recent travels in the southland. But Bill went back thirty years into the historic period of Charlevoix's conveyances and revealed the inside story of his first trip to Florida. Told with rare humor, the condition of the highways, the great use of first or second gears, the ingenuity displayed under breakdown conditions and the week involved in actual movement or stationary wishfulness, gave listeners a chance to appreciate, for the time being, at least, the modern development in rapid transportation.

The WAR and Your AUTOMOBILE

From your radio and your newspapers you have been made familiar with the restrictions placed on Automobile Dealers and the difficulties we have ahead of us for duration of the war.

During the past years we have been your dealer and it is our intention to carry on in the same capacity until such time as restrictions or lack of business prohibits our operation.

RESTRICTION IS a government matter, but LACK OF BUSINESS is a matter concerning you and your car.

We carry thousands of dollars worth of Repair Parts and Accessories for your car in addition to special machinery and Experienced Mechanics to do the work on it. In order to make all of this practical and worthwhile, we of course must have your cooperation. In other words, we need you to make our future existence possible and you need us to keep your car running. You may feel that it is easier for you to run in to the corner gas station for your OIL CHANGES, LUBRICATION, WASHES, POLISHES and MINOR REPAIR WORK even though it costs you the same as we charge you, but when you do this, you are lessening our chances of staying open. You may say to yourself, why should I be concerned as to whether he stays open or not? Here is the answer:

If we go out of business, it would be impossible for the factory to secure another dealer in our place until the war is over, because no individual in his right mind would think of making an investment in a dealership with the LOSSES that's ahead for our kind of a business. This means if something happened to your car, you would be unable to secure Repair Parts without experiencing delays of weeks and possibly months, as gas stations and small repair shops do not carry these items. When you bought your car, one of the main things you were interested in was that the Dealer was equipped to give you the kind of SERVICE you wanted when you needed it. From now on you are going to need us more than ever as your present car must be kept going. A new one will not be possible until all of this is over with.

Our places are as close to you as your phone. CALL AND WE WILL DO THE REST.

'42 TROUT SEASON OPENING SATURDAY

ANGLERS TO OPERATE UNDER NEW CREEL LIMIT

Seven Inch Length and 15 Daily Take Same, But Law Limits Catch, 10 Pounds, 1 Fish

Michigan's trout fishing season opens Satnrday, April 25th, nnd runs through Labor Day, providing one of the longest seasons on record.

Anglers this year will operate nnder a new creel law. While the minimum size of brook, brown and rainbow trout will remain at seven inches with n 15 daily limit, no fisherman will be allowed to take more than 10 pounds of fish in a single day plus one extra fish of any size above seven inches. This provision will call for weighing scales as a part of the fishermnn's equipment unless he is good at guessing weights or is certain he won't take 10 pounds of fish from any stream he fishes.

This law will cut down the ereeling of several large fish or a number equal to the legal limit, which some anglers have done in the past in good rainbow and brown trout waters. But the law will not have any great effect on brook trout for most of the catches if they reach the 15 limit would be well under 10 pounds.

There have been some changes in the list of trout lakes which also open April 25. Fishermen will find the new list in the digest of the 1942 fishing laws furnished with each license. It is illegal to use a gaff hook on any trout streams this year nor can they even be in possession on trout waters.

VICTORY GARDEN PLAN MET WITH ENTHUSIASM

City Cooperates by Plowing Plots; Information on Available Land Is Compiled In Canvass

The fact that Chnrlevoixnns have responded with enthusissm to nid the nation's war effort by planting "Victory Gardens" is indicated by a survey just completed.

Cooperating with Wyatt Wilson, member of the County 4-H Club Council, members of the Chnrlevoix Garden Club volunteered to conduct a canvass of the city to determine those planning a garden, those in need of garden plots, those having large plots they were willing to share with others, etc.

This information is compiled at the city superintendent's office and those desiring land for a garden may apply there. SUIT FILED HALTS RECALL ELECTION

PETITION FOR RESTRAINING WRIT FILED TUESDAY

Action Filed by William K. Straw, Road Commissioner; Hearing Is Set for April 29th

A petition for writ of mandamus was filed Tuesday in behalf of William K. Straw, member of the Charlevoix county road commission, asking that County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow be restrained from calling a recall election for Straw, ns well as Samuel E. Rogers and William F. Tindall, other commission members.

Recall of commission members is demanded in petitions filed with County Clerk Bulow on March 30 by William Tryon, county CIO organizer.

An order to show cause why the writ of mandamus should not be granted was issued by Hon. Parn C. Gilbert, circuit judge of the 13th judicial district, who set the hearing for Wednesday, April 29.

Rollie L. Lewis, counsel for the road commission, stated commission members have raised nine points in which they claim the recall petitions to be faulty. Snme of these alleged points are insufficient signatures of certified electors; fnilure to signify name of plaintiff (Mr. Straw) properly in petitions; erroneous designation of office held by plaintiff; filing of petitions for recall of three commissioners as n single petition, prejudicing right of plaintiff as such officer under the statutes; failure to state facts constituting malfeasance, mis-feasnnce or non-feasnnce as chnrged.

Date for the recall election had been tentatively set by the county election commission for May 25th nnd futuro action will be governed by results of the suit instituted Tuesdsy.

AIR RAID SCHOOL THURSDAY NIGHT

MARKS FIRST STEP TO ORGANIZE CITY PROTECTION

Movies at City Hall of Bomb and Fire Damage in London Will Show Need for Action

Air rnid training in Charlevoix, following a state and nation-wide pattern, will be instituted at a meeting scheduled nt 8 o'clock Thursday evening, April 23, in the community room of the city hall.

The initinl step will be the showing of movies of the bombing and resultnnt fires in London, England, proper handling of incendiary bombs and duties of air raid wardens—a story in picture designed to show citizens first the need, then the procedure to provide protection for themselves and their home in case of nir raids.

Clifford McKibbin, Jr., city superintendent, and Harry E. Bingham, high school principal, who last week received training at a district school conducted at Traverse City ns part of a state-wide plan sponsored by the State Department, American Legion, will be the instructors. They received their instructions under Rev. W. L. Cruthers, one of five men selected from the 11th Congressional district by the American Legion for training in air wnrden duties at a state school in Lansing.

Under present plans, 18 air raid wnrdens will be trained as leaders. The city will then be divided into six districts, each supervised by one senior and two junior wardens whose duties will be to instruct residents of their respective districts.

All citizens are invited and urged to attend this meeting.

EXTENSIVE CAMPAIGN FOR SCRAP METAL ON

Government Collection Trucks Are Available Upon Call

Three hundred thousand farmers this week received letters from Donald M. Nelson, director of the war production board, asking for co-operation in the federal farm salvage pickup plan.

Recognizing the need for salvage from farms and rural areas, the state salvage committee of the Michigan Council of Defense and the war production board launched the intensive drive to induce every farmer to sell or donate bndly needed scrap steel und rubber to keep the wnr production wheels turning.

Government collection trucks will visit farms on receipt in the WPB office of n return postcard which was included in the letter from Mr. Nelson. Each truck will be equipped with n scales to weigh material up to 300 pounds. Other material will be tagged at the farm and later weighed up on larger scales in or near one of the 63 rural collection centers established by the WPA.

FOREST FIRE MEN RETURN TO DUTY

PERMITS NEEDED TO START FIRES IN DISTRICT

Conservation Office Issues Appeal for Conperation to Protect Timber Resources of State

The forest fire organization for conservation district 8, is now on duty. District 8, with headquarters office at Boyne City, includes Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan, Otsego and Antrim counties.

Persons wishing to burn brush, grass or rubbish must obtain permits nnw from the nearest fire warden, towerman, or conservation officer before the burning is done. The issuance of burning permits will, however, be highly restricted during the 1942 fire season and the burning permit law will be strictly nnd impartially enforced.

In past years some leniency has been shown in regard to burning without a permit or having fires get out of control, when it was found due strictly to carelessness rather than intent, but no such leniency will be shown this year.

This year due to the loss of CCC camps and the shortage of civilian man power in northern areas to combat fires, the starting of any fire becomes a vital matter.

State law prohibits the setting of any fire near or in any wood or grass lands without a permit from the department of conservation. These permits are readily obtainable from the nearest representative of the department, except that the department will reserve the right to refuse such permits on any day when there is a great danger of a fire spreading.

Howard North and Ruth Edwards First Students to Receive Medals Five Consecutive Years

Knights of Pythias presented honor awards to Charlevoix high school students Friday night at the gymnasium, following a "Basketball Frolic" in which several of the Knights participated. This marked the fifth successive year the awards have been presented.

Two teams of high school girls played the preliminary game. Main event was a game between the Rinkeydinks, all boys under 14 years of age, and a team made up of K. P.'s over 40 years. Clarence and Charles Heise, in costume of Red Cross nurses, ministered to the wounded; Five husky cheerleaders in brief red and white outfits led yells for the Pythian team.

Honor awards were presented by Dan Geneit, past Chancellor Commander, to high school students who maintained a "B" semester average or better in each course, including citizenship, for the last two semesters of enrollment. Those receiving awards were as follows:

BOY SCOUTS ABANDONING PAPER COLLECTING

Last Pick-Up Is Scheduled for Saturday, April 25th

Scoutmaster E. D. Hawley announced today that Saturday, April 25th, would conclude the waste paper collection campaign conducted by Boy Scouts during the winter.

Difficulty in obtaining trucks for pick-up work, nppronch of the summer season demanding time of the Scouts in employment nnd pending necessity for acquiring new storage quarters were given as principal reasons for abandonment of the campaign.

Mr. Hawley stated that due to the great need for saving waste paper under existing wartime conditions, it would be desirable if some other organization could carry on the work.

Sugar hoarders can't sweeten up Uncle Sam.

When the consumer registration period nrrives in Michigan May 4 to 7, each family will be required to declare the amount of sugar stocks on hand. Failure to declare the accurate nmount will make a citizen liable, upon conviction, to a fine of $10,000 to 10 years' imprisonment, or both.

How the hoarding penalty will work is one of the questions a lot of Michigan people would like to have answered. There are reports of persons who have hoarded as much as 1,000 pounds of sugar, an amount which would be sufficient according to government rntioning to meet the needs of a family of four persons for nearly 10 years!

A family of four will be permitted to use four pounds every two weeks. The maximum stock per home is six pounds.

All retailers and wholesalers must register at a local public high school April 28-29, and sugar sales will cease April 27 to May 5 or 6.

Transportation, not scarcity of sugar, is said by the government to be the determining factor for sugnr rationing at this time.

Sinking of freight ships by enemy submarines, plus a grnwing need to limit railroads to war shipments, are responsible for n shortnge of supply.

Rationing of automobile tires, whether new tires or recapped used tires, has not pinched the average family in Michigan yet. However, according to the best advice nvailable at Lansing, only a miracle discovery by some chemist will save Michigan workers—farmers, industrial workers—from severe transportntion hardship by 1943 and 1944.

New tires can now be obtained only by a very restricted group of persons, and the quota for each county is so small each month that few persons have the courage to file nn application. You must be a physician, a police officer, fire-

The Difference

They say a farmer is a man who makes his money on a farm and spends it in town, while an agriculturist makes his money in town and spends it on a farm.

This may be true—and it may not, but OUR business is banking, and we try to have an up-to-date banking service for farmers, agriculturists, merchants, stockmen and everybody in the community. The more our business grows, the better the service we have to offer.

AT THE MOVIES

"All That Money Can Buy"

Interweaving a striking commentary on Americanism with its whimsical story of a man who sold his soul to the devil and got it back again, "All That Money Can Buy," based on the Stephen Vincent Benet story, "The Devil and Daniel Webster," comes to the screen of the Palace Theatre next Saturday and Sunday, April 25-26 with the advance reputation of being one of the most memorable films of recent years.

Edward Arnold and Walter Huston share top honors in the RKO Radio picture version of Stephen Vincent Benet's remarkable story with Anne Shirley and James Craig in the romantic leads and Jane Darwell, Simone Simon, Gene Lockhart and John Qualen in the other featured roles.

The action is laid in the 1840's in a New Hampshire community. Jabez Stone, a young and newly-married farmer, discouraged with his continuel bad luck, unexpectedly encounters The Devil, locally known as Mr. Scratch. Mr. Scratch agrees to give Jabez everything that money can buy for the next seven years in return for his soul.

This is the beginning of the young farmer's financial progress. A protege of Mr. Scratch's, Belle, wins him oway from his wife.

But as the seven-year period draws to an end, Jnbez begins to worry about his bargain. In despair, he appeals to his wife, and she lays the case before Daniel Webster. Webster demands a jury trial and Mr. Scratch summons up the jury: Benedict Arnold, Simon Girty, Captain Kidd and others of their ilk — traitors, murderers, scoundrels, all. Webster makes an impassioned plea in behalf of Jabez and so moves the jurymen that they tear up the contract and acquit Jabez, who hastens to make amends for his past.

Lupe and Errol, "Spitfire" Team, Hilarious Again

Big business plays the role of bogey-man in the marital affairs of Carmelita, the Mexican spitfire, when her husband forgets their first wedding anniversary for a million dollar deal.

Hubby's oversight starts the laugh-complications on their merry, tangled way in "Mexican Spitfire Out West," coming to the Palace screen Wednesday and Thursday, April 29-30, starring Lupe Velez and Leon Errol in the third of the series concerned with the escapades of Carmelita, her husband, and Uncle Matt.

Uncle Matt is one of four characters portrayed by Leon Errol in the picture. He also plays the eccentric and dash-it-all Lord Epping, British whiskey baron, and upon various occasions the plot requires Errol to play Uncle Matt giving an impersonation of Lord Epping, and also Lord Epping's cockney valet, Higgins.

Army Recommends Chiropractors

DETROIT (MCP)—The efforts of chiropractors in the United States to obtain recognition of their profession by the nation's armed forces appears to have gained a measure of official support. An army bulletin just issued recommends the classification of chiropractors as physicians important to the welfare of military personnel.

The movement for recognition began several years ago when chiropractors, at the behest of veteran's organizations, sought the right to care for disabled veterans in government hospitals.

Prominent in the movement are several Michigan chiropractors including Dr. F. O. Logic, of Iron Mountain, Michigan, who as head of the Chiropractic Ex-servicemen's League, has been an important figure in the action which has led to this success.

4-H ACHIEVEMENT WAS FINE EVENT

CAPACITY DISPLAYS SHOWN AT BOYNE CITY

Honor Club Members Named Following Completion of Projects by Various Groups

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

The 4-H Club spring achievement day held in the Boyne City gymnasium last Friday, April 17 was enjoyed by a large attendance from all sections of the county.

The exhibits took up all space available on the gymnasium floor. Clothing displays of East Jordan and Boyne Falls schools were the largest, with close to 25 individuals in each of the two clubs. Dresses included sports wear, school dresses, wool garments and two formals. The handicraft articles were featured by several beautifully constructed dressers, chests, vanities and other high quality articles. From the Boyne Falls school was shown an average size boat.

Perhaps the most enjoyable feature of the afternoon program was the dress revue, in which some 100 girls participated, each wearing the dress she had personally made as one of the requirements of the project. The revue was divided into three different classes: cotton, sports, and wool and party dresses.

Another feature was the citizenship program which closed the afternoon activity. A group of some twenty members, each holding a small American flag and dressed in the club colors of white and green, marched from the back of the auditorium to the stage. The speaking parts were handled by four club members and two leaders, namely, Victor Cilkie and Leslie Siedell of Boyne Falls; Patricia Sinclair, Enst Jordan; Marjorie Hnir, Murray school; Elvin Leckrone, Horton Bay leader; and Mrs. Anno Warner, Marion Center leader. These members and leaders very briefly outlined the objectives and responsibilities of 4-H club members. This made a very appropriate ending for the day's activity.

The afternoon program started promptly at 1:15 with several musical numbers played by the high school orchestra under the direction of Mr. McGillivray, band leader. Invocation was given by John R. Wyngarden, Presbyterian minister. Then came the dress revue which certainly was the biggest hit of the program. Following this, the address of welcome was given by George Hemingway, Boyne City, who has long been greatly interested in the development and progress of our young folks throughout the county. Response was extended by Jean Black, Marion Center, who splendidly thanked all the cities and leaders who have made the 4-H club program such a success. Next several musical numbers were given by a brass trio, a group of three young boys from the Boyne City band.

Miss Lois Corbett, assistant state club leader, spoke briefly concerning 4-H club work and in conclusion named club members placed on the county honor roll. Ralph May, also assistant state club leader, spoke in behalf of the boys and the wonderful work accomplished in their projects. Members placed on the honor roll were announced and presented.

In the competition the outstanding club members were placed on the county honor roll from which the delegates for the Gaylord Club Camp will be selected. In the handicraft projects the following were the recipients of the awards:

Gibbons freed himself from the skylight and, heedless of his lacerated leg, returned to duty at the wheel. Richard kept the wheel with him, and since Peter was useless he sent Mat Forbes to clear the wreckage forward. Holding a precarious footing against the pressure of the screaming wind, Mat cut away the topgallantmast and let it go overside; and under his driving, men secured the fragment of the topmast to stop its hanging, and caught the tangled web of rigging and controlled it with many lashings. The reefed foresail began to draw again, they got other useful rags of canvas on her; and an hour after that great sea, Richard went below to reassure Mary, he had the Venturer in hand. In that hour the gale, having done its worst for their destruction, had somewhat relented. The pressure of the wind began to ease, and before daylight, though the seas still were mountainous, the immediate danger was over.

Later that day they dropped anchor in a large bay which Peter identified as Hoakes Bay. Here Richard planned to repair the Venturer.

Next morning after breakfast was served, Richard was asleep, and Peter did not wake him. "We're better off if he stays asleep," he said harshly. "He'll wreck us before he's through. He's crazy!" Weariness was on them all, crushing them; and after they had eaten, and after Mary had warmed George's bed with hot water in the jugs again, they all slept. It was midafternoon before Richard roused, and waked others, and the work of repairing damage began.

They lay three days in Hoakes Bay; and most of the time the wind held steady and boisterously strong, and the cold ate into them deadeningly. But on the second day the sun shone fitfully between spats of rain; and when George saw the sun in his cabin window, he wished to go on deck. Mary and Tommy helped him up the companionway; and on her arm he moved out of the shade of the after house forward into the open waist of the ship. Mary saw one of the ship's boats on its way to the shore; and when Isaiah joined them, Mary asked where the men were going.

"Mate's gone to get some fresh meat," he said, "and to look for a chance to fill our water casks. Island's full of wild hogs, thin as a deer, not a mite of fat on 'em anywhere. You'd think you was eating veal. Real sweet meat.

"You've been here before?"

His Adam's apple pumped violently. "Well, you might say! I've heard my pa tell about it, too. It used to be there was a lot of ships come here for seals, skins and blubber and the like. They don't come so much now. Not seals enough to pay you for the trouble, nor whales either." He peered off across the water through narrowed eyes.

George, looking at the green slopes rising from the water, the brown-flanked mountains to the east, said: "It's all forest, isn't it?"

Isaiah shook his head. "That's tussock grass you're looking at. It grows ten-twelve feet tall, and from here it looks like trees for a fact, but it ain't. There ain't no trees to mention, just vines and bushes.

Corkran stopped for a moment and spoke to George. "Reverence, you'll be needing sun on you, and warm days again to set you right."

"I'll be fine, yes," George assented. "Caught a little cold, that's all; started me coughing again." Mary, watching Corkran, saw the solicitude in his eyes. Then he turned to her, cheerful, smiling boldly.

"Himself here, you and the sun are the medicine he needs," he said. "He has you, anyway."

She felt as she often did with Corkran something unspoken pass between him and her; she thought incredulously that somehow he had guessed her secret and Richard's—which George must never know. "He'll always have me," she said simply. "All of me. All my life." Her eyes met Corkran's fairly.

"Aye," he said. "You're fine." Mat Forbes summoned him. George looked after the sailor as he moved away.

"You know, Mary, Corkran likes me."

"I know."

"I think he's the first man who ever liked me." Her hand lay in his arm. "I value his liking me; and yet by all the tests I know, he's a graceless, sinful man." He smiled at himself, at his own inconsistency.

At dinner next day Richard said they would be ready to depart by evening if the wind served. "We might have to wait," he admitted. "It'll need to come some easterly to help us out of the Bay." He was sending both the remaining boats ashore to fill the casks from a pond the men had found not far from the beach; and he and Peter would take one of the guns from the cabin to try for geese as an addition to their stores.

When a little later the boats were gone, the Venturer was almost deserted.

Mary became conscious as the afternoon drew on of a change in the wind, and looked out through the small square window above the bunk and saw that the ship had swung so that the southern shores of the bay instead of the northern were now on that starboard side. Richard had said an easterly wind would favor their departure from Hoakes Bay, and she thought with a lift of spirits that they would depart tonight, as soon as the boats returned. When after a while she heard the first boat bump the ship's side, something in her quickened. She would be glad to be away, glad to come north out of this rotting cold and be warm again.

She heard feet on deck, and listened for Richard's voice. She heard Peter giving orders; then the creak of the windlass as the first cask of water was swung aboard. Someone came down the companion into the after cabin, and she thought it was Richard, and wondered whether he would come to the door here to speak to them.

Richard was coming into the main cabin now, passing the head of the table. She heard his steps, and looked through the door and saw not Richard but Peter. Peter went into the cabin which he and Mat Forbes shared; and after a minute or two he came out with his arms full of his belongings and carried them through the door into the common room aft. Into Richard's cabin!

She stared after him and her heart began to pound. She rose, and George waked and asked quickly:

"What is it, Mary? Don't leave me."

She nodded in submission, yet she stood in the door, waiting for Peter to appear again. Why was he in Richard's cabin? She could hear the sounds of his movement there. She began to tremble, not now with cold. She wished to call to Peter, and her lips were dry and her throat ached. Then he appeared.

He did not speak. She forced herself to do so. She asked:

"Peter—where's Richard?"

He shook his head, not in negation, but in a sort of submission. He said: "Mary—Richard's dead."

Mary for a moment could not move. She heard herself whispering monotonously: "No. No. No." She knew she was shaking her head in a gesture of denial, a refusal to believe. Richard could not be dead. He had been so alive. So much in him had spoken deeply and clearly to so much in her, even when no words passed between them, nor even any glances. She braced her hands against the sides of the door, looking at Peter. She stood there, shaking her head like one whose mind is adrift, whispering, muttering: "No, Peter. No, he isn't. He can't be."

But Peter told her soberly: "He is, Mary."

Mary insisted, stupidly reiterant: "Peter, he's alive."

He said, angrily resenting her refusal to accept his word: "Don't talk like a fool. I tell you he's dead!" Why should Peter be angry because she could not believe this impossible thing?

She forced herself to listen to what Peter said when he now began to relate what had happened, telling George, while the others listened. Peter said they set the men to fill the casks, and then he and Richard went around the pond, because there were geese on the other side. But the geese rose and flew up, and settled again up there into what must be another pond; and he and Richard decided to follow the birds and try for a shot, and he called Gee, the Negro, to come along and carry their game. Peter had the gun, loaded with bird shot. They came into tussock grass, at first short but later higher than their heads. They worked their way into it, Richard leading, then Peter, then Gee behind. The grass was so luxuriant and so high that when they were six feet apart they were hidden from one another.

Peter said they came out at last on an open hillside grown with berry bushes. They saw the pond on the saddle of the ridge and a great flock of geese in the pond.

"I would have to crawl to get near enough to shoot," Peter said, explaining to them as they listened without speech, Isaiah and Hiram in the door with Corkran behind them, George and Mary at the table. Tommy Hanline had come to stand behind Peter, tears streaking his cheeks. Once when Mary looked at Corkran she saw that he was watching George, in an intent and searching fashion.

Peter went on with his story of his brother's death.

"I'd have to crawl," he said, "on my hands and knees. Richard and Gee stayed where they were, so's not to scare the birds. I crawled within shot range and waited till they lined up good, and shot. Some were dead, and some of them flapping on the water. The others flew away.

"I stood up and yelled, and Gee came running. We chased the wounded geese in the shallow water, and caught some, till we had eight.

"Then I asked Gee where Richard was. He said Richard had gone down to the beach. I went along the top of the cliff looking for him, and finally I saw him. There was a point of rocks running out into the water, and he was sneaking toward the point as if he was trying to cut something off from the water. I thought it might be seals, but I couldn't see them.

"I saw him start to run, and then I saw them coming toward the water, galloping on their flippers the way they do; but they were sea lions, bigger than seals, some of them ten or twelve feet long. Dick got in the way of them and he hit at one with his club. It snapped at him. I was too far away to see just what happened, but they have long tusks, teeth like a dog's, only longer. It must have sunk the tusks into his hand; and it just galloped on, dragging Richard with it, into the water."

"I think one of the tusks stuck in his wrist somehow; maybe wedged between the bones, or hooked into the tendons. He was jerked off his feet, couldn't do anything. It dragged him into the water, and they went under together. The place was boiling with them, dozens of them, like a school of mackerel. They churned it into foam like milk. Even from up where I was, I couldn't see down into it.

"I stayed there, running up and down the beach, shouting and yelling like a crazy man, but I never saw him again."

CHAPTER XVII

"He can't be." Mary realized she had spoken aloud, for their eyes turned to her. "Richard can't be dead, Peter."

He stood up angrily. "I tell you he is."

"We can go back and find him. Please!"

Peter's face darkened, but he spoke without heat, understandingly. "I'm sorry, Mary. I know how you always felt about Richard. But I feel worse than anyone. He was my brother, wasn't he?" He looked around at them all; he cried, as if their eyes accused him: "Blast it, I couldn't do anything! I tell you he's dead!" No one spoke. He came to his feet, strongly. "I want to get away from here. This easterly's what we need to get out of the Bay. We might not get another for weeks. We're leaving!"

No one denied him.

Peter said, his tone placating: "Corkran, come on deck. I want a word with you." Without waiting for an assent, he turned abruptly into the after cabin. Corkran went through the steerage to ascend the companion ladder there.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS
By Ruth Edwards

The Girl Scouts wish to thank all of those people who have helped them make this cookie sale a success. We were quite amazed at the amount of cookies we have to deliver.

This week Troop 1 is having a formal meeting, at which time Davida Blake will be invested as a member. In order to become a member a girl must have completed her Tenderfoot requirements. Rev. Evans will assist the girls in group singing.

The troop committee is laboring over the camp situation. Shelter and leaders constitute the largest bottleneck. Any assistance will be more than welcome.

SUDDEN emergencies must be expected in wartime. The important thing is to be ready—to know what to do.

One of the first rules to fix in your mind is: Leave telephone lines as free as possible to speed the work of rescue and defense.

In black-outs—during air-raid alarms and other local emergencies—you add to public danger if you use your telephone needlessly. You may clog the lines and hinder the efforts of the fire-fighters, police and rescue squads.

In any time of public emergency, use your telephone only for vital messages.

WHILE AMERICA IS AT WAR

Help vital messages go through without delay by:

- Keeping telephone conversations short.
- Avoiding the busy hours — 10 A. M. to noon, 2 to 4 P. M.
- Answering your telephone promptly.
- Giving the number when placing Long Distance calls.

FEDERAL, STATE AID IN COUNTY OUTLINED

Total of $14,110.70 Expended for Assistance During March

During the month of March, a total of $14,110.70 was expended by state and federal governments for categorical relief in Charlevoix county, that is: old age assistance, aid to dependent children and nid to the blind. Funds for these forms of public assistance are specifically appropriated by the state legislature.

The Charlevoix County Bureau of Social Aid, under the supervision of William B. Lindsay, makes the necessary recommendations to the state office at Lansing for the aid given O.A.A., A.D.C. and A.B. clients. These recommendations are based on the investigations of a field staff at the time home calls are made. The March pay roll for old age assistance granted $10,008.90 to 596 recipients, or an average of $16.79 to each individual. Relief granted for aid to dependent children to 116 recipients totaled $3,952.00. Although this would average $34.07 a grant, it is not a fair picture of the aid given, as the family group in an A.D.C. grant may vary from one to as high as eight or ten. As in all forms of relief, A.D.C. assistance is based on the actual need in the household and controlled by state budgetary maximums. Aid to the blind recipients received a total of $149.20 in March or an average of $21.31 to each client.

Welfare assistance administered by the county bureaus of social aid throughout the state is under the jurisdiction of the State Bureau of Social Security which is regulated by Public Act No. 280 of the state of Michigan and the Federal Social Security Act. State plans for administering O.A.A., A.D.C. and A.B. must meet the requirements of the federal act to have a 50% participation from federal welfare funds, 5% of which allocated to administration costs.

Charlevoix county is controlled by a partially-integrated system, whereby the duties of the supervisor of the bureau of social aid and the director of the department of social welfare are combined into one position, thereby economizing at the executive head. Both offices are quartered in one building, resulting in a decrease in lights, fuel, office rent, and other overhead expenses.

Charlevoix county residents are invited to visit the welfare office at 305 Petoskey avenue, Charlevoix, to acquaint themselves with this organization.

STATE COLLEGE WORK PAYS STATE MILLIONS

Work on Insect Control One of the Largest Items Listed

Just in the control of insects a savings of $4,087,000 was affected in 1941 by Michigan farmers who followed suggestions of the extension service of Michigan State college.

On a dollar basis alone, the activities of the federal-state extension service in agriculture and home economics return manyfold the amount invested in the service annually by the state's taxpayers.

Proof of that is found in a summary completed recently on the activities in 1941 of such staff members as county agricultural agents, 4-H club agents, home demonstration agents and subject matter specialists on the college staff.

CONSERVATION OFFICER ED. DEUELL DIES

In Service of Michigan Conservation Department Since 1914

Ed. Deuell, veteran conservation officer of this district, died last Thursday at his home in Boyne City after an illness of almost a year.

Born June 16, 1872, at New Buffalo, Mich., Mr. Deuell came to Boyne City with his parents when he was a young boy. In 1894 he married Miss Kate Hausler, at Boyne Falls.

He joined the staff of the Michigan Department of Conservation in April, 1914, and remained in the department's service until ill health forced his retirement a year ago.

Surviving are the wife, a daughter, Helen; a brother, John, of Cadillac; and a sister, Mrs. Burdella McGeorge, of Boyne City.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. John Wyngarden at 2:30 Sunday afternoon, at the Presbyterian church in Boyne City. Members of the conservation department acted as pallbearers. Masonic burial rites were held at Maple Lawn cemetery, Boyne City.

FOREST FIRE MEN RETURN TO DUTY

Carelessness, thoughtlessness or attempts to evade the permit law this season will subject the offender to immediate prosecution.

During the past ten years forest fires have each year burned on an average of 36,000,000 acres in the United States. This is an area comparable in size to the entire state of Michigan. Each year thousands of dollars of valuable timber and other properties are destroyed.

Human carelessness is the cause of over 95 per cent of the fires that start and this number could therefore be prevented.

The country is at war. Michigan's natural resources, of which timber producing forests are no small part, are vital to our war production.

Do not sabotage our country's war effort by starting forest fires through your carelessness.

Be careful of fire at all times. Put out your matches, tobacco and campfires and help win the war.

Northern pike used in conservation department experiments at Drayton Plains Hatchery, though stunted at the end of their first summer because of lack of food, grew faster than their big brothers of the same age in the second season and very nearly caught up to them, when abundant food was made available for all.

THE HOME FRONT

Hisao Okumura, official Japanese spokesman, recently stated:

"We will not only command the communication lines of Britain and America, but we will enrry the war even to Wnshington and London. We must destroy their power. We must also destroy them politically and economically, and even culturally. We must rid ourselves of any trace of their culture—in its place our Nipponese spirit will dominate the world."

Amorica accepts the challenge, Hisao. Come take a look.

See that big building? That's the Willow Run bomber plant. Biggest single plant in the world. Cost 60 million bucks and then some. One hundred thousand men can work under one roof. Next month, the plant will be working, too, Hisao, building those ginnt bombers that will blast you and your kind to smithereens.

Just a year ngo, this was a soybenn patch, Hisao, with a peaceful little creek, named Willow Run, trickling down one edge. We like to be peaceful, Hisao, but you've got us riled up now.

Come on, Hisao, we've just started.

Here's a new 1942 model, put out by one of Detruit's automobile companies. Isn't she u beaut? Weighs 40 tons and you'd better not get in her way. I won't tell you how many of those we're turning out but that one plant is seven months ahead of schedule and has taken on a program to turn 'em out at three times the present rate.

Here's the next stop, Hisao. Honest, you wouldn't believe it but if you had visited this same spot just last July, you would have seen a big circus tent pitched right here, with side shows and elephants nnd clowns. We like circuses in Amerion, Hisao. We like to take the kids and laugh and have a good time. That's one of the things we are fighting for, Hisao. Thnt's the reason you can't whip us.

That circus will be back, Hisao. Maybe not next year. But it'll be back. You can bet your boots on that. It'll have to find a new field though. This one's kinda cluttered up, isn't it.

There are 7,000 men and women working in these buildings, Hisao. They're working on four different kinds of nirplane production. Our president hns nsked us for 60,000 airplanes in 1942, Hisao — and we're going to give 'em to him. He's not a dictator, Hisao. He's our leader!

You're talking about coming to Washington, Hisao. Here in this plant are a few little toys that'll be there to welcome you. They call them Bofars guns.

Sure, they're turning them out fast. They don't make all of the parts here in that one plant. Let me explain it to you. You see, there are two assembly lines. One is for the army and one is for the navy. There are nine other plants which are feeding parts for these guns into these assembly lines. These workmen just put the parts together and bingo, we got another little old welcomer for you.

We learned to do all this, Hisao, by making automnbiles, so people could drive out in the country and see the beauties of nature. Say, Hisao, did you ever loud the whole family into a flivver—kids, dogs and ull—and go to see your Aunt Minnie? I bet if you had, you wouldn't be doing all the nasty things which you are doing now—like you did at Pearl Harbor.

Come along, Hisao, I'll show you the navy arsenal, Ford's Rougo plant, Packard, Mnrray Body, Dodge, Plymouth, Pontiac, Oldsmobile and a few others in Michigan. What they're doing will throw a few million monkey wrenches into your infamous ambitions.

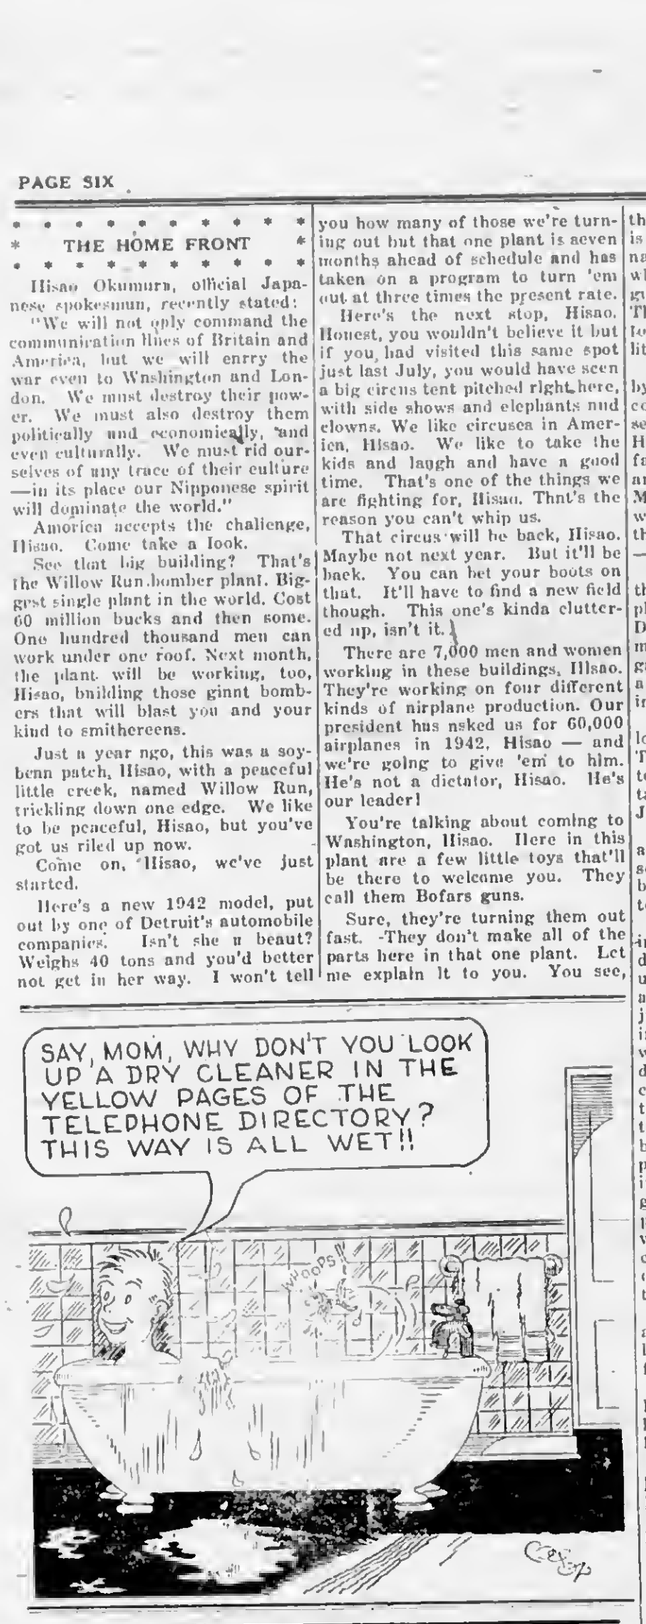
What's the matter Hisao, you look sick. Gosh, he's out cold! There are lots of things I wanted to show him, too. I wanted to take him by and see Mr. and Mrs. Joe Doakes.

You know this war against Hisno and Hirohito and Hitler and Mussolini isn't all being fought on the battle lines, or even in the big factories.

Joe Doakes and his wife are doing their share. They're buying defense stamps. They are cleaning up all the old papers, rubber, rags and metal and will sell it to the junk man, where it will be turned into bullets and guns and other war goods. Joe's an air raid warden and Mrs. Joe has taken a course in Red Cnss first aid. Joe takes his neighbors to work so they can save their tires. Their boy is in the army. They've got plenty to eat but they're not hoarding—sugar or anything else. Joe got n big laugh out of his new pants without any cuffs. But he wears them rather proudly to church on Sunday and when he dresses up to take Mrs. Joe to the movies.

They're not going nround bellyaching either because they can't buy that new electric refrigerator for which they had been saving.

Throw n bucket of water on Hisao and let's send him back home. Gosh, I don't know when I enjoyed a day so much.



From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

Every Friday night a bunch of us fellows get together over at Bill Webster'a place. We wouldn't miss those weekly get-togethera for anything.

There are seven in the group—Bill Webster, Judge Cunningham, Pete Swanson, Old Doc McGinnis the dentist, and young Doc Mitchell the M.D., the government man Bob Newcomb, and myself.

We don't play cards. We don't sing or carry on.

We just sit quietly and talk—and drink a glass or two of beer.

I guess we discuss just about everything under the sun—politics, business, family nffairs, music, farming, hunting, fishing, and what not.

But mostly we like to chew the fat about life's experience and a man's philosophy in these times.

To sort of help out the conversation, we've found mellow beer particularly relaxing. Every one of us likes the tangy taste of beer . . . and now and then Judge Cunningham insists on ale for everybody.

You mightn't think that just settin' and talkin' would be an much fun. But it is. Particularly when a man begins to get around to the age of reason. Like us.

And it's wonderful how a few glasses of good beer help bring out good talk and good senso when men get together. There's something peaceful and friendly and human about beer that brings out the best in a man.

They call beer the "beverage of moderation." That "moderation" idea is good philosophy . . . maybe that's why good beer and good fellowship go together so well.

Seems to me there ought to be more of this quiet talk over a glass of beer. It sure straightens out a man in his thinking.

Anyhow, men ought to get together and be friends. That's the way we were made. Why not try it more often—all of you?

FISH PLANTING POLICY IS RADICALLY CHANGED

Legal-Sized Trout to Be Released In Spring and Summer Months

Radically revising its policy on the stocking of hatchery-reared game fish in Michigan's inland waters, the state conservation commission has decided to limit planting of trout in streams to spring and summer months—up to August 15—and to rear as many trout to legal size as available funds permit.

The wartime need for conserving motor vehicles and tires and the increasing cost of hatchery fish food influenced the decision to change the planting policy now. Studies by the department's institute for fisheries research have demonstrnted that spring and summer plantings put several times as many fish in the angler's creel as do plantings at other seasons of the year.

Fall plantings of rainbow trout will continue in lakes and ponds, where they have been found effective. Fall plantings of brook trout in lakes will be tested by angling this coming season.

The movement townrd stocking fewer but larger fish will be applied also to the warm water fishes — black bass, bluegills, perch and pike, and state fisheries men will experiment with the rearing of walleyes and northern pike to fingerling size.

Further investigation to improve fisheries management in popular fishing lakes also will be pressed, the commission says.

DON'T wash dishes under the faucet. Use good sudsy water in a pan—with a rinse of hot water. It's healthier—and thriftier. Between-plates running water is wasted water and wasted money. Remember: water power is defense power.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

New Tax Proposals

While the congress for the past two weeks has been in recess, and many members have gone back to their districts, the house ways and means committee has been continuing henrings on the new tax proposals. Even though work and study in connection with the henrings and perfecting of the new bill will continue for probably two or three months in the house, after which the legislation, as passed, will go to the senate, it is to be remembered that both personal and business taxes will be made retroactive to January 1, 1942. Present indications are that the new law will increase our 1941 taxes at least twofold—and most members of the committee now lean toward a 5 per cent retail sales tax—with no exemptions.

Women's Army Auxiliary Corps

The bill to establish n voluntary Women's Army Auxiliary Corps passed the house March 17th, and is now on the senate calendar. Unquestionably it will pass. Had it not received army and administration support, it's defeat would have been effected in congress. The bill specifically states that the president and the secretary of war shall determine the number which can be enrolled, how many units can serve and where they shall be sent. It calls for training schools, uniforms, traveling allowances, compensation, etc. Whether the results will be worth the cost to the country, the future will prove. Many inquiries have been received as to enrollment procedure. To these may I state that when the bill becomes law, the secretary of war will issue complete information as to enrollment procedure. Until that time it is not possible to enroll in the corps.

New and Full Trial of Sea Otter Urged

A special sub-committee of the senate naval affairs committee recently announced that a new and full trial should be given to the Sea Otter, invented by Commander Hamilton V. Brynn. The report of the committee disclosed that the board of inspection and survey has found many advantages of this revolutionary type of ship. It is contended that this craft could be built on a mass production basis for trans-oceanic cargo service during the war. The report points out the following advantages:

1. Its propulsion machinery can be manufactured by the automotive industry, thus avoiding any confliction with the marine engines of the navy or maritime commission.

2. The ship, it is said, would not be an easy target for submarines because of its short length and low visibility.

3. Its standard design would permit rapid mass production.

4. Steel from strip mills may be utilized in its construction, thus not interfering with our shipbuilding steel requirements.

The report reads "the possibility of use of these small boats for convoy protection for small intercoastal tankers, or for inter-coastal trade, which would permit the release of larger craft for inter-ocean trade, would seem to justify the fullest explorative studies." Our war effort brings about the necessity of investigating all seemingly worthwhile inventions or new ideas submitted to our government.

A trial run of the Sea Otter, from Texas to South Carolina, was made last November. However, since then it has been tied up at Charleston with no further efforts having been made for its development.

Taxpayers Still Foot the Bill

A recent issue of the Washington News carried un interesting story on the transfer of the Physical Fitness Division (which, it will be remembered, still features coordinators of bowling, badminton, horseshoe-pitching, etc.) from the much talked of Office of Civilian Defense to the Federal Security Agency. The question arises, however, "where do the taxpayers come out on this deal?" The article states thnt this transfer recalls a story about Calvin Coolidge. He thought he made a great thrift record as president with his savings of paper clips and other small items. But President Hoover found one extravagance of the Coolidge administration which he could get along without. He abolished the White House stables and ordered the horses transferred across the Potomac to the Ft. Myer Cavalry Post. When Mr. Coolidge heard about it, he is said to have exclaimed — "Humph! Guess he thinks they'll eat less hay over there. "Yes, indeed, the taxpayers foot the bill in the long run whether these co-ordinators are retained under the O.C.D. or shifted to McNutt's Federal Security Agency.

Civil Service Examination Inquiries

Often constituents ask us to check their applications filed with either the Civil Service Commission here or with a government department. We are always glad to assist them in these matters. However, when writing kindly give full information as to the type of position for which application was made, ur examination written, date of application, complete name of examination and whether assembled or unassembled, where filed, and rating—if individual already received same. This will greatly assist in expediting a reply.

Capt. Harrison Berdan, one of our home town veterans, has written to Gov. Albert E. Sleeper to suggest that a regiment of volunteers be raised among Civil war veterans to act as a home guard to perform such military services as the government of the state and nation might require, as younger men are needed for army or industry. "Cap" was captain of Company H, 5th Michigan infantry, one of the four Michigan regiments belonging to General Custer's Brigade.

Monday morning at ten-thirty, the fire bell rang to announce a conflagration at the Charlevoix Hotel. The roof and rear portion of the hotel were badly damaged, but mostly by water.

Miss Ethel May Shapton and George Sands were married Monday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Shapton of Barnard.

R. C. Hummett has purchased a 6-cylinder, 7-passenger Apperson touring car, and George Crouter an 8-cylinder, 4-passenger roadster of the same make, which will make no slight addition to Charlevoix's rapidly growing list of fine cars.

Atwood: We will have a real automobile in Atwood when Elzinga Bros. get their Baby Grand Chevrolet. They have a new hen house built which a few predicted was to be a garage but have found out their mistake.

North Norwood: Will Santoes is moving to Charlevoix this week, where he has secured employment.

Marion: Joe Moore has purchased Mrs. J. H. Blackwood's farm.

Charlevoix revived the old-fashioned "town meeting" Friday night at the court house. More than two hundred and fifty citizens appeared to discuss, attack or hear defense of the city's proposed water works extension project. Dr. R. B. Armstrong, city health officer, Alderman Archie Livingston, and Deputy City Clerk D. S. Puyton presented the plan.

The Hotel Orient and Wm. Eastcott home at Ellsworth were destroyed by fire Sunday evening. Charlevoix's fire truck made a record run to the village, covering the twelve miles in less than twenty minutes.

Miss Carrie Pappin returned Friday of last week from Detroit, where she spent the winter.

Why not spring tourists in Michigan? Cutover lands and abandoned farms are never half so enticing as when wild flowers are in bloom. The old slashing plains are supporting increasing growths of trailing arbutus, while the sandy loam hills furnish the natural habitat for May flowers. Thousands of people in Chicago, Detroit and other congested cities would gladly drive hundreds of miles to see the Michigan countryside at its most beautiful season.

Joel Johnston has returned to Charlevoix after spending the winter with his brother, I. H. Johnston, dahlia specialist, at Charleston, W. Va. Mr. Johnston made arrangements to take over much of his brother's dahlia stock and will bring to Charlevoix many new varieties heretofore not grown outside of West Virginia.

Other Charlevoix residents returning after a winter in warmer locations include Allan Shapton and Bert Carey from Miami, Fla.; Warren Kibbe from St. Petersburg, Fla.; Miss Isabelle Hines from Santa Monica, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hamlin and daughter, Helen, from Clearwater, Fla.; Mrs. Mary Roen from Washington, D. LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Hello Ken:

I hope you will overlook this paper, it's all I have with me, and if the writing is hard to read, you can blame that on the train. This road is as rough as U.S.31 north of Charlevoix.

I'm mailing you an address given us by our Colonel just before we left Fort Devens. Our company is part of the Advance Guard. We left Devens Tuesday night and have been on this train for over 85 hours. I've never before seen so many rabbits. On either side of the tracks, sometimes as many as 20 or 30 at a time. Boy!. What a spot to go hunting in.

Well, it's time for mess, so will close. Hope to see Charlevoix again—soon.

Corp. Edward S. Radle,
Co. E., 126th Infantry.

Editor's Note: It is apparent the outfit Ed. is connected with is enroute to some war front. Indication of the seriousness of the mission upon which the men are embarking is revealed in the following excerpts from the address before departure by Colonel Lawrence A. Quinn, commanding officer:

"In a few hours we shall be on our way. Our destination is a secret; and, except for curiosity, is unimportant. What is important, however, is the fact that we are on our way to meet the enemy. War is a grim business. It is a killer business. To some people in some parts of the world it is an old business. But to us it is new. In battle you go forth to kill or be killed—there is no half way point. We must school ourselves to accept this. As we approach closer and closer to the sound of the guns we must develop that killer instinct, which is so necessary to success on the field of battle.

"Should you experience difficulty developing this desire to kill—you have but to recall what we are fighting for—our homes, our loved ones, our freedom, the right to live as we please. Our country was founded on such principles; our forefathers fought, bled and died to retain them; as did this regiment in 1861, 1898 and 1918. In the future, if necessary, our children will fight for them. Today, now, it is our privilege and our duty to do so.

Our nation and our loved ones are depending on us; they have placed their faith, their hope, their trust in us. Let us resolve here today that we shall not fail them."

Dear Ken:

Have been receiving the Charlevoix Courier each week and certainly look forward to it. I was transferred recently from the 345th School Squadron to Hq. and Hq. Squadron, 90th Air Base Group (sp). Since then I was appointed Private First Class, then on April 1, I was made Corporal.

During the last of March I took out papers for Flying Cadet and passed all the tests. I am on the waiting list now and it may be a month or two before I go to the cadet receiving center to start training.

I am an aerial photographer at the present and like the work very much, but would rather become a pilot.

Sincerely yours,

fishing until the big "hows" are through spawning, there'd be less fish salted down in pork barrels in the country out toward Boyne Falls and better steelhead trolling in Lake Charlevoix the coming season. But then, a half a loaf is better than none at all, so we'll just have to keep right on plugging for the things that are right.

Talking about evolution in reverse, did you ever notice how easily a girl can make a monkey out of an old goat?

Tight Mouthed—

"But surely you didn't tell him straight out that you love him."

"No fear—he had to squeeze it out of me."

Unexpectedly and somewhat earlier than previous years, the spring perch spawning run started Monday. While the fish are running small and have not approached in quantity what the early weeks of May usually do, some excellent catches were taken Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday off the dock at the foot of Clinton street. Perch fishing is under way at Ironton, too, I'm told, with better catches being made off Isle of Pines.

What we'd like to see is one huge appropriation to take care of the German subs. Sort of a sinking fund!

One exchange paper says: "One good result of the national tire rationing, according to some observers, is an apparent increase in church attendance. Folks can't get out of town, so they go to church on Sunday—which is something worthwhile."

After the present supplies are used up, they're going to change the title of Defense Stamps and Bonds to War Stamps and Bonds. That's as it should be and falls right in line with an editorial policy which is gaining nation-wide scope to delete as far as possible the word "defense" in connection with the war from print. Citizens of this nation are just not the type to go on forever under a government continually harping on the theme of defense. Americans by nature are aggressive—it is offense they want. They want to carry the killing and destruction right home to the Axis powers and the sooner, the better.

So in closing remember that War bonds buy bundles for bums.

WIDEN EAST CLINTON STREET AID PARKING

Extend Curb Five Feet Each Side from Bridge St. to Lake

Acting to alleviate in a measure the parking problem in the business district, the city council Monday night authorized widening of Clinton street from Bridge to Round lake by five feet on each side.

City Superintendent Clifford McKibbin, Jr., was instructed to ask for bids on the project, which includes elimination of the grass plot outside the present sidewalk on each side and construction of new curb and gutter. The plan originally called for widening of Clinton street east from State street and later may be carried through. Concreting of a former triangular flower parkway at top of the grade on Chicago avenue will also be carried out.

The council, in addition to granting renewal of tavern license for Perl Scott, purchased 300 feet of 2½ and 100 feet of 1½-inch fire hose.

'42 TROUT SEASON OPENING SATURDAY

Trout fishermen may still take wigglers, which are declared by law to be the nymphs of mayflies, and all other aquatic insect nymphs or larvae, for their personal use from all waters except trout streams and waters not otherwise closed by special order. Commercial dealers in these must operate under a state license and secure their stock from waters designated by the state.

The fishing license fee, covering all fish, remains at $1 for resident over 17 years of age but the wife can fish free on a special permit given out at the time the husband takes out his license. Non-resident license fees are $2 for the season or $1 for 10 days with the wife paying 50c in each case for the same privilege.

Burring heavy rains before the Saturday opening, stream conditions will be fairly normal despite the fact some snow still lies in the swamps.

SUPERVISORS ADJOURN THURSDAY

ADOPTED TENTATIVE BUDGET AGGREGATING $86,575

Shorten Ironton Ferry Service Pending Turning Operation Over to Road Commission

Following organization and disposal of routine business, the 74th annual spring session of the Charlevoix county board of supervisors was adjourned Thursday afternoon.

Election of Clarence B. Meggison as chairman, and appointment of committees for 1942-43 was announced last week.

The board adopted a finance committee recommended tentative budget of $86,575, requiring a tax of 10 mills, comparing to $83,325 and 9¾ mills last year.

Increase of the budget was embodied primarily in defense and rationing expense anticipated for the county. The board voted to allow bills up to $500 for defense activities and up to $150 for needed expenses of the county rationing board.

Claims aggregating $99.01 were allowed out of a total of $185.00 presented.

A recommendation of the board's Ironton ferry committee that the ferry be operated between April 1 and January 31, inclusive, was adopted. The ferry, providing transportation across the south arm of Lake Charlevoix between Ironton and the peninsula, had previously been operated during the winter when ice conditions permitted.

The board, at its last October session, voted to turn operation of the ferry over to the road commission. This action is now pending passage by the next legislature of an act repealing a Local Act of 1885, which delegated power to the board of supervisors to operate the ferry. It is the contention of the board that the Ironton ferry is a part of the county road system and should properly be operated by the road commission.

Earlier in last week's session a petition requesting longer ferry service and bearing signatures of taxpayers throughout the county, was presented the board by Charles Hamlin, chairman of the Charlevoix board of commerce roads committee. The petition was tabled in view of the action pending to remove operation of the ferry as a function of the board.

ASK FARMERS DIG UP OLD METALS, RUBBER

WPA Trucks to Be Used for Collection Throughout Michigan

The State Salvage Committee today began an intensive drive to induce farmers to sell or donate scrap metal and rubber to the government, according to Kenneth M. Burns, committee chairman.

Burns said Michigan farmers were being contacted through the mailing of more than 300,000 letters from Donald M. Nelson, director of the war production board. Each letter contained a postcard, which when returned would bring a government truck to the farm, equipped to weigh on the spot material up to 300 pounds.

Burns said the WPA was establishing 63 collection centers in rural areas near railroad tracks, from which the scrap would be shipped to furnaces.

"Farmers may either donate scrap to the government or sell it at established prices," Burns said. "If they sell, they will be paid either in defense stamps or by government check.

H. J. HEINZ CO. BUYS STELTER INTERESTS

H. E. Brumm, Named Manager for New Owners, Locates Here

In a transaction completed Friday, the Charlevoix Pickle & Produce Co., owned and operated by the late Albert J. Stelter, was purchased by the H. J. Heinz Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa.

The deal, consumated between Mrs. A. J. Stelter and J. R. Bechtel, representing the Heinz interests, included stations in Charlevoix, Boyne City, Brutus, Central Lake, Cheboygan, Alden, East Jordan, Ellsworth, Harbor Springs, Mancelona, Petoskey and Gaylord.

All 1942 contracts signed by the Charlevoix Pickle & Produce Co. were assigned to the H. J. Heinz Co., according to Mr. Bechtel, who stated policies of the former owner would be continued without change. Mr. Stelter was formerly associated with the H. J. Heinz Co.

H. E. Brumm, who will assume management for the Heinz interests, with headquarters in Charlevoix, said the company would seek additional contracts and pointed out that with the price for pickles the highest on record, they would constitute the farmers' best cash crop this year.

The principle pickle manufacturing plant of the Heinz Co., one of the country's largest, is located at Holland, Mich.

PLAN SEND-OFF FOR NEXT DRAFT QUOTA

Forty-One Men Called to Report for Service on May 6th

Plans are now being formulated to hold a rousing send-off here Wednesday, May 6, for a group of 41 Charlevoix county young men called to report that date for induction in the U. S. Army.

J. M. Foster, chairman of the county draft board, is urging all citizens as well as members of patriotic and civic organizations to be on hand to honor this group of draftees, which represents the largest single contingent to leave the county at one time for military service. He stated arrangements were being made to obtain a speaker and that the city and school bands would participate.

The selectees will go by special chartered bus to Kalamazoo and, if accepted, will leave immediately for induction at Fort Custer. The scheduled leaving time from Charlevoix is 2 p. m., and all those planning to be present are requested to be on hand at this time. Full details of the program and names of draftees will be announced next week.

CHARLES A. BARNARD IS TAKEN BY DEATH

Funeral for Barnard Pioneer Held Wednesday Afternoon

Charles A. Barnard, 73, died Sunday at Charlevoix Hospital, where he had been a patient for three weeks.

Born January 28, 1869, at Ashtabula, Ohio, Mr. Barnard had lived in Charlevoix and vicinity for the past 35 years. His occupation was that of a farm worker. He was a member of Barnard Grange for many years.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Ada Gibbs, of Richmond, Ind., Mrs. John Walker, of Charlevoix; three step-brothers, George and James Hayes, of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, and William Hayes, of Ashtabula, Ohio, and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. J. Pulsipher from the See Funeral Home, Wednesday afternoon. Interment was at Brooksido cemetery.

Now able to laugh off a practical joke is a Midland hunter whose honesty compelled him to explain that of the three pheasants listed on his game-kill report as bagged last fall, two were mounted birds, set out in a field. "I shot both of them before I discovered the trick," he confessed on the card, filed with the conservation department just before the February 15 deadline.

BOARD OF COMMERCE BANQUET FINE EVENT

Outstanding Program and Fine Attendance Wednesday Night

The annual board of commerce banquet, held last Wednesday evening at the Masonic temple, was an outstanding event both from the standpoint of an excellent program and capacity attendance.

In addition to Charlevoix citizens, visitors were present from Traverse City, Boyne City, Harbor Springs, Petoskey and Beaver Island, indicating the fine spirit of cooperation existing between resort communities of the area. Harbor Springs brought the largest delegation, its chamber of commerce being represented by Victor Pool, James and Robert Roe, Kenneth Ketchman, Eugene Pifer and George Marshall. From Petoskey were Les Johnson and Joseph Scroggin; from Boyne City were E. Dulleigh Ruegsegger, John Olson, Don Sheets and Delbert Puuquette; from Traverse City were Ed, Defer, Louis Slater, Dr. Tinker and Hugh Johnson; from Beaver Island were Lawrence Malloy and Earl Boyle.

Roger Allen, of Grand Rapids, lived up to his reputation as an outstanding speaker and humorist, providing 40 minutes of top-notch entertainment. Selections by the Charlevoix Barbershop Four, composed of Rev. Donald R. Evans, Dr. D. E. Nettleton, Dr. Gilbert Saltonstall and Charles Hamlin were highly appreciated.

The banquet will go down on the records as one of the finest ever held here.

METHODIST PARLORS DEDICATED SUNDAY

Evening Service and Program Was Held at Church

Ceremonies dedicating the newly re-modeled parlors of the Methodist church were held Sunday evening at the church, with about sixty people present.

The church service, conducted by Rev. Leigh H. Hagle, included a solo by Eddis Leigh Hagle. Following this was a program consisting of a piano solo by Miss Ora Howe, cello solo by Miss Evelyn Wiltse, reading by Mrs. Fred Shudik, piano solo by Miss Audrey Byers, and selections by the Belding orchestra, with special numbers by Joseph Hanna on the solovox.

Inspection of the church parlors followed. A farewell gift was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hall, who are leaving to make their home in Ithaca. Refreshments were served from a table presided over by Mrs. Ed. Ibis and Mrs. Fred Bancroft.

The importance of diet and nutrition was demonstrated during the World War I when the death rate from tuberculosis doubled in Germany and other countries in which food supplies became low. As soon as these factors were restored to normal the toll of tuberculosis dropped again to pre-war levels. (From the National Tuberculosis Association Bulletin.)

It takes the work of 18 men back home to keep a single soldier on the fighting front.

SUGAR REGISTRATION NEXT WEEK

TO BE HELD AT HIGH SCHOOL PERIOD MAY 5 TO 9

Sugar Now Off Market Until May 5th; Regulations for Rationing Are Briefly Outlined

Monday was the last during the duration of the war that sugar can be bought merely through the exchange of money.

Sugar sales were suspended Monday at midnight and consumers will not be able to buy again until May 5 and then upon presentation of war rationing stamps.

Plans for consumer registration for sugar rationing books and, incidentally, books which may in the future be necessary to obtain household commodities as well as gasoline and other essentials, have been completed for the period of May 5-9, inclusive. Residents of Charlevoix, as well as Hilton, Loeb and, Grand View school districts, will register between 4 and 9 p. m. in the basement of the high school building during the designated period. Members of the school faculty will conduct the registration.

O. P. North, superintendent of schools, has announced that for the convenience of residents of Hilton, Loeb and Grand View districts who might be unable to come in Charlevoix, registration will be held between 5 to 9 p. m. Tuesday evening, May 5, at Hilton school, the same hours Wednesday evening at Loeb school for Loeb and Grand View districts.

In brief, some of the regulations governing sugar rationing follow: In order to obtain a rationing book, every individual must be registered. However, one member of a family may register for the entire group. For the first eight weeks of the program, sugar sales will be limited to eight ounces per week for each man, woman and child, thus the first stamp, providing a two weeks' supply per person, is good for one pound. Any excess over two pounds a person must be declared upon registration and one stamp will be deducted for an amount between 2 and 6 pounds per person. If the supply is over six pounds a person, a registration book will not be issued at present. Application may be made for a book after the six pounds per person is used up.

PHELPS SCHOOL VOTES TO TRANSPORT PUPILS

Will Discontinue School and Send Students to Charlevoix

O. P. North, superintendent of Charlevoix public schools, announced today that a sixth rural district has voted to discontiaue school operation and transport pupils to Charlevoix.

At a special meeting of the Phelps school district held Monday evening, it was voted to close the school and transport elementary and high school students to Charlevoix for the 1942-43 term providing transportation can he provided within means.

Burgess school district is voting on a similar proposal this week, Mr. North stated. At the present time all pupils of Loeb, Grand and Hilton schools are attending here, while pupils of Ironton and Barnard schools from the seventh grade up are being transported to Charlevoix. It is anticipated that near future years will witness all pupils of rural schools in the Charlevoix area attending here.

CLEAN-UP WEEK IS SET FOR MAY 4-9

CITIZENS, FIRE AND HEALTH OFFICIALS TO COOPERATE

City Street Department to Provide Usual Pick-Up Service for Rubbish and Refuse

Charlevoix's annual clean-up week will start Monday, May 4th, and continue through Saturday, May 9, and as long thereafter as is necessary for completion.

Through proclamation by Mayor Robert Bridge, that period is designated for the annual "Clean-Up" week. Health and fire officials and citizens in general will cooperate as usual in this effort to properly "dress" up the community for the summer season and, incidentally, help maintain this city's slogan, "Charlevoix-the-Benutiful."

The immediate purpose of clean-up week is to clear yards, alleys and vacant property of all refuse, rubbish and ash piles, thus reducing fire and health hazards and giving the city a neater, cleaner appearance.

Leo Allard, street commissioner, asks citizens to place rubbish in substantial containers at the street curb or at convenient places in alleys to be picked up by truck. Citizens are asked not to dump rubbish in piles, as this method is not satisfactory and causes extra work for the street department.

All citizens are urged to cooperate in this community effort and, if possible, within the period designated.

GOVERNMENT FREEZES COMMODITY PRICES

Highest Price Charged in March Is to Be the Standard

Sometime before the end of this month you should be able to purchase virtually anything that is for sale without being told that the price has gone up.

Stabilized price-freezing order to be announced by the Office of Price Administration will become effective almost immediately, probably on or before May 1, it has been learned. The order will take effect Wednesday. But officials said that would be changed to give retailers and others a few days to bring prices in line with their March quotations.

AIR RAID CLASS BEGINS TRAINING

CIVILIAN DEFENSE GROUP ORGANIZED THURSDAY

Thirty Begin Instruction Aimed to Develop One Branch of Community Wartime Protection Organization of air raid warden classes, one of several branches of civilian defense scheduled to function for community wartime protection, was inaugurated in the community room of the city hall last Thursday evening.

Before a large audience, movies depicting devastation created in London, England, by bombing, the effect and control of magnesium incendiary bombs and the functioning of civilian defense organizations as now set up throughout the nation, gave a realistic picture of the hideousness of war and, equally as important, the need for community organization for protection.

Thirty persons were selected from the three city wards to take air raid warden training. Those named were: First ward—Charles Bellinger, Charles Hamlin, Elliott Lewis, P. R. Rose, Charles Tuhy, Lewis O'Neil, Lou Comfort, Kit Carson, Mrs. C. S. Webster and Mrs. E. D. Hawley; second ward—H. E. Bingham, Jud Hurdy, Rev. H. J. Pulsipher, A. C. Belding, Rev. W. L. Cruthers, R. L. Lewis, Floyd Brown, Mrs. Clifford McKibbin, Jr., and Mrs. Elmer Barber; third ward—Fr. John Collins, Earl Shupton, Ken Usher, Stewart Coleman, Ray Kipke, Leo Powers, Alonzo Powers, Guy Eccleston, Alfred Gill, Jr., Mrs. E. J. Edwards and Mrs. Evn McChan.

JUDGE GILBERT HALTS CALL RECALL ELECTION

Grants Writ of Mandamus Restraining County Clerk

At a special court session here Wednesday, Circuit Judge Parm C. Gilbert, of Traverse City, granted petition for writ of mandamus restraining County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow from calling a special election for recall of members of the county road commission.

Petitions for recall were filed March 30 by William F. Tryon, of Boyne City, county CIO organizer. Petition for writ of mandamus was filed April 21 by Rollie L. Lewis, counsel for William K. Straw, commission member, in behalf of himself and Samuel E. Rogers and William F. Tindall, other members.

In granting the restraining petition, Judge Gilbert ruled that recall petitions were filed in blanket form instead of for each individual commissioner, and that only general, instead of specific charges of mal-feasance, mis-feasance and non-feasance were contained in the petition.

Judge Gilbert's action halts the calling of a special recall election tentatively scheduled for May 25.

STRIKE OF COMMERCIAL FISHERMEN IS SETTLED

All Boats Resumed Operations Wednesday After Compromise

Charlevoix's commercial fishing fleet was in full operation Wednesday morning following a short-lived strike of shore workers and boat crews Monday for higher wages.

A demand for $35 per week was compromised at $30 per week or a share of catch basis, it is understood. As a result of the strike, two boats were tied up, while others operated with short crews Monday.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

The spirit of friendship a person likes to remember is that being shown by the fellows who are finishing up the uncompleted portion and last Sunday painted Dean Davenport's house while he's laid up in the hospital at Gaylord. That is what I always figured true friendship was like.

Expected to have brook trout for supper Saturday night, but with expectations upset somewhat by lack of brook trout, had to wait until Monday night. So you can no doubt gather it took me two days, anyway, to get enough to fill up my gang, and that's admittedly the truth. Seeings how limit catches were a mighty scarce article, guess my misfortune was shared by a lot of fellows, so I don't feel so bad. Truth of the matter is that Earl Miller, Bill Fessenden and George Whitley brought in the only limit catches I heard of. Earl and Bill took the limit of German browns at Boyne Falls pond, while George caught the limit of brooks both Saturday and Sunday "somewhere in northern Michigan." One of George's fish was a 16-inch brook—a beauty. George wants to sneak out in the dark henceforth when he starts for that secret creek of his, for I know at least a half dozen fellows who are shadowing him hourly with the intention of following the next time he starts.

Ruth rode on my motorcycle directly behind me. I hit a bump at sixty-five and rode on ruthlessly.

The kind of spirit that is going to win this war for the United States is that expressed by a local plumber when restrictions in plumbing fixtures were recently announced. That fellow (Frank Novotny, for your information) said: "If the government needs metals plumbing fixtures are made of to build implements needed to win the war, it's o. k. by me." That should be the spirit of every American.

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Have you joined a "car club" yet?

Sharing automobile transportation has become an act of war patriotism in Michigan this spring, all because the Nazi in Germany induced some crazy Japs on the other side of the world to seize rubber plantations in Malaya, a good 10,000 miles away.

Funny, isn't it, how the world has grown smaller in 1942!

The "car club" idea was initiated by State Highway Commissioner G. Donald Kennedy at Pontiac where it received a thorough test and has been popularly labelled the "Pontiac Plan", and also the "Michigan Plan."

The plan calls for a maximum use of buses and a minimum use of automobiles to conserve exsisting supplies of cars and tires for transportation of workers to war production plants.

Routine of peace-time lives was violently disturbed with inauguration of the plan March 16. Alarm clocks were set to conform to new working hours; housewives rearranged shoppings schedules; school children welcomes the later opening of classes, and workmen started their new shifts cheerfully.

"Surveys of Michigan war plants," Kennedy explained, "called attention to the fact that 75 per cent of workers depend upon their automobiles for transportation to and from work. This clearly indicated that unless existing facilities were conserved, a critical condition in war industries would soon develop."

A survey made by the highway department revealed that Pontiac's industries employ more than 25,000 workers. Of that number, the survey showed 4,000 use buses, while 12,000 residing in the city, and 9,300 living outside use private automobiles in going to and from work.

Selected as a typical Michigan industrial city, Pontiac was chosen for the first test, and after more than four weeks of experiment its

TAKE DANDELIONS TO KILL CUTWORM

There's something new added to gardening.

In a year when Victory Gardens are recommended, the shortcuts and safeguards provided by science include a simple trick of digging up dandelions, chopping them up in a chopping bowl, adding Paris green and strewing the bait out to catch cutworms.

The suggestion comes from C. B. Dibble, Michigan State college extension specialist in insect control. An extra dividend is obvious. If the dandelions are dug out of a lawn the lawn shares in the improvement.

Dibble reports it takes about a half bushel of dandelion greens to make bait for a large size city lot garden, or about an eighth acre. The greens are chopped and then three to four ounces of Paris green are mixed thoroughly with the choppings. The bait should stand through the day and then be spread over the garden area in the evening. There should be about 10 pounds of the moist bait for a garden the size of a city lot.

Baiting is to be timed about when the first garden seedings are coming up but before early cabbage is set out.

Other tips are provided by K. C. Barrons, garden specialist of the college horticulture department.

He suggests fertilizing and discing before a garden is plowed, if the area happens to be sod. The plowing should have been done last fall, but many new garden areas still are in the planning. The discing breaks up the sod so that smaller clods are turned under. The smalled chunks of turf rot faster and thus permit better moisture retention than if large sod strips were plowed under for the garden.

Tuberculosis is not an inherited disease but is caused by a germ, the tubercle bacillus. Children born of tuberculous mothers do not develop tuberculous if they are removed from contact with their mothers immediately after birth and raised in homes free of tuberculosis.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

County Farmers Co-operating in "Food for Freedom" Drive

Observations made throughout the county strengthens our opinion that farmers everywhere are doing their best to meet the demands made of them in the "Food for Freedom" campaign. Already the majority of oats have been seeded and acres and acres of land have been plowed and cultivated for other crops. Fortunately our rather mild winter has not materially damaged any crops. Wheat came through thus far without damage and gives promise of a bumper crop. Hay crops look exceedingly promising.

Last week a series of four meetings were held at various points in the county to assist poultrymen with their greatly enlarged program. Just as an indication of what is taking place the production of eggs last January was 52% greater than the previous January. There is approximately a 16% increase in the the poultry business this last year. The government expects to buy double the production of eggs that they did in 1941. Just as a brief reminder give your pullets a chance to develop before they start to lay in November. While it is true by using high protein feeds young pullets can be made to lay in four or four and a half months of age for the entire year it is much better to not have them lay before they are five or six moaths of age.

Also this week a meeting has been held at Horton Bay to acquaint the local farmers with the production of string beans for the East Jordan canning factory. Latest information shows us that our government is contracting to buy a large percent of all produce that is to be canned this year. They expect to purchase 34% of the entire sweet cherry crop, 27% of the sour cherry production, 30% of string beans, 60% of red beets, 50% of carrots and 100% of asparagus. Thus we can begin to realize the size and multitude of the efforts asked of farmers as their contribution in winning the war. It may be said that farmers who have the facilities and labor can help by increasing their acreage of contract crops. The U. S. D. A. war board will exert every effort possible to help in the labor program. Certainly any young boy or girl can perform a wonderful service in the war effort if they will help farmers harvest the contract crops and cherries. Most of this seasonal labor comes during school vacation. Certainly, all of us have a job to do—let's do it.

Surplus Wheat Good Pig Feed

While it's still available the wheat purchased by Michigan farmers at reduced prices from the federal Surplus Commodities Corporation makes a feed more valuable than corn per hundredweight and equal to or slightly superior to Michigan-grown wheat.

Tests at Michigan State College have brought out these results. One precaution is recommended. Most of the wheat sold by the government into Michigan as livestock feed has been spring wheat or hard winter wheat. This is somewhat harder than Michigan-grown wheat and ought to be ground. Coarse grinding gives just as good results as fine grinding.

Pigs self-fed on pasture show their preference for the wheat over corn by taking only a little more than half as much supplement with ground wheat as did similar lots of pigs fed on corn.

Wheat seems to "start" pigs faster than those fed on corn, but the college tests indicated the young animals tended to go off feed more frequently after six or eight weeks. For that reason some other grain should be fed with the wheat.

Some protein supplement is recommended for nursing sows and young growing pigs. Soybean oil meal or tankage is suitable.

A mixture suggested by V. A. Freeman of the college staff for weanling pigs contains 100 pounds ground wheat, 50 pounds ground corn, 50 pounds ground oats, 10 pounds tankage and 10 pounds soybean oil meal.

Conservation 4-H Clubs Hear R. C. Hill

Last week the members of our 4-H Conservation clubs had the opportunity of enjoying an illustrated lecture on wild-life management given by R. C. Hill of the Michigan State College. In each case the majority of high school students and Junior High students were permitted to hear this program.

This represented the third in a series of lectures scheduled for the benefit of the many boys and girls interested in conservation. Former meetings emphasized the size and romance of the lumbering industry and the development of Michigan as a deer hunting state. Each winter it is planned to give the Conservation club members material of this type.

The next program will be carried out very shortly, it is the setting out of thousands of young pine seedlings on land deeded to the school district for this purpose by the state conservation department. Approximately 20,000 young trees will arrive and finally find their place on soils that are not adapted for general cultivation. It is indeed gratifying to visit the school forests and note the growth of the young seedlings set out two and three years ago. As time goes on these locations will be greatly cherished by those who have had a part in this activity.

The Truth About Haiti's Walking Dead Men

What terrible power turns living men into Zombies . . . mindless slaves who must obey the will of their masters. Inez Wallace, distinguished newspaper correspondent and world traveler, spent six months in the West Indies before she learned the real answer, which she reveals in The American Weekly with this Sunday's (May 3) issue of The Detroit Sunday Times.

Predatory animal control cost the conservation department $2,120 in the first quarter of 1942, just $5 less than was paid in bounties in the first quarter of 1941. In March of this year, bounties were paid on one wolf, 30 coyotes and 25 bobcats. All the animals except four coyotes were taken in the upper peninsula.

George put off Richard's coat that Tommy had given him and went to his bunk to lie under blankets there. She followed him, her legs stiff and wooden with the penetrating dsnip and chill. Standing by the bunk she could see lhrough the small window above it a headland a mile away. She watched the beadland fall slowly behind; and she felt the heavier seas outside the Bay begin to lift the Venturer. She stood there long, not moving, her eyes fixed on that bluff which was gray through rsin; till presently they changed course, brought the wind more abeam, and the headlsnd disappeared.

When Mary came into the main cabin that night, Peter sat in Richard's place at the head of the tabla. He told ber that Corkran had been appointed second mate. The mates had not yet come below. She went to speak to George and found him stronger than he had been, bent on coming to be at table with them. She sat on Peter's rigbt as she had been on Richard's right during these weeks of the voyage. Willie Leeper had roasted one of the geese shot that afternoon, had cooked it so thoroughly the meat fell off tha bones at a touch. Peter served her and George, and as Mat Forbes joined them he served his own plate and then Mat's. When Corkran appeared, a little uncertainly, Peter heaped his plate; and he asked in an agreeable tone:

"Do you know navigation, Mr. Corkran?"

"No, sir."

"Mr. Forbes can give you a start. Better work on it." Peter smiled grimly. "The Venturer's bad hard luck with her officers lhis voyage. Something might happen to me."

"Yas, sir," Corkran assented in a toneless voice. Peter looked at him thoughtfully, but he aaid nothing. Thero was little speech during that meal.

"Dick was always a hero to me," Peter said, balf to himself. "I didn't think anything could happen to him. He seemed so strong and sure, and luck was alwsys with him. I almost went crnzy, running up and down that beach today." He rose, shaking his head.

George and Mary followed him into the common room, and Georga lay down on the long bench there. It was still broad day in these high latitudes, but the small window gave scant light. Peter lighted the whale oil lamps.

"I don't like the dark," he said. "I'm dreading tonight. Probably won't sleep." He decided, after a moment: "I'll go on deck and have a look at her."

George lay quietly. Msry stood looking out of the small squsre window at the boil of water under the stern. The desk was at her left, the log book lying on the end of tt.

After a while, she looked down at the book; and presently she lifted it and turned the pages to the latest entry. She read it, her eyes glancing along the lines.

"Hoakes Bay. Day began with southwest wind and rain. Repairs finished this morning. Captain Richard Corr and Mate Peter Corr went to shoot geese on shore while the water caska were being filled. Captain Corr descended to the south beach and tried to club a sea lion. The animal bit at him and its tusks fastened in his arm and it dragged him into the sea. He was lost. Wind came southeasterly in the afternoon, giving us a fair chance to make out of the Bay. Will stop at Stanley to set up new topmast and topgallant. Rain aquails tonight. Corkran was promoted to be second mate."

Mary read and nodded slowly. As she conned the words, she seemed to hear, far away, a faintly familiar sound, not easily identified. She tried to hear more plainly. Peter had written this. The capitals were ornate, involved in sweeping curves, and there were blotches where the pen had pressed too hard, and the letters staggered erratically up and down. Peter had written this. It was very different from the preceeding entries in Richard's small, neat, careful hand. Richard's hand was compact and firm, Peter's large and sprawling. Peter had written this. What was it she seemed to hesr? Something heard long ago. Or seen long ago. Peter had written this! Peter!

Her eyes widened in a sudden startled attention.

Once years ago Richsrd hsd written her a note, two or three lines, brief, curt, cruel. "Wait till you grow up. Don't be a silly little fool." But Richard had written that note the way Peter had written this entry in the log; in a sprawling hand, the words straggling up and down, the capitals ornate.

Suddenly she knew in a complete and overpowering revelation that it had been Peter, not Richard, who wrote that cruel note long ago.

The log book snapped shut with a sound so loud that George sat up, staring at her, asking quickly: "What is it, Mary?"

She asked in a sharp whisper: "George, what made you think Richard and I loved each other that day?"

"Don't be unhappy about that. It's all right."

"No," she insisted. "Tell me." She demanded acutely: "George, did Peter give you a letter he said I'd written to Richard?"

He looked at her steadily, said at last: "Why—he didn't give it to me, no. I wanted to go on deck, and it was cold, and Peter gave me Richard's big sea coat to wear over my own. After we got on deck, I put my hands in the pockets, and felt a piece of paper, and before I thought, I looked at it. It was your letter to Richard, Mary."

She spoke quickly. "It began: 'Dear Richard, Having been capllvated by the charms of your person . . .'?"

For answer, he fumbled in his pocket, produced a crumpled paper, gave it to her. She smoothed it out, read it swiftly with racing eyes that nevertheless lingered over the familiar, not-to-be-forgotten words.

She smiled as she read. Once these words had seemed to her so impassioned and tender and beautiful that they made her senses swim; and once she had treasured this scrap of paper in her bosom happily. But now even in the tension of this moment she was amused; and she looked up at George in a deep mirth.

"You really thought I'd written this to Richard?"

"What could I think?"

"I mean, since we came aboard here?"

"I'm afraid I did," he admitted.

"My dear, can you imagine any girl really writing a letter like that; so many long words, so stilted and silly and everything?"

He said, half-smiling at his own confession: "I've never had a love letter, Mary. I don't know much about them. Didn't you write it?"

"Yes, but years ago. My handwriting doesn't even look like that now!"

"I've never seen your handwriting, you know. We've not been separated, so we've never written letters to each other."

"And it's signed 'Mary Doncaster,'" she insisted. "Not Mary McAusland."

"I thought you had forgotten you were my wife."

He spoke so humbly that for a moment she caught him close in tenderness; but then she spoke in swift explanation, and soberly now. "Listen, George. I copied this letter out of a 'Complete Letter Writer' when I was in school in New Bedford. It was supposed to be from a man to a girl, and I thought it was perfectly beautiful."

"I see," he assented. "But Mary, Richard kept it all these years. So perhaps he loved you too!"

She shook her head. "No, he didn't keep it! He never saw it. I know that now. Peter stole it from me in school. He told me he was going to give it to Richard. I begged him not to." Her cheek colored, and she said honestly: "Next day he brought me what he said was Richard's answer; but I know now that Peter wrote the answer himself, because it's the same handwriting in the log; and he must have kept my letter all this time . . ." Her voice checked as though some thought struck her; then she went on: "And he put it in Richard's coat, to fool you, to make you mad!"

He said grimly, remembering that storm of emotion which had racked him so: "I was crnzy, Mary. I'll spend the rest of my life making up to you for the way I acted that day."

She told him, warmly comforting: "I didn't mind really, George." Her eyes twinkled almost mischievously. "You know, you've never told me you love me. It's only when you get terribly jealous that I can see you do." Then she cried, tense again, leaning close to him so that they could not be overheard: "But don't you see, George, this means Richard isn't dead! If he is, Peter killed him; but I know he isn't!"

He asked gropingly: "How does it mean Richard's not dead?"

"Why, don't you see?" she insisted. "Peter's a coward and a sneak and a thief, or he wouldn't have done that with my silly letter! George, we've got to make him go back to Hoakes Bay and find Richard."

After some considerallon George agreed with Mary to seek aid from the crew in forcing Peter to return to search for Richard. Mary sat beside George and in a whisper explained that when Peter was surely asleep, they could creep across to wake the mates and enlist their aid. For if help were to be found against Peter it must come from those next in authority aboard.

Mat Forbes and Corkran were sound asleep when George in darkness opened their door and felt bis way to Mat's bunk and whispered in the mate's ear, warning him to silence. Mary pressed the door shut without a sound; and George lighted the candle, and Corkran woke at the sudden flare. Except for their boots, he and Mat were both fully clad, sleeping in their clothes against the pitiless and searching cold.

Mat and Corkran, when the lamp was lighted, looked at their visitors in a sleepy wonder, waiting to hear what this visitation meant; and Mary tried to explain. She found that there was terribly little she could say. She had no evidence beyond her own certainty that Richard was alive, and that Peter knew it, and that they must return to Hoakes Bay.

When she ended, Mat Forbes spoke. "Ma'am, I'm not saying you're right or wrong; but we've nothing to go on." "We've got to look at it straight," he pointed out. "We can ask Mr. Corr to go back; but if he won't, why he's the Captain. We can't make him, unless we know for sure."

To attempt to compel him in any way, or even to disobey his commands, was an action tainted with mutiny; and Mat, as the whispered discussion proceeded, repestedly pointed this out.

"He says Cap'n Corr was killed. He's logged it that way; and he can't go back on that, if it's true or not. He's got to stick to it; and short of handling him, there's nothing we can do."

"But I know he's lying," Mary pleaded. "I know Cap'n Corr's alive." She felt Corkran's eyes upon her; and she appealed to him. "Don't you, Corkran?"

Corkran was a long moment in replying; and before he spoke, his eyes swung from her to George. "Reverence," he asked gravely, "what do you say? Are you for going back?"

"Yes."

"Would you be thinking to sstisfy the young lady, so she'll know he's dead? Is that maybe it?"

"No. No. I'm sure he's alive. He's hurt, maybe. If he weren't, he'd have come to the boats. But I think he's surely alive."

"Then it's knowing he's alive that you'll want to go back and get him?"

"Yes, certainly."

Corkran stood up, and turning to the mate, said simply:

"Mr. Forbes, it himself here says go back, then I say go. If he said nol, I'd say no; but we'll do what he's wanting."

Mat Forbes nodded. "Yes, certain. I'd say go back, if we'd anything to go on. But it's hard to ssy to Peter that he's got to go back without knowing something."

"There's a way to know," Corkran told him quickly. "Gee was with them ashore. Whatever happened, Gee knows. Gee'a hated Cap'n Corr, and talked killing ever since the Cap'n had him flogged. Maybe he was in this, maybe not; but whatever happened, he knowa about it."

This was, clenrly, true. If Peter had lied about Richard's movements on shore at Hoakes Bay, Gee must know it. Mary whispered earnestly:

"Yes, yes! Don't you see, Mr. Forbes? Gee must know."

Menthol from Mint

Prospects for another use for Michigan grown mint have risen from among the effects of the war. Menthol, refined from peppermint oil, has become hard to get, since it has been a product imported from China and Japan.

Processors now are attempting to refine menthol from domestic mint oil and that may lead to a new and possibly permanent industry within the United States. A half million pounds of menthol was used in 1941, it is estimated, and that would require at least a million pounds of peppermint oil.

Indiana and Michigan, producing nearly 80 per cent of the 1941 domestic crop of peppermint oil, may eventually have a market for an extra million pounds of the product, double the total harvested in 1941.

In Reidsville, N. C., the local salvage committee is firing both barrels to help Uncle Sam. It uses the money derived from selling salvaged junk to buy war bonds and then proceeds to burn up the bonds.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY AAA PROGRAM IN

Although no increased production goal has been set on string beans under the 1942 AAA program over the 1941 figure, yet it is strongly desired that full production equal to that of last year be maintained. Reports have been received from some canners throughout the State that acreage contracted is less than the 1941 total. The reason given being the labor shortage on farms owing to the drafting of so many young farmers. You cannot harvest a crop if you do not plant it. Are you going to let down the boys at the front? They may give their lives. All you are asked to do is give a little extra effort. Remember our slogan "Food Will Win the War" and that we farmers are pledged to make good on that. Federal and State agencies working through local organizations are taking steps to marshall all help possible to help in the harvest.

Due to the fact that the grain warehouses and elevators throughout the country are filled with surplus corn, the U. S. Department of Agriculture is urging all farmers who can possibly do so to provide farm storage for their grain this summer. In fact, the AAA is requesting us to find storage space for surplus wheat in this county and it is possible that two or three car loads will be shipped from Chicago by the Surplus Commodity Corporation to be stored in the East Jordan Co-Operative Company elevator.

The monthly AAA radio program was very ably presented by Mrs. Countis Mascho, Charlevoix County farmer fieldwoman who spoke over station WTCM at Traverse City, on Wednesday, April 29, at the usual time on the subject "Farm Women's Place in the War Program."

Enough steel goes into bottle caps each year to make at least 30 "ugly duckling" freighters.

On Guard

He doesn't carry a rifle or drive a tank. But night and day the telephone line patrolman does guard duty on a vital sector of the defense front — the Nation's communicatinns system.

He spends his working hours driving through city or country, climbing poles, walking alleys, going over fences — always on the watch. If he locates any source of telephone trouble, he either repairs it on the spot or immediately reports it. His job is to prevent service interruptinns before they can happen.

All telephone men and women realize their responsibility in maintaining and operating the nerve system that links our armed forces and the industries back of them. In spite of material shortages that make it increasingly difficult to meet service demands as promptly as in the past, they are determined that every war call will go through.

FOREST FIRE EMERGENCY IS DECLARED

Governor Van Wagoner Clamps Restrictions in North Areas

Governor VanWagoner declared April 22, that a serious forest fire emergency existed north of the Bay-Muskegon line and ordered all law enforcement officers to arrest anyone who builds a camp fire or smokes in other than authorized places.

Using emergency powers granted in 1923 the Governor issued a proclamation listing the drastic fire prevention regulations which will become effective April 22. The regulations apply to all Michigan north of town line 12 and to Allegan and Muskegon counties.

The 1923 law permits the Governor to invoke the following provisions in case of emergency:

"It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to build a camp fire of any nature, except at authorized camp grounds or places of habitation: Further, it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to smoke a pipe, cigarette, or cigar except at places of habitation, authorized improved camp grounds, or in any automobile or vehicle operating on state or county highways; further, it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to throw from such automobile or vehicle any matches, ashes, burning tobacco, or other burning material; and further, it shall be unlawful for any person to burn or cause to be burned any rubbish, slashings, brushpiles, or stumps unless a permit to do so is obtained."

"All persons commissioned to enforce the laws of this state are hereby ordered to give special effort to the enforcement of this proclamation," the Governor said.

Violation of the special regulations will be considered as a misdemeanor.

4-H CLUB LEADER IS GIVEN PROMOTION

Orville Walker Goes to Marquette As Assistant State Leader

Orville Walker, of Boyne City, district 4-H club leader, will leave June 1 for Marquette to begin the position of assistant state club leader for the upper peninsula, to which position he was recently promoted.

He will trade positions with Clare Rood, present upper peninsula assistant state leader, with headquarters at Marquette. Rood will begin his duties as district leader for Cheboygan, Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet counties on June 1.

Walker, a former Alba high school teacher and athletic coach, is in his seventh year as district leader. He has made a splendid record. Nineteen of his demonstration teams were state winners and six of his district judging team members won places on the state judging teams. Members have won national contests and $4,680 in scholarships.

Re-enrollment increased since he became district leader from 55 per cent to 72.3 per cent. Tenure of club members increased from 1.87 years to 2.52 years.

Highest enrollment in his district was Antrim county with Cheboygan second.

MARY BASTIAN AND LAWRENCE FEINDT MARRIED SATURDAY

The wedding of Miss Mary C. Bastian and J. Lawrence Feindt, both of Charlevoix, took place Saturday evening at 7 o'clock at Trinity Lutheran church in Kalamazoo. The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bastian, of Albion, while the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Feindt, of Kalamazoo.

Rev. Claudius Jensen read the double ring ceremony in the presence of immediate families of the couple. Bouquets of daffodils at the altar made a lovely background for the wedding.

Attendants were Miss Margaret de Merse, of Charlevoix, and Clyde Hinckley, of Kalamazoo, brother-in-law of the groom. Traditional wedding music was played by the bride's sisters, Mrs. Leland Bradley, of East Lansing, at the organ, and Miss Lois Marian Bastian, of Albion, on the cello.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in hyacinth blue silk crepe, with matching turban. Her bouquet was of talisman roses and yellow snapdragons. Miss de Merse wore rose crepe, with black accessories, and carried a bouquet of mixed snapdragons.

Dinner for seventeen guests was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hinckley, following the ceremony. Bouquets of daffodils were on the table. In the center was the wedding cake, with bride and groom figurines under a floral arch on top.

After a short trip to Battle Creek, Mr. and Mrs. Feindt returned to Charlevoix, and are residing at the See apartments.

FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

Garden Work To Do Now

Too much and too deep hoeing of tiny young plants may leave them cut off from an ample moisture supply.

When planting Oriental poppies in spring, set pot-grown plants only and make sure to handle them early and carefully.

Avoid deep cultivation of grafted trees and shrubs. Injury to the roots of some kinds may induce the production of "wild" suckers.

Collect and burn dead leaves of bearded iris and peonies promptly, thus helping to check the carry over of borers and blight fungi.

Established clumps of peonies will benefit from feeding each of them with a handfull of complete fertilizer as soon as their new growth is well started. Be careful not to let the fertilizer lodge on the soft young shoots.

Do not feed the strawberry bed which is expected to fruit this year. Even new planting which are intended for next year's cropping will grow better, if the soil is prepared in advance of setting out the plants than if fertilizer is applied later.

Modern rose growers do not prune rose bushes as severely as was long the custom. More flowers and greater vigor result from leaving more wood on the plants. Weak or injured stems should be removed. Exceptionally long stems are best cut back to the average height of their fellows.

All successful vegetable growers keep their plants in straight rows for orderliness and ease of cultivation. Wide rows are made twice the width of narrow rows and still wider rows exact multiples of the narrowest. Such spacing makes it easier to plant succession of crops of different stature. A row running the entire length of the garden may contain several kinds of plants.

MARCH GAME VIOLATIONS DREW FINES, JAIL TERMS

Killing an eagle, shooting muskrats, and possessing a gaff hook along a trout stream were among the 182 violations of conservation laws in March that since have resulted in 274 days of jail sentences, $1,650 in fines and $1,200 in court costs.

TEMPORARY RED CROSS OFFICERS ARE CHOSEN

Mrs. Allen Campbell Elected Chairman of Works Production

At a meeting of Charlevoix county Red Cross directors at the city hall Monday evening, three temporary officers were selected to serve until the annual meeting in October.

Mrs. C. F. Krieghoff, of Boyne City, was appointed chairman to succeed Mrs. C. A. Leslie, whose resignation was due to her numerous other duties. Mrs. Howard Taft, of East Jordan, is vice-chairman to succeed Mrs. F. O. Barden, of Boyne City, whose other work also did not permit her to give the necessary time to Red Cross. Mrs. S. B. Neymark was named director for Boyne City, as the former director, Mrs. Orville Walker, is moving to Marquette. New officers for these positions will be elected in October.

Mrs. Allen Campbell, of this city, is works production chairman for the county, taking over the offices formerly held by Mrs. F. O. Barden and Mrs. Robert Gerrie, of Boyne City. Mrs. Campbell was formally elected to this position, not temporarily appointed.

Out-of-town directors here for the meeting were Mrs. Kreighoff, Mrs. Gerrie, Mrs. Walker and Mrs. W. C. Naylor, of Boyne City; Mrs. Taft, Miss Ethel Crowell, Mrs. John Porter and Mrs. George Sherman, of East Jordan; Mrs. Ralph Price, of Ironton.

NAVY SEEKING YOUNG MEN FOR AIR CORPS

High School Graduates May Now Qualify for Training

The navy has announced that high school graduates may qualify to become aviation officers with the rank of ensign in the naval reserve or second lieutenant in the marine corps reserve.

The navy thus for the first time has offered young men with only a secondary education the opportunity to apply for flight training leading to commissioned officer status. Recruiting will begin Monday and candidates between 18 and 27 who have graduated from high school may apply.

Candidates will be sent to one of the new aviation induction centers — located at the Universities of Iowa, Georgia, North Carolina and St. Mary's College, Calif., for the three months "toughening" course. After this will come regular flight training.

Throughout the entire period candidates will be paid in accordance with their ratings. Aviation cadets receive $75 a month plus subsistence and uniforms. Ensigns and marine second lieutenants will receive $205 a month, plus allowances.

BEAVER TRAPPERS GET MORE PELTS THIS YEAR

Thirty Per Cent Increase Reported for Season Recently Closed

Beaver trappers took 30 per cent more pelts this spring than they did a year ago in lower Michigan, yet suggestions of a closed season next year to protect the beaver stock are widespread, the conservation department reports.

Conservation officers sealed 2,266 pelts this April, 519 more than the lower peninsula produced in 1941. These were taken by 812 regularly licensed trappers and one man who trapped 31 beavers in Wilderness state park, under permit from the parks division. At an average price of about $25, the value of the 1942 crop exceeds $55,000.

Gladwin, Mio and Atlanta districts reported the largest catches, with takes of 544,536, and 521 beavers respectively. Only 14 were sealed in the Traverse City district, and only 60 were sealed at Baldwin. Seals were put on 349 beavers taken from Roscommon, Crawford, Kalkaska and Missaukee counties in this district, and 211 were accounted for in the Boyne City district.

Persons over 18 years of age away from home should register at the point they are located. Even though families have over the minimum amount of sugar allowed per person, they should register, for the books may later be used for rationing other items. A separate application blank is filled out for each individual. Anyone failing to register on the designated dates must wait two weeks before applying for a book from the rationing board.

Full instructions regarding mechanics of the rationing plan will be issued each person at time of registration. It is estimated 2,200 persons will be registered at Charlevoix, providing an enormous task which dwarfs in its extent even the largest military service registration.

PCA SERVICE IS DISCONTINUED TO NORTH

Grand Rapids-Soo Run Taken Off Last Monday For Duration

Northern Michigan will see no more of the daily PCA liner for the duration, is the opinion of officials of that company following their cancellation of regular trips from Grand Rapids to the Soo.

The last round trip departed for the Furniture City Monday morning.

The announcement, received by Ernest Bressin, station manager at the Emmet county airport, also means service discontinued at Traverse City and Soo. Reason given is the fact that the government will take over 25 per cent of the commercial planes of the country for transportation of men, freight and war materials.

GIVE FLOWER SEEDS TO SCHOOL CHILDREN

Garden Club To Distribute Seeds Monday to First Six Grades

The Garden Club is sponsoring a bulb and zinnia seed distribution next Monday, May 4, at 3:15 in the community room in the grade school building, to encourage children to make gardens.

Any child in the first six grades may get seeds and bulbs if he has a note from his parents to insure that they will not be wasted. In the fall there will be another flower show contest, and it is hoped that many of the children will grow their own flowers to enter in the competition.

CHARLES RICHARDSON IS GRADUATE OF AIR CORPS

Announcement from the public relations office at Chanute Field, Ill., states that Charles Richardson, of Charlevoix, was recently graduated from the Chanute Field branch of the U. S. Army air corps technical school.

THE HOME FRONT

"There is a place for everybody in this war effort."

These words of Poul V. McNutt, chairman of the newly created War Manpower Commission, form the keynote of a huge mobilization program.

The Nazis have mobilized the slave labor of Europe.

The U. S. A. is mobilizing the free labor of a free nation.

Hanging in the balance are the future of liberty, the fate of ourselves and our children and our children's children.

War for Survival

A mill hand in one of Detroit's war plants was the winner of a slogan contest. He suggested: 'U. S. A. — Unity, Service, Action," a war-cry which would insure victory.

Unity, Service, Action

It takes the work of 18 men to keep a single soldier on the battle line. U. S. war industry is going to need some 10,500,000 new workers soon.

At least an additional 2,000,000 young men will be called soon for services in the armed services.

These facts intensify the problem of farm labor. America and her allies must have more and more food products. Crops must be larger. How to accomplish this as farm workers leave for service on the battle line and more lucrative jobs in factory is one of the problems of manpower mobilization to be met by McNutt's new commission.

War - Work - Win

To meet the huge demands for man power, non-essential non-war industries must stop. This means greater sacrifices on the Home Front. Sacrifice is not the correct word, said President Roosevelt: "The United States does not consider it a sacrifice to do all one can, to give one's best to our Nation, when the Nation is fighting for its existence and its future life."

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Troop 1

Helen Jean Hammond

The Girl Scout cookie sale is progressing even better than was expected, and we have even made sales in the outlying districts of the city.

Troop 1 has decided to have another Rummage Sale Saturday, May 2, and our special motto for the week is, "Bigger and Better Rummage Sales." This time we will be open at night, too, and hope to have a big crowd.

Camp is still the goal, but we are having trouble finding leaders. Any volunteers will be more than welcome.

Troop II — By Sally Miller

The Scouts are doing fine on our cookie sale. We have already gotten in enough money to pay for all the boxes and still have quite a stock on hand.

I understand that our leaders are planning a better program for camp than ever before. There will be drawing and more sports.

COOPERATION SOUGHT ON FIRE PREVENTION

Situations Now Critical; Strict Enforcement Law Promised.

An appeal for conperation in forest fire prevention during the next few weeks, until warm weather and spring rains make forest cover green again, is coupled with a conservation department warning that its officers will be "tough" with violators of the ban on smoking and campfires in the woods during the critical days.

"When uninterrupted production of Michigan forest products is so essential to the war effort, fishermen and vacationers in the danger areas should—and I feel certain will—take the ban on smoking and campfires in good spirit, for most fishermen are topnotch sportsmen," P. J. Hoffmaster, conservation director said.

"But so long as there are a few persons of alien sympathies in our midst, we shall have to be tough with all persons found using fire where it has been forbidden."

Hoffmaster said the critical period is expected to pass within a week or two.

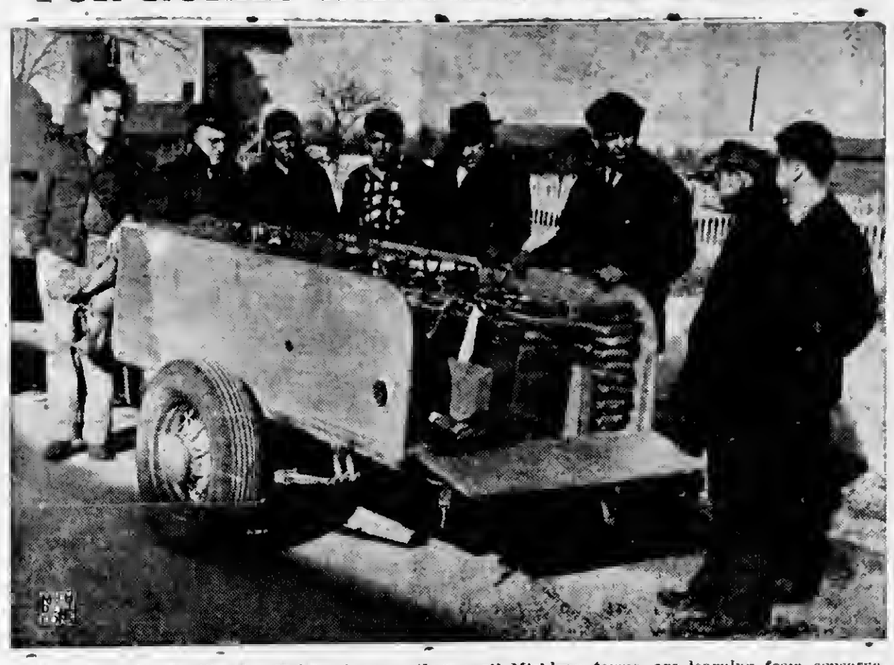
FOR RURAL WARTIME FIRE DEFENSE



Ottizens of Hillman, like the officials of many other small Mtchlgan towns, are learning from conservation department men (in service cap and fur cap) how they tany protect their rommunity from wartime fire hazards, including incendiary bombs dropped by enemy aircraft. The light, fast-towing trailer being demonstrated was developed to fight forest fires, but tho bark pnmps, water cans, water buckets, axes, shovels and other tools will equip a fire fighting squad for any rural commnnity now without organized fire protection. Handbooks describing small power pumpers and other fire fighting devices are being distributed by the conservation department to rural defense offieials now prepartag to meet wartime fire

COMMUNICATION

The following interesting letter was written from Honolulu, Hawaii, by Lew Allen to his sister, Miss Olive Allen, this city, and is publishrd brrewith by her generous permission:

"Life goes along the same as ever with us, or maybr a little less. Blnrkout now from 7:30 p. m. to 7:00 a. m. wnr time. We like the hour ahead idea. About 5 or 6 years ago the legislnture forgot itself nnd passed a good lnw—the daylight savings lnw. Most everybody liked it but it interfered with the morning golf gome of one of our Supreme Court judges so the legislature repealed the lnw that same session. But now the military governor makes the law and the judges are just guys who used to have guod johs.

Did I tell you nhout our bomh shelter? The hoys got patriotic, scared or something and started digging in. I knew the yard is underlaid with solid rock, so I appointed myself timekeeper and hend discourager. With this aid thry finally got a hole dug 5 feet wide, 6 feet deep and about 12 feet long. Jimmie, who lives in bark of us, started to build a fenre last summer. He built it in back of the hedge and the landlord Caminos would not let him finish it because it was not on the line and he feared I would try to claim 6 fret of his land. So Jimmie gnve me the pickets and we nailed thrm together to make 3x4-inch rafters. Then we had a couple old solar heaters made out of thin sheet iron (one I had just taken off the roof on Dec. 6). These we plnced over the rafters. There was n lot of scrnp lumber from the Appts. we had saved for firewood, etc. The board of health cnme bellyneching around thnt it was piled too clnse to the ground, so we put it on the sheet iron (it was now 6 feet off the ground). Then we throwed the dirt we had dug out back on the top of the lumber. Built a couple of henches, laid a pipe nnderground with electric rable in with outlets for light, coffee perrolator, radio and fan. Put in some mats, hatchet, nails, flashlight, cnndles, a big tin can with tight cover filled with crnckers, sardinrs, tinned ment, coffee, etc., n jug of water nud as the auctioneer snys—other artirles too nnermous to mention. Had 11 people in it with two dogs and all able to breathe. Has rnined a lot the last two months, hut so far our "cockroach cellar" has stayed dry. Have had three alsrms since we rompleted it. Made a chart which we nailed up inside our back door listing what to do when air raid siren blows: 1. Get gas mask—everybody has one on or elose by at nll times; 2. get coat or sweater—gets rool setting very long; 3. get blanket; 4. Get radin—might be important annonnrement made; 5. get green box—all my jewels in it; 6. get extra light—can have bright light in daytime; 7. get flashlight; 8. get magazines—other folks may grt monotonous nfter while; 9. see stove turned off—might run up electric bill; 10. turn on switch to shelter; 11. fill laundry trays—generally kept filled as mains might be bombed; 12. check the water jug—change water every Sunday anyway.

This may seem like n lot to do when enemy is on way to drop eggs on one, but we figure the planes would be spotted at lenst 100 miles awny or at least 10 or 15 minutes, and if you don't hurry one person can do all this in 3 or 4 minutes.

Boys started school about February 15. Go from 12:30 to 4:30 p. m. Are at school about half a mlle fram home, so are sent home when air rald sounds.

They are giving everybody typhoid "shots" and vaccination. It will be ecmpulsory after April 1. Until then it is given free. I got mine lnst fnll. Merta and boys got first shots yesterday. They got tetanas shots awhile ago. I must go and get mine soon as I can.

Yesterday Charlie Cellnrr dropped in to see us from about 1:30 to 5:30. Had to back at 6 p. m. Gets off about every two weeks, but never on Sanday. He and Mettn had quitr a visit. He seemed like such n nire boy nnd it being his first time to see us, I did not try to borraw any money from him. Looks fine, but then the hoys in the army get butter to eat. Today was our 19th anniversary, so I tried to get Metta n pound of hatter. The manager af the store is a good friend of ours and ho promised me if we could be there at 8:30 tomorrow morning when they opened up, he would try to see we got some butter nnd mrat if they got nny in. Have plenty of canned goods, but meat and butter are erratic. Never know when they will be out. No mainland fruits. Can't get apples, oranges, lemons, grapefruit, so have to depend on island fruit. Plenty of pineapples and lnmunas nt prices only n little above what they would cost you in Chnrlevoix. The main breakfnst fruit is the papoia. It grows on a tree, is slightly pear-shaped and resembles a muskmellon and for a person who rrally loves muskmellon, to have a nice pupoin set before you nnd to sprinkle it lightly with salt and to place a nice juicy piece in your mouth and close your eyes—oh, boy, the first taste is sure an exquisite disappointment—the second taste ronfirms your worst suspicion—even a mouthful of cold restaurant coffee will taste good by comparison. Some people like them. Some think salt improves them—some put an lemon juice. I have tried salt, lrmon, vinrgur, mastard, horerndish, soyn sauce, tobosco and even a mixtrue of spavin cure and rarbolic acid, but no matter what I use it still tastes like papoia to me. They contain lots of pepsin nnd are considered very healthy like spinach and garlic. I think everybody else should eat lots of them.

Then is certain sensons we have mangoes. They are much like a peach and most of them very much clingstone and full of shreads Some are free of shreds but have very little flavor. Like all fruit, the kids likr them best when green. Our kids seem to prefer them when they can crark them with a hammer. During the mango srason the hospitals are filled with kids with broken legs and arms, proving that mango trees have brittle limbs—and so do some kids. The real ripe mango, due to its mushy juicyness nnd fibers, is best eaten in the nude while reclining in the bathtub, altho vicious hostesses have been known to servo thrm to unwary or unwelcome guests at the table. Oh, yes, their taste is something like that of a slightly over-ripe pearh that has been frightened by a papnia.

Growing wild are lots of guavas. They lnk like lemons and grow on bushes. The meat on the outside, about 18 inches thirk. The renter filled with pulp and seeds. Some sweet, some tart. Are good to eat rnw, but mostly made into jam and jelly. Jelly mnde in nsual way, but mnking jam the big job is removing the seeds. We generally work the pulp thru a cullander and then u sieve. The cullander removes abuot 60 per cent of the seeds, the sieve about 38 per cent. The other 2 per cent are removed from between the teeth with a nutpick. People with sore teeth prefer peanut hutter sandwiches.

Must quit for now before I run out of facts nud have to start rumors."

RAY S. HAMILTON, Clerk ROBERT BRIDGE, Mayor

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

It was indeed pleasant to spend 10 days bark home the early part of this month and I truly morr than enjoyed visiting with friends and discussing with them the many problems ronfronting our nation and its peoples. I only regret that due to limited time, I was unable to visit as many of the rountles in our district as I had hoprd. I returned to my office the 13th and although Congress was in session all last week, no important legislative mensures were taken up in the House. However we expret thnt beginning the middlr of this week we'll he more than busy again on the floor.

I found while travelling around home tbat many af aur women were interested in learning what Washington women, and esperially wives of Congressmrn, are doing to aid our war effort. I shall briefly endeavar to relate some of Mrs. Bradley's netivities which are typical.

I noted from our district papers that many ladies hack home are availing themselves of the various Red Cross rourses offered at this time to better prepare our civilian population in the event raids should actually occur over our states. Mrs. Bradley has rompleted the standard first aid course, the advanced first aid course and nlso a course in nutrition. Washington, being a larger city than any in our distrirt and being more vulnernble to air attack, offers many other courses in the line of civilian defense. Up to this time, my wife has also rompleted a course in rivillan protection, which was sponsored hy tho Amerlran Women's Volunteer Association. Thrn, too, thr Red Cross here offers what is known as its "Canteen Course" which is directed at mnss feeding of refugees, troops and so on. Thls is a 10-hour coursr. Mrs. Bradley expects to take this course together with one in "home nursing" in the near future. Just like many of you back home, our Washington women are doing thrir share of knitting, folding bandages, etc. My wife works at the Red Cross quarters on Mondays from nine in the morning until four in the nfternoon. On Tuesdays shr serves in the Information booth at the Union Station from three in the afternoon until six. Saturdays she spends three hours at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club doing ennteen work. Thls Club provides meals and beds for boys who stop over in Washington enroute to their camps. All work in this Club is voluntary. All in all, thrre are innumerable plares here where women can do their part toward our war effort. Mrs. Bradley is also a blood donor to the "Plasma Fund."

Soo Lock Defense

While up at the Sault, I was especially comforted to view rerent protective nnd defense precautions made at this strntegic locality. I know thnt the greatly increased number of men in uniform now stationed there mny be depended upon to give a first-rate account of themselves should they ever be called upon to defend that area against any eventuality. I trust likewise that in the near future, we will be successful in having that area designated as a defense area in order that murh needed new housing, hospital and school construction may be undertaken and facilities provided for our new soldiers and their families there and nlso for the new lock construction crews which are due to arrive in the near future.

Navy Pushing Women's Auxiliary Idea

The House naval affnirs committee unanimously reported the past week a bill by Representative Mans (Minn.) providing for a Women's Navy Auxiliary Reserve. Like the proposed Womrn's Army Auxiliary Corps, the Nnvy expects to utilize women to do non-combatant work on lond and thus relense men now doing thnt type work for netive service. No limit has as yet been set as to the number who may volunteer for Navy service. The minimum ago limit has been set at 20 but the maximum has not as yet been determined. Thus far the bill sets no limit to rank, but it is said that tho Navy contemplates a top grade of Lt. Commander for the women with the same pay ns for the men officers.

Naming of New Lock

On April 15th Secretary of War Stimson submitted n favorable report to the House Rivers and Harbors Committee on my bill, H. J. Res. 294, naming the new Snult lork in honor of General Douglas MacArthur. This will be of interest to the Mackinnc County Conservation Club and others who wrote me suggrsting this name for the new lork.

So-ralled "scrub oak" lands of narth rentral Mirhigan nre not as a rule, forested by a single speries of oak, hat may have as many as five different nrieties of oak trees in mixture, arcording to the department of ronservation. Tho "scrub oak" is nnt a distinrt species of tree; it may he nny of several kinds of oak whose growth has been retarded by poor soil or molsture ronditions, or both.

Banker Becomes Fire Fighter

Registration of civilians as volunteer "forest fire cooperators" is now in full swing in northern Michigan headquarters of the state conservation department. Here Doble Munn, Roscommon banker and cottage owner, fills out a card for Conservation Officer Paul Lauce, telling where he may be reached for emergency forest fire duty. Loss of trained personnel to the army and war industry made necessary the enrollment of civilian cooperators to meet the double threat of normal hazards plus sabotage of Michigan's important wood products industry.

"Auto Future on Firm Ground" announces an article describing the economic and social value of the pleasure automobile. "All signs point to a continued development of the industry for several years to come—for just how long it is difficult to say."

The chief of police wishes to warn auto drivers to remember that the speed limit on Bridge and State streets is ten miles and on all others fifteen. Also tail lights must be lit. One driver is trying to get along without head lights.

Miss Ola Essler and Ernest Kibbe were married in Petoskey on Monday evening, April 23. They will reside in South Haven, where Mr. Kibbe is a member of the coast guard.

Signs of spring: Lights on the pier were lit for the first time this season Thursday, April 19. The steamer "Columbia" made her first trip Saturday, with Capt George Weaver in command. Lansing Shoals lightship, which laid up here this winter, is now at the foot of Mason street fitting out. Gray's Reef lightship has gone back to the supply station dock. Both vessels will leave about May 1. The ore barge "Venezuela," laid up at East Jordan this winter, came in Friday and docked at the Lumber Company's dock. The fish tug "Geiken," which went out last Friday, was the first vessel to poke her nose out of the harbor since close of navigation last fall.

C. H. Minnis has gone to Detroit to visit his children. He has sold his shoe repairing business to Ed. Coldstick, next door to Jeffries market.

They will start to lay cable this week for the electric light wires on Dixon avenue.

Capt. Sanford was the highest bidder on the Str. Hancock, recently offered for sale by the U. S. government at Kewaunee, Wis. (Such items don't appear in the news today—the big boat-buyer these days is Uncle Sam himself).

With but very few exceptions, wages of all city employees from the mayor down to the day laborer, were clipped by action of the city council Monday evening. The reduction will save taxpayers $2,000.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Camp Roberts, Calif.
April 19, 1942.

Dear Ken:

Thought I would drop you a few lines and let you know how much I have been enjoying the Courier the past few weeks. I look forward to every Monday when I receive your paper, as there is nothing better than getting news from back home.

I left Camp Roberts a few days ago and am now stationed at a camp near the coast which I'm not supposed to mention, as my letters are all censored now. Would like to receive a couple more copies at my new address.

I hear there is a shortage of paper, so will bring this letter to a close, but before I do, I want to thank you for sending the Courier. I appreciate your kindness.

Sincerely yours,
Pvt. Herbert L. Ager.

Flag Allowance,
Commander Serv. Force, Pacific
c-o Postmaster, San Francisco,
California

Dear Ken:

It has been sometime since I last wrote you, and I want you to know that the papers arrive sooner or later, depending on the mails service, and I find myself reading and re-reading almost every line. Your letters from the fellows in the service are of great interest. Through them I have been able to locate a few of the boys from home and only a few days ago I met Charles Cellner while I was ashore and of course we had a full afternoon talking of things back home. Haven't seen much of Bill Eccleston lately, guess the Army is keeping him rather busy these days; aren't we ALL?

I enjoyed the pictures in "Life" of the athletic program at Great Lakes and of course the letter of Charles Carey gave me great pleasure in knowing that he is back of all that extensive training there. Good going, Chuck, and keep up the good work.

A letter from Ray Nowland, U. S. M. C., said that he expected to leave any day for some scene of action, but didn't know whether it was east or west, so only time will tell.

Well Ken, I could ramble on for quite some time, but better I close for now. Give my regards to yours,

Sincerely,
Bob.

* SIMPLER STYLES *
* BEST BET IN WAR *
* * * * * * * * * *

Good clothes, cut on simple styles, will remain in style for the duration.

That's the promise of Merle Ford, head of the Michigan State College department of textiles, clothing and related arts of the home economics division.

There may be narrower skirts, no full sleeves, pockets or collars and the seams and hems may be narrower and jackets and skirts shortened by the war emergency affecting women's clothes. Manufacturers are asked to reduce the amount of goods put in many garments.

"Even though the war Production Board does set limitations on the amount of goods used in any one garment, our clothing need not have a deadly monotony," comments Miss Ford.

"One definite contribution the government restrictions seek is to obtain 16 per cent more garments out of the fabric that is to be cut for new clothing for women."

Out of the emergency Miss Ford expects to see some actual contributions to future styling of women's clothes. One immediate effect likely will be clothes designed to promote efficiency on the job, clothes made from materials that will remain in good condition with a minimum of care, and made of materials exceedingly durable.

Modern stylists laugh at the "funny old shoes" and the limitations set on corset stays in World War I. Yet the style for those went out with that war period and didn't return, which gives Miss Ford reason to assert that the present emergency may bring out desirable style trends in women's clothes.

"Citizen Kane," New Dramatic Hit, With Famous Orson Welles

For more than a year film patrons have waited for Orson Welles to complete his much-discussed, initial picture, "Citizen Kane." The picture written, produced and directed by Welles himself and featuring him in the title role, comes to the Palace Theatre here Wednesday and Thursday, May 6 and 7, with the promise of exciting unusual attention from the screen-going public.

As the title implies, the film deals with the career of an American citizen, Charles Foster Kane. But no title could suggest the wealth of incident Welles has put into the story, the brilliant and often clashing characterizations of Kane himself as seen through the different eyes of those who knew him best during his years of creating a vast one-man empire, or the novel method by which the tale of Kane's amazing rise and decline is told.

His own experienced group of Mercury Actors handle most of the featured roles in the RKO Radio offering. Along with Dorothy Comingore and Ruth Warrick, they include Joseph Cotten, Everett Sloane, Ray Collins, George Coulouris, Agnes Smford and William Alland.

success is believed assured.

By use of the "club plan" where by workers pool and alternate use of their cars, the "Let's Ride Together" phase of the program has already increased passengers per car from an average of 1.3 to 2.0.

Staggering factory shifts, together with later opening of stores, offices and schools, has resulted in bus lines reporting that school and office bus loads formerly bunched from 7:45 to 9 have been spread between 8:30 and 10 and entirely miss the industrial workers. Buses are also operating under capacity between the hours of 10 and 2:30, showing that shoppers are using the facilities to further advance the plan.

Traffic volume also has been reduced materially according to police department reports, and a sharp drop in number of accidents and loss of man hours is hailed as an important secondary result of the conservation program.

In March, 1941, Pontiac experienced 295 traffic accidents in the city as compared with only 170 for the first 26 days of March this year. "Not only is traffic spread out more evenly," said Lieut. Edward Shigley, of the police traffic division, "but volume has been reduced materially. Formerly, traffic division counts showed an average flow of 1,000 vehicles an hour on South Saginaw street, one of the principal thoroughfares. This recently has been cut by 100 vehicles an hour."

As success of the "Michigan Plan," became more certain, field representatives of the Automotive Safety Foundation reported more than 1,000 inquires had been received already at the Washington office. The plan also has the approval of the Highway Traffic Advisory Committee to the War Department, and the city of Detroit, confronting its most critical period in 20 years of operating the street railway system, is seriously considering adoption of the plan for getting the maximum use out of limited transportation facilities.

"To aid other cities in developing a war conservation traffic plan," Kennedy stated, "results of the Pontiac experiment are being compiled and will soon be made available to all interested cities and organizations."

Work of perfecting an organization for the volunteer war-time program was turned over to Leonard C. Sauer, administrative assistant to Commissioner Kennedy. The organization includes local advisory and technical committees, co-administrators for industry, labor, business and bus companies, and scores of volunteer workers.

To gain a minimum use of automobiles, the program calls for a discontinuance of all unnecessary driving, a "club plan" for factory workers whereby not less than four persons ride and alternate use of their cars, and effective use of all other transportation facilities.

Maximum use of buses was obtained by staggering factory shifts, rescheduling of buses, school hours, business and office hours, and by getting housewives to shop at off-peak times.

Extent to which the plan affects the lives of the average person may be seen by the fact that war plants rescheduled shifts. Those in the north part of the city now start at 6, 7, and 8 a. m., and those in the south sections at 6:30, 7:30 and 8:30 a. m.

Stores have changed their opening hour from 9 to 10 o'clock and schools from 8:30 to 9 and 9:15. Other businesses have rescheduled their opening and closing hours so as to lengthen the peak transportation hours.

An example of the work done was in the formation of the "club plan" for war plant workers. Plant managers and union officials were contacted, and supported the plan 100 per cent.

Each worker was given a pledge card, upon which he listed the residence section number where he lives. All residential areas had been numbered and listed on large charts. Tabulations were made from the cards and workers brought together. Voluntary grouping also was encouraged and resulted in many workers forming their own clubs.

Once aware of the necessity for prolonging the life of all available transportation facilities, Commissioner Kennedy declared the universal acceptance of the Michigan Plan proves Americans are only too willing to make the sacrifices necessary to guarantee success of the war production program.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

A FEW weeks ago, I had occasion to visit some friends of mine in Nebraska.

Nebraska certainly is a great State. I like Nebraska. I like those immense cornfields that seem to stretch from horizon to horizon. (Plenty of wheatfields in Nebraska, too.)

But the thing that interests me most about Nebraska right now is the very important social experiment the beer people started there several years ago.

Beer itself is naturally a beverage of moderation. Yet, all too often, people are inclined to blame beer wrongly for any misconduct of the customer or the proprietor in a place licensed to sell beer.

So, the brewers got together to see what they could do about this. They weren't really responsible for their retailers . . . in fact, they're not allowed to control retailers. But the brewing industry worked out a plan by which it cooperates with the public authorities to eliminate bad conditions in the minority of places whose conduct would reflect on the law-abiding majority.

The beer people urge proprietors of retail places to conduct them properly and to obey the law. They urge consumers to cooperate, and ask the public generally to report law violations to the authorities. They send warnings to careless retailers and if conditions are not corrected they take the case up with the authorities. Naturally the authorities and the public have welcomed this as an added force in building respect for law and order.

That program is now operating in many states — and with the Nation at war, brewing industry organizations cooperate with civil and military authorities to assure good conditions in beer outlets around the army camps and naval stations.

Somehow, to me, that's a mighty important, public-spirited effort. I don't know of anything like it ever having been tried before. If people really help the brewers with that program they'll be doing a great thing for the country.

TAXES and the AXIS

THIS is the most costly war of all time and everyone of us might as well recognize the fact that we will be paying for it for years in the form of higher taxes.

Our advice is this: Make taxes part of your budget. There are many reasons why you should provide for taxes in advance—but the best reason is that it's plain common sense. A bank account provides a convenient way to accumulate tax money.

"Roosevelt Lowers American Living," says headline of an exchange newspaper's article on the president's price-fixing move this week. Just as it stands, the Republicans could use that line. That's what they've said for 10 years.

Charlevoix county citizens have been lax in their attitude toward men departing for military service. But let us all hope that is something of the past and that next Wednesday when the send-off program is held for the 42 men leaving for induction, everyone will be on hand to join in giving them a rousing farewell—one that will linger in their memory throughout the time they serve the cause. The sacrifice some may be called upon to make is so great that it dwarfs into the smallest significance any effort on our part.

Ralph "Ham" Hamilton is to be highly commended for his initiative in the forming of what is to be known as the Charlevoix Service Organization — a body through which every local church, fraternal, service, study and patriotic club in Charlevoix may coordinate their efforts in any undertaking made necessary by wartime conditions. In the past there has been no unwillingness on the part of these organizations to assume a share in any public endeavor, but due to lack of organization, there has been overlapping and sometimes stagnation. The Charlevoix Service Organization is the answer.

If it doesn't rain pretty soon, the Kansas dust bowl won't have anything on northern Michigan. Extended warm, clear weather has resulted in development of flowers and foliage far in advance of the same date in many previous years. But no mushrooms yet.

Fellows who had their newly-painted boats in the water sure put up an awful wail, and justly so, about the huge quantity of either paint or oil dumped onto the surface of Round lake harbor Monday. Nobody seems to know who was responsible, but whoever it was should have been made to repair the damage done.

It's kinda difficult to recognize the alley alongside our plant since Scott & Houck finished their improvements and cleaned up the alleyway and Don Campbell had the rear walls of his building painted. Nice going, fellows!

There's going to something happen with the north pier along the Channel between Lake Michigan and Round lake. If I can ever pry the information out of someone, will tell you about it.

WAR BOND AND STAMP SALES ARE CLIMBING

Turn the Blitz on Fritz with Dimes and Dollars

An encouraging spurt in War bond sales in this county is indicated by figures covering the last two-week period.

Boyne City sold $2,375 in bonds and $527 in stamps.

In East Jordan, $3,025 in bonds was sold, $199.50 in stamps.

Charlevoix's sales amounted to $6,950 for bonds, $684.50 for stamps.

Total sales show the three cities holding the same relative positions; Charlevoix leading with $63,245.70, Boyne City second with $54,347.45, and East Jordan third with $51,183.90.

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR DRAFTEES IN LOCAL HOMES BEING SOUGHT

Here is an opportunity for patriotically inclined local citizens to perform a real act of service for men called to serve in our armed forces!

J. M. Foster, chairman of the county draft board, states that on numerous occasions men from distant parts of the county, arriving here a day early to be on time to report for induction, have been forced to pay for meals and lodging.

To alleviate this condition, Mr. Foster asks that persons willing to provide room and meals for selectees when such occasions arise call the draft board office, phone 155, so that a list of accommodations may be compiled and filed for use when necessary. "It would be a gesture greatly appreciated by selectees and members of the draft board," Mr. Foster stated.

While modern ideas and methods for curing tuberculosis may cost more money, they will obtain more lasting "cures," having fewer readmissions and will see more patients returned to active life instead of remaining chronic semi-invalids.

STATE GOP PARTY POLICY OUTLINED

FAVOR BONUS FOR SERVICE IN PRESENT WAR

Would Make Right to Vote Available to Men, Women, Outside State and Country

Harry F. Kelly, secretary of state and announced candidate for the Republican nomination for governor next September, announced that the Republican party of Michigan is definitely on record in favor of legislative action at the earliest moment providing for payment of a bonus to Michigan men and women who served in the armed forces of the United States in the present war, and to make the right of the use of the ballot more available to eligible Michigan men and women outside of our state and in the armed forces of our country.

Mr. Kelly stated: "I can safely make that statement because of the fact that Senator D. Hale Brake, president pro tem of the Senate, Howard Nugent speaker of the House of Representatives, and Representative George Higgins, have this date presented me with definite commitments from over 70 Republican representatives and senators, committing themselves to such a legislative program.

"I shall be very pleased to do everything within my power to see to it that legislation is so provided, and if I am elected Governor of the State of Michigan, I shall consider it a privilege to do my part toward bringing such legislation into existence. There is no reason why five years should elapse as it did after the last war.

"The word bonus, in my opinion, does not really convey the idea of this type of legislation. I realize that this word is used, however, because of the fact that the legislation such as we here contemplate, was given this name after the last war.

MUSEUM COMMITTEE COLLECTS MATERIAL

Contributions of Historical Data May Be Taken to Library

Weekly meetings of the city museum committee are being held at the public library for the purpose of collecting historical material from files of the Charlevoix Sentinel. Articles are to be typewritten and bound in book form for use in the museum.

The committee will be grateful for the loan of any pictures or other material of interest relating to Charlevoix county history. Any contributions to the museum should be left with Miss Minnie Payton, librarian.

ISSUANCE IDENTIFICATION CARDS STOPPED

Conforming with orders from the Chicago office, issuance of Coast Guard identification cards to boat operators and crew members has been discontinued. Applications now on file will not be completed, it was stated. No reason for the action, nor substitute for the system inaugurated some time ago, has been announced.

MOTOR BOATS TO HAVE LARGER SIZE LETTERS

New Federal Ruling Increase Size of Numbers On Hull

While no instructions have been received at the local coast guard station, Fred J. Heffner, deputy customs collector at Detroit, has announced receipt of a federal ruling that all motor-propelled boats on the Great Lakes must bear identification numbers at least six inches high on their hulls.

He added, however, that the ruling will not be enforced until after June 1 and that officials are awaiting clarification of the federal order.

Heffner said that so far as can be determined, six inch numbers will be required for vessels 10 to 20 feet long, 10 inches for vessels 20 to 40 feet long, 18 inches for boats 40 to 60 feet long, and 24 inches for all boats over 60 feet.

The ruling, he said, applies only to boats on the lakes and adjoining bodies of water. It does not apply to sail boats.

NORTHERN TRACK EVENT SATURDAY

CLASS C SCHOOLS COME HERE FOR ANNUAL MEET

Charlevoix Defending Title Won Seven Consecutive Years; Entry List Light This Year

Preparations are under way by local high school athletic officials for the sixth annual Northern Michigan class C conference track and field meet, scheduled Saturday, May 9, at south side athletic field.

While the only official entry to date has come from Onaway, Stewart E. Colemon, Charlevoix track coach, stated post entries may be received from Mancelona, Boyne City and East Jordan.

Charlevoix high school thinclads have won the event five successive years. In the 1941 event, local trackmen scored 84 points for a margin of 61 over Onaway, nearest competitor.

In view of the anticipated light entry, events will be started at 10 a. m. and run off until completion. In the past, qualifying events have been held in the morning and finals in the afternoon.

With a well balanced team representing the school again this year, Charlevoix is favored to retain its title and, in view of individual performances in practice and at Mt. Pleasant last Saturday, Coach Coleman predicts the establishment of new conference records in the 880 relay, half mile event and shot put. Jim Feres put the shot 40 ft. 8 in. at Mt. Pleasant, bettering the conference record of 40 ft. 6 in. established by Bowmann, of East Jordan.

While a complete line-up of officials has not been announced, it is expected the list will include Ray Kipke, Wyatt Wilson, Harry E. Bingham, Robert Emrey and Drew Young.

EDWARD C. WILSON WAS TAKEN BY DEATH FRIDAY

The state health department offered assurance Monday the war would not interfere with its program of safeguarding the health of persons visiting Michigan's vacation areas.

One concrete effect of the war, however, it noted, will be a new type sign designating approved supplies of drinking water, due to a shortage of metal for producing the usual signs.

Relay Teams Made Fine Showing In Record Field of Twenty-Two Class C Schools

Competing in a field of 22 class C schools, largest and best on record, Charlevoix high school athletes made a fine showing Saturday in the Central Michigan high school relays at Mt. Pleasant.

In comparison with a year ago, when the team failed to qualify in any event, Coach Stewart Coleman's trackmen took nine places in eight events against competition producing numerous new records.

In the mile relay, Jancha, McMillan, Foster and Swanson placed second. Stewart, Carey, Martin and Hallett were third in the 440 relay, while Stewart, Carey, Feres and Hallett placed fourth in the 880 event. In field events, Feres placed fourth and Stewart fifth in the shot put; Martin was third in the broad jump; Martin and Swanson tied for fifth place in the high jump and Martin placed fifth in the high hurdles.

Imlay City gave the top performance in class C. Mt. Morris St. Mary's dominated class D competition, Traverse City and Fenton in class B, Flint Northern and Saginaw Eastern in class A.

MANY REGISTER FOR SUGAR BOOK

THURSDAY NIGHT CLOSES PERIOD FOR SIGNING

Sugar Returned to Market Tuesday With Limit of Half Pound Per Person Per Week

Sugar went back on the market Tuesday after a week's suspension, but only those who register and procure ration books can buy it from now on.

Over half of the people in the Charlevoix, Loeb, Grand View and Hilton school districts were registered for their sugar rationing books at noon Wednesday, after second day of the designated registration period which started Monday and ends Thursday night.

O. P. North, superintendent of schools, who, together with members of the school faculty, is conducting the registration for Charlevoix as other school faculties are doing throughout the nation, said that a total of 1410 persons out of an estimated 2600 eligibles in this district, had so far registered. He said 1374 books were issued, 527 Monday, 883 Tuesday, including 49 at Hilton school. The last registration will be held between 4 and 9 p. m. Thursday and it is hoped that a book will have been issued for every person in the area by close of registration hours that day. Those who fail must wait two weeks before applying to the county rationing board for ration books.

The ration books contain stamps, one of which must be turned in to the grocer for each sugar purchase. For the first eight weeks of the rationing program, sugar sales will be limited to eight ounces per week for each man, woman and child. The amount of sugar that may be bought with one stamp may be changed after that period, depending on the supply.

MERCHANTS DISCUSS OPA PRICE CEILING

Meet Friday Evening at City Hall To Discuss Plan

Merchants of Charlevoix and Antrim counties are invited to attend a meeting at the Charlevoix city hall, at 8 p. m. Friday, May 8, for explanation and discussion of the Office of Price Administration price ceiling plan.

This overall price ceiling plan is one of the most drastic measures this war has produced. Complete understanding of its effect on merchants and customers is imperative.

According to press dispatches, a force of men will be checking on merchants throughout the country and heavy penalties will be invoked in cases of non-compliance with the plan. Apart from this fact, it is the merchant's patriotic duty to co-operate in every possible way with the government in its pursuit of the war.

START PROGRAM OF FISH REARING

60,000 TROUT FOR STOVER CREEK PONDS

Fall-Spawning Rainbow, Brown and Brook Trout to Be Reared to Fingerling Stage

The 1942 fish rearing program of the Charlevoix Sportsman's Club opened last week with release of German brown and brook trout in Stover rearing ponds.

Roy Ranger, who had charge of preparing the ponds and assisted in transferring the fish, stated the Oden hatchery provided 20,000 German brown and 20,000 brook trout last week and in the near future would bring a consignment of 20,000 fall-spawning rainbow trout. The 60,000 fingerlings compares with 90,000 last year.

Upper ponds of the rearing system are being used for the fingerling trout. Later in summer when the fish have reached advanced stage, larger trout will be sorted out and placed in unoccupied ponds to separate them from the smaller ones. This method is expected to cut down heavy yearly losses through cannibalism, in other words prevent larger fish from eating the smaller.

Mr. Ranger stated that a 2-inch well driven last fall at the new Burns pond on McGeagh creek had, due to a general rise in water levels, developed into a flowing well and the flow of cold water would be utilized to maintain low water temperature required by trout in the pond. When drilled, water levels were so low that pumping would have been necessary.

One of the largest classes since the local unit was inaugurated took the course last winter, although only the four named above went through the examination to attain membership.

FARMERS FAVOR WHEAT CONTROL

FEDERAL MARKETING PLAN WILL BE CONTINUED

Incomplete Tabulation of Saturday Referendum Show 75% Voted OK on Proposal

Tabulations Sunday of the wheat growers' referendum indicated that more than 75 per cent favored continuance for another season of the federal marketing control program.

With about three-quarters of the expected total vote counted, the ballot for marketing quotas stood at 174,913. The opposition vote totaled 56,745. The vote already had been counted in most of the states where agriculture department officials expected substantial opposition, suggesting that the final figure would show approval by more than 75 per cent of those voting.

A two-thirds margin was needed for continuance of the program. The vote was cast Saturday in 40 wheat-growing states.

The wheat acreage this year is slightly less than 55,000,000 acres, compared with a peak figure of 80,000,000.

Advocates of the control program contended it was necessary because a two-year stock of wheat, accumulating from carry-over supplies and the 1942 production, would be on hand this fall. Moreover, the export market has virtually vanished.

The agriculture department also contends that a reduced wheat acreage will mean that farmers will turn to production of other supplies needed in these war days, such as meat, dairy and poultry products and vegetables.

The incomplete Michigan vote was 3,499 yes, 913 no.

Next Sunday, May 10th, is Mother's Day. If your mother is living, don't forget her.

A very definite need can be filled in Charlevoix by the newly-formed Charlevoix Service Organization, designed to merge for duration of the war efforts of all groups in worthwhile projects. One necessary requirement for success, however, is adequate financial support, thus donations are being solicited from organizations and individuals alike. Contributions from Fr. John W. Collins, Shakespeare Study Club and Baptist church are acknowledge. Others may be left with Dale Bradley at the Charlevoix State Savings Bank.

Unusual talents—

Yes, sir, her auntie played the piano by ear, and her uncle fiddled with his whiskers.

George (Won't Tell 'Em Where) Whitley made another limit catch of brook trout last Wednesday and Harold Tousley took the limit of nice "specs" Sunday from Monroe creek to top the week's performances on the trout fishing front. Otherwise the perch run is still going at top speed in Round lake. There aren't so many perch fishermen this year, though, as you've perhaps noticed. The Sunday a year ago comparable with last Sunday saw 91 boats anchored on Round lake at one time. I doubt if half that many could have been counted last Sunday. As for myself, if the number of trout caught happened to be the inducement that kept me at it, I'd have given up in disgust long before this.

A lot of new machinery and new steel work is being installed and considerable repair work done on the Pere Marquette Railway Co. swing bridge.

If Navy department wartime restrictions didn't prevent you from getting inside the place, you'd be able to see one of the ten new boats the Foster Boat Co. is build-

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

"These are times that try men's souls."

The above seven words, which logically fit into Michigan life of May, 1942, were written by Tom Paine in "The Crisis." The year was 1770.

Michigan life at this moment is a fast moving panorama. Rapidly fading away are "business as usual" practices. For example, nearly all durable goods will cease to be manufactured at the end of this month.

Rationing and price control have been instituted, almost overnight. Citizenry is being regimented for all-out war sacrifice. It is the period of economic dictatorship, democracy's answer to the threat of dictators and convincing proof of America's awareness of its world-wide "war of survival."

—Starting Monday, May 18, prices of important consumption goods such as meat, canned goods, clothing and drugs—will be pegged at their highest levels of March.

In terms of cents, the price control decree is expected to reduce living costs about 3 per cent below prices prevalent on May 1. Retailers must post public lists of ceiling prices.

On July 1 price control will affect retail services such as garages, tailors, laundries, dry cleaners and shoe repair shops, also as of March prices.

All retailers will be licensed by Uncle Sam. Violations may be punished by withdrawal of federal license, or fines not more than $5,000, or a year's imprisonment or civil suits for treble damages. Talk about an economic dictatorship!

Manpower in terms of human energies have been registered from ages of 20 to 65.

The registrations, as much as any other governmental action, have brought a realization of the war into nearly every Michigan home.

9th Photo Squadron,
Felts Field,
Spokane, Wash.

Dear Ken:

Don't know just how to put the words together to let you know how much I enjoy the paper, so you'll just have to take my thanks: It sure is swell to get the paper and find out what's going on at home even if we can't be there.

I saw "Chuck" Hebert, Harold Chew and Bud Gebeau in Jefferson Barracks. Saw "Chuck" one Friday eating catfish, then told him the perch were biting up home. Course that didn't make the catfish taste any better.

Was sent to Bradley Field, Conn., on the Easter week end. That sure was a swell country. The weather is almost like Michigan's. They have a nice field there. It has a lot over the State of Missouri. After the meals we had in Jefferson Barracks, the meals in Bradley Field were like a feast three times a day. Was only at Bradley Field a week, then was sent out here with the squadron. We haven't all the men yet, but they're picking them up every day.

The meals out here are just as good as Bradley Field. We sleep in tents with no lights or heat, so with the damp nights it gets pretty cold, but it sure is nice in the daytime. Most of us got sunburned on a hike we took last Sunday.

Sure had a nice trip out here. It only took four days and nights on a troop train. The longest stop we made was two hours in Lincoln, Neb. I think I like Iowa the best of any state I've seen so far. Not for the corn there, but the pheasants seem to grow like chickens. I believe I saw over a thousand from the train window while going through that state. Sure would like to go hunting there. Saw the place Custer made his last stand from the train window.

These Rocky Mountains are really something to see with the snow on them, but I'd trade them any day to get back to Michigan.

Well, Ken, thanks again for the paper. It sure helps out a lot.

Very truly yours,
Pvt. Richard C. Bergmann.

Following is a condensation of two letters received in the past week by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Bartholomew from their son, Capt. Clair Bartholomew, with the U.S. Army in Hawaii.

Dear Folks:

How are you all? I am just fine. Have been getting plenty of sleep lately and lots of fresh air. Sleeping in a tent has its advantages.

We have 9 portable buildings, 16' by 20'. We have seven of them up and two more to put up. When we get them erected, we will have all the battery under a roof except Lt. Campbell and myself. We can put 8 men in each building. Sixty-three of our men sleep in dug-outs. We are using one of the buildings for an office and it works out very nicely. Another we are using for a supply room, another for a first aid room and still another for a recreation room. We are going to build tables for the recreation room, so that our men will have a place to write letters. Also, we are going to have electric lights in our kitchen, supply room and recreation room. The engineers put running water and an outside shower up at our kitchen last week. We sure have been well cared for the last couple of weeks. We get just about everything we want over here, if we wait long enough for it. Uncle Sam is treating us fine.

We haven't moved since we arrived here the first of February, even though we have had four different addresses. I can't tell you where we are, but I can say this, we are still on the island of Oahu.

We had church here today in a building right close to us. Protestant at 9 and Catholic at 10:30. We will have church every Sunday from now on. I wasn't able to go as I was on duty. One of us officers has to be at our office at all time.

Have been doing more swimming lately. I have a pair of water goggles, and with these, I can see all kinds of tropical fish. The water was exceptionally clear today. I saw one fish that was a vivid yellow and black. It was a beautiful thing. I saw another with a lavender coloring. This water out here is full of fish. Wish I could take some pictures of them. These fish do not frighten easily and one can swim right up close to them before they swim away. The natives over here spear them while swimming.

CHAPTER XVIII

A half hour later Corkran report that Gee, after some "persuading," had given him enough information to justify turning back.

Mat then led the way into the common room aft, and he moved with a certain heedlessness, careless of the noise he might make. There he lighted one of the hanging lamps, and Corkran lighted another; and Mat turned toward the door of the Captain's cabin where Peter was asleep.

But before he could touch the door, it opened and Peter faced them. He stared from one to the other. There were six men and Mary, against him alone.

Peter must have read their faces; and guilt for a moment flickered in his so plainly every man there could see it. He leaped backward and slammed the door shut; but before he could bolt it, Corkran's weight against it forced it open and threw Peter headlong against the cabin wall, and Corkran after a moment's struggle pinned him helpless there.

Then Peter, his voice wheezing, asked in a sharp panic: "What is this, anyway? What's the matter?"

Mat Forbes said: "Bring him out here, Mr. Corkran."

"What's the matter?" Peter demanded. "What is this, mutiny?" Mary, watching him almost with sympathy, thought again that his beard was like a mask behind which his eyes flickered. Peter cried: "Blast you, get out of here, back where you belong!"

Mat Forbes spoke almost gently. "Mr. Corr, we're going back to Hoakes Bay to find Cap'n Corr."

"Find him?" Peter wetted his dry lips. "He's gone."

"We'll have a try, anyway."

"You can't find him. I told you what happened to him!"

Mat said: "We're going back to have a look, and Gee tells a different story."

"Gee?" This was Peter.

"Yes. He says you told him to say a lion killed Cap'n Corr; but he says Cap'n Corr never came out of the tussocks on the way up the ridge."

"He's a liar!"

"Not Gee. He wasn't lying. He knew it wasn't safe to."

"Then you scared him. A scared darky will say anything you want him to. I tell you he's lying."

"We'll go back and see for sure." Mat asked almost pleadingly: "Will you go along, sir? Or do we have to iron you?"

Peter, seeming to consider, moved absently toward the desk. He stood with one hand on top of it, looking down at it, his side toward them. Corkran had left the upper drawer a little pulled out; and suddenly Peter's hand dropped into that drawer.

But before he could fetch the weapon clear, Corkran with a leap bore him sidewise and down. The heavy revolver clattered against the edge of the drawer, was jerked by his fall from Peter's hand. Mat Forbes picked it up. Corkran held Peter flat, twisted him on his stomach, dragged him to his feet.

Peter was stony silent now. Mat Forbes turned to Mary. "You and Mr. McAusland move in here, into these cabins," he said briefly. "I'll iron him to the mizzenmast."

Later Mat came to speak to her. He was white with strain, but his voice was calm and steady.

"He's secured," he said. "I've left Mr. Corkran with him, and the door's bolted between. You'll be safe here. I'll go call the watch and wear ship, make back for Hoakes Bay. We'll be there, with luck, soon after day. Mr. McAusland can take the Cap'n's cabin. You have yours."

She asked in a whisper: "Do you think you'll find Cap'n Corr?"

"We'll find him if he's there," Mat Forbes told her gravely. Then his lips twisted in a wry grin. "Ma'am," he said, "we've got to, now. We're in too deep not to."

It was upon Mat Forbes that the responsibility for the Venturer and those aboard her now fell. Half persuaded by Mary, and then convinced by Gee's enforced confession, he had accepted the necessity of leading what was technically a mutiny. He had not read that treason never prospers, since if it succeed then none dare call it treason; but he understood quite clearly the implications of his own position. If Richard were found, dead or alive, Mat's action would be justified. If Richard were not found, then he and those who had supported him in making Peter captive were simply mutineers, damned not only by the laws but by all the tradition of the sea.

So, for their salvation, Richard must be found. Mat, on the way back to Hoakes Bay, questioned Gee. The Negro repeated that he and Richard and Peter started through the tall tussock grass up toward the pond where the geese had lighted; that they entered the grass abreast, and became separated in its maze; and that when he emerged at the upper border of the grass, he was first, and Peter presently appeared, but Captain Corr did not. Beyond that, he swore in beseeching terror, he knew only what the mate had told him.

"Believed what he told you, did you?" Mat demanded.

"Yas, suh."

Mat said evenly: "You're a liar! There wasn't any beach in the tussocks, nor any sen lions. You knew well enough nothing like that happened to the Cap'n in there." With one strong motion he ripped Gee's shirt off his back. "Get a boat spade, Rannels," he directed. "Cut a hole through his small, cut the truth out of him!"

Rannels said with a relish: "Take my knife. It's nicked, and dull, and jagged as a saw; but you can hack a couple of rib chops out of him with it."

At the fearful picture Rannels' words evoked, Gee surrendered altogether and damned Peter beyond denial. He said the mate had given him a pearl, and promised him a rich reward later, if he would tell the tale and stick to it.

Gee appeared to have no more to tell, but Mat had no remaining doubt of Peter's guilt. Yet even so it was necessary that Richard be found, alive or dead, for final proof. Mat had no intention of evading the issue. If Richard were not found, he must release Peter and return him to command, and himself submit to the arrest that would follow when the Venturer reached Stanley.

But if Richard were found, then the situation would be in Richard's hands. So he must be found. Mat decided that when they came to anchor again in Hoakes Bay, he would send Corkran to command and direct the search ashore. Corkran was wise and strong. Mat himself, clearly, had better stay on board the Venturer. Someone must keep an eye on Peter, and on Gee; for the two prisoners and the ship herself were the key to the situation.

So Mat would stay aboard. He meant to send ashore as many men as possible, to prosecute the search for Richard with the best chance of success. George clearly could not go. His strength would not permit it. Mary would wish to stay with her husband.

As matters developed, one other man stayed aboard the Venturer. After the anchor was down, since the wind was freshening, Mat ordered the sails all furled. This meant sending the men aloft. Hurd, the little Cockney, descending afterward, in some way fell the last few feet to the deck. He landed on his feet; but he howled with pain, and when he tried to stand he could not. Apparently he had broken a bone in his ankle, or suffered a severe sprain; certainly he would be of no use ashore.

So when the boats put off, twelve men went in them; or rather, eleven men and Tommy Hanline. Corkran commanded one boat, Big Pip the other. Seven men and Mary were left aboard. Hurd was in the forecastle, Gee and Peter in irons below, George in his bunk in the Captain's cabin, Willie Keeper in his galley, and Mat and Rannels and Mary on deck to watch the boats depart.

Rannels, like the other harpooners, was by the etiquette of the ship restricted in his movements, forbidden to come to the after house except on business. So while the boats moved away from the vessel's side, he stood alone in the waist. Mary and Mat were together by the rail just forward of the after house. They saw the boats land and saw the men haul them high and dry.

It occurred to Mat to inspect Peter's irons. He called to the harpooner: "Take a look at Gee, Rannels." The other man went obediently toward the fore hatch, and Mat descended into the cabin with Mary. He slid back the bolt on the door between the common room and the main cabin. Peter sat there at the table, his hands in front of him, the irons on his wrists passed through the loop of chain around the mizzen; and he met Mat's eyes, but he did not speak. Mat closed the door and bolted it again. When he turned, Mary stood in the doorway of the Captain's cabin; and George was on his feet inside the cabin, facing her, coughing a little, but assuring her that he was perfectly able and anxious to go on deck and watch for the return of the boats.

Mat Forbes felt rather than saw a shadow pass along the skylight over his head. He looked up sharply at the skylight, too late to see anything; and then he took the revolver out of his belt and cocked it and stepped quickly toward the companionway.

He started to ascend. Mary came to the foot of the companionway; and his feet were level with her shoulders, his head just emerging from the companion, when she heard the crack of the smashing blow that felled him.

The revolver, without being discharged, dropped out of his hand and clattered down to her feet. Mat slumped forward limply on his face, his body sprawling on the deck, his legs hanging down the companionway. Rannels shouted something; and she looked up and saw the harpooner, his face red with excitement, grab Mat by the collar. Mary snatched the revolver from the floor; but Rannels hauled Mat out of sight before she could shoot. On deck someone came running aft. George crossed to her side, took the weapon from her. Looking up, he whispered: "What happened?"

She was strangely not excited. "Rannels killed Mat!" she told him simply. Through the companion above them they could see the sky, the rain-filled clouds, the after rail. They heard Rannels speaking.

"Watch the companion," he panted, his voice thick. "I'll go get him loose, and Gee. You stay here, and if anybody shows a head, bust 'em."

Mary did not know Hurd was aboard. She looked at George and saw, with a quickening respect and admiration, that he was calm; that strength had run into him to meet this emergency. He said:

"Go get the guns out of the rack and load them. I'll watch here, in case they try to come down."

She said from across the cabin by the arms rack: "It's locked. The guns are locked in."

"Can you break it open?"

"No! I don't see how."

"Then find the bomb gun."

She turned to look for that huge and awkward weapon. Someone tried the bolted door between; and Peter called to them sharply:

"Mary, let me in."

George said strongly: "No, Peter."

"You sick fool, I'll break down the door." Peter's voice cracked as it was likely to in moments of emotion.

"I'll shoot you if you do!" George retorted. He made a sign to Mary to hurry; his lips shaped the words: "Bomb gun!"

Peter was whispering to Rannels in the main cabin. George and Mary could hear the murmur, but no words. Mary found the bomb gun, as heavy as a small cannon. Luckily it was loaded. The voices in the main cabin could no longer be heard; and there was no sound on the deck above their heads. She asked George:

"Will that bomb explode if it hits anything?"

BANKS AND THE WAR

Financing War Production

FROM all sides the cry is "More ships! More planes! More tanks!" But America has learned that the miracle of mass production is not accomplished over night. It requires planning, building, tooling up—and financing.

You haven't heard much about the financing and because it has been going smoothly. America's banks have been on the job every minute taking care of the credit needs in their communities, advancing the billions needed to get production rolling. This bank is on the alert for every opportunity to lend.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

MAYBE I shouldn't admit it, but there are a few things about this writing job I really like.

F'instance, I like the part where . . . after all the writin' and the routine is done . . . I just set back and think about things in general. (Oh, yes, that's part of the job, too.)

Doesn't matter much what I think about. Sometimes I concentrate on one thing. Sometimes I think of lots of things, one right after the other.

Usually, when I get to thinkin', I send down for some beer. Seems a glass of beer not only touches the spot but it also sort of helps the thinkin' mood along.

It's such a peaceful, friendly beverage. Sort of honest and human. And it tastes good.

I like to hold my glass of beer up to the light and look through it. That beautiful, golden-amber color kind of fascinates me. Reminds me of the sunny barley fields where beer gets its start.

After all . . . when you stop to think about it . . . beer is a simple, natural thing. I read somewhere that all it's made of is good, wholesome farm grains and water and a little yeast . . . with hops for flavor. Nature's process of fermentation and the age-old art of the brewer does the rest.

I guess that's why beer is so wholesome. It really is the beverage of moderation. You just can't imagine anybody getting into trouble drinking a few glasses of beer.

Well, here I am . . . going on and on thinking and talking about beer. Probably could go on for hours. That's the way I am when I set back and get to thinking about things.

And by the way, taking it easy and "just thinkin'" is fun. Try it sometime . . . quiet and comfortable like.

Sure, every acre's raising more.... Now what's upping the mileage from this oil?

How does prize wheat or corn at the county fair get that way?

Sure, man-made soil improvers—modern synthetics—were added to improve on nature.

AND MODERN SYNTHETICS in Conoco N*th* motor oil make it yield mileage that outscored all other brands tested in the sensational Death Valley Certified Competition. Five big-name quality brands got every fair chance against Conoco N*th* oil. All were run till engines failed and none came closer than 58% of the mileage totaled by Conoco N*th*! . . . the oil you can have for your needed Spring oil change that's now overdue . . . the oil whose best known man-made extra substance—at no extra premium—gives your engine OIL-PLATING.

OIL-PLATING backs up the familiar fluid type of oil film with a surfacing of lubricant close-bonded to inner engine parts. Every cylinder wall, for instance, becomes a wall of OIL-PLATING that doesn't all drain dry during all the time you use Conoco N*th*. Even after all-day parking, the OIL-PLATING is still up to the topmost piston rings, ready to lubricate before any oil can circulate. That's one plain way of foiling excess wear, and keeping up mileage with your engine OIL-PLATED.

But Conoco N*th* oil also includes Thialkene inhibitor . . . another synthetic . . . invented to inhibit or restrain the dangerous "jelling" of oil under excess strain. Engine heat and pressure can even gum up oil into something like fly-paper coating—only dirtier, and not much better for mileage. Against this threat, Thialkene inhibitor was created for Conoco N*th* (U. S. Pat. 2,218,132). And Conoco N*th* out-mileaged the others in the Death Valley Test—from 74% all the way up to 161%. You can get real optimistic about your own mileage. Conoco N*th* will come through for you. Change at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Company

MANUFACTURERS TO MEET AT TRAVERSE

Important Session to Be Held By War Production Bd. Officials

Manufacturers from Charlevoix will attend one of the most important war industries meetings thus far held in Northern Michigan when Hugo A. Weissbrodt, manager of the field operations division of the War Production Board, and members of his staff come to Traverse City Friday, May 8.

"Manufacturers can learn everything from Mr. Weissbrodt and his staff that they could learn in Washington," Merle Lutz, secretary of the Traverse City Chamber of Commerce stated, "and for this reason it is an important meeting."

Accompanying Mr. Weissbrodt will be H. P. Valentine, supervisor of the planning and procurement division, T. N. Moss, supervisor of the production co-ordination section, Ray N. Niles, senior production engineer, and Ensign Turner, of the U. S. Navy.

These men will come prepared to hold personal conferences with each manufacturer and show exactly what the army and navy need in munitions that can be produced in Northern Michigan plants.

A luncheon meeting will be held at the Park Place Hotel at 12:30 p. m. Friday, May 8, after which Weissbrodt and his staff will hold personal conferences with the manufacturers.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

In the AAA "Food For Freedom" program, we farmers are requested to make an increase in the production of poultry and eggs. It is too early yet to see whether we are getting this necessary increase. Some people figure the price of eggs is too low to warrant any expansion and are holding back. Do you know what Uncle Sam plans for the coming year compared to 1941? In 1941 the government purchased for lend lease and war purposes 7,000,000 cases of eggs and 3,000,000 one pound cans of chicken. In 1942 the government plans to purchase 17,000,000 cases of eggs, 13,000,000 cases of dried eggs and 8,000,000 cases of canned chicken. To fill a one pound can, it requires five pounds of chicken. There will be a good market and demand for all eggs and chickens raised and the price will undoubtedly be better. So let's dig in and raise a few more chickens. Our Boys must be well fed at the front and the people at home.

Mrs. Courtis Mascho, our county AAA fieldwoman, has been visiting the schools in the county for the past two weeks for the purpose of presenting information pertaining to victory gardens and other phases of the "Food For Freedom" program. She emphasized the importance of victory gardens in connection with better health and stronger bodies for school children and their families and pointed out that victory gardens would release more foods for other groups. AAA soil-building practices and goals were also discussed.

Mrs. Mascho is sponsoring an AAA letter writing contest among the rural schools throughout the county. Children participating in this contest will write letters to Mrs. Mascho telling her of their plans for helping in the "Food For Freedom" program and explain how their farms are being benefited through the AAA farm program. The county committee will meet and judge the best written letters and those selected will be presented in a radio broadcast over station WTCM, Traverse City, the date to be announced later.

GOVERNMENT PEGS COMMODITY PRICES

New Ruling to Set Living Costs Effective May 18th

Basic facts about the price and rent control orders:

Prices of things you buy:

Effective May 18—No store can sell anything for a price higher than it charged in March, with few exceptions.

This applies to most food, including fresh milk; to all clothing; to all household supplies; to all fuel and ice.

Government estimates this will reduce cost of living 1½ per cent after rise of 14.6 per cent since war began in 1939.

Anybody can sell anything at less than ceiling prices. Officials expect competition to iron out differences.

Stores cannot cheapen quality of goods to get around price regulations.

Exceptions: Price control applies to so many thousand items that they cannot be listed. Exceptions are few. Principal exceptions:

Raw farm products: raw vegetables and fruit; eggs and poultry; butter and cheese; condensed and evaporated milk; flour, mutton and lamb; fresh fish, seafood and game; dried prunes; dried beans; nuts, except peanuts; books and magazines; used automobiles.

Price control does not apply to food and liquor served by restaurants, soda fountains and bars.

Wholesalers and manufacturers: Effective May 11—They may not charge more than their highest prices of March.

Services: Beginning July 1, establishments which provide services affecting goods must hold their prices to March level. This includes laundry, dry cleaning, shoe repairing, automobile repairing. This does not apply to electric light, telephone, and gas services; it does not apply to theaters and other entertainment places; it does not apply to doctors and dentists; it does not apply to barber shops and beauty parlors and any other establishments which provide services to the person as distinguished from servicing goods.

Rents: Total of 323 defense rent areas now established in 46 states. Two-thirds of population lives in these areas. Rent in most areas to be fixed at March 1 level. Sizeable reductions to be forced in some places.

REGION GETS FIRST RAIN IN TWO WEEKS

Relieves Forest Fire Condition and Aids Farm Crops Growth

Rain, the first in 15 days, fell Friday and Sunday in northern Michigan. A dangerous forest fire condition was temporarily relieved and farm lands received greatly needed moisture to start growth of crops.

Two weeks of unseasonal warm weather has brought the advancement of fruit tree buds, truck garden produce and flowers to a stage of growth exceeding that of normal years, in this region, it is stated.

DISTRICT HEALTH DEPT.

May Day Is Child Health Day

The Congress of the United States, recognizing the importance of maintaining and improving the health of our infants and children, by joint resolution of May 18, 1928 authorized and requested the President of the United States to issue annually a proclamation setting apart May 1 as Child Health Day.

This year in the proclamation the President called attention to the vital importance of the health of children to the strength of the nation and urged that every community contribute to the conservation of child health by doing everything in its power to reduce illness in the entire community and among children in particular. He especially called attention to the prevention of diphtheria and smallpox and urged parents of children between the ages of nine months and ten years to have them immunized against these diseases. He called attention to these particular diseases because we have the surest means of prevention for them.

If you have not already done so, you can make a contribution to the war effort by having your family physician immunize your children against diphtheria and smallpox. The procedure necessary to protect children against diphtheria and smallpox is simple, practically painless, causes little or no reaction and is not expensive.

Just now, when an all-out effort to win the war is getting under way, we must make sure that that effort is not hampered and interferred with by disease among our children. One or two cases of diphtheria or smallpox scattered here and there over the county, over the State and over the Nation could do more to reduce our war production than if Hitler or Hirohito each sent over a squadron of bombers.

Just because we have not had an outbreak of smallpox or diphtheria lately is no sign that we will not have tomorrow unless our children are protected. People are moving about more than usual due to the demands of the war effort and diseases will be introduced into communities where they have not been for years. A sense of false security is exactly what gets us into trouble time after time. Make your home and your nation more secure by protecting your children against diphtheria now.

Many of the calamities that have overtaken us we could not prevent but we can prevent an outbreak of smallpox or of diphtheria and each of you with children can help prevent it. See your family doctor now.

Favorites in Thrilling Film

Based on the noted best-seller by Francis Iles, "Before the Fact," RKO Radio's striking film "Suspicion" co-starring Cary Grant and Joan Fontaine in what is said to be the most dramatic film of the season, will be shown May 9-10 at the Palace Theater.

Alfred Hitchcock directed the picture, which deals with the strange romance of a ne'er-do-well adventurer and a country heiress, and which gives the two celebrities unusual opportunities for suspense-packed action.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nigel Bruce and Dame May Whitty head the featured RKO Radio cast of the picture, which has the English countryside as its setting.

"Mr. Bug Goes to Town" is the new Paramount Technicolor feature-length cartoon created by the Fleischer Studios and it is due to arrive May 13-14 at the Palace Theatre.

The cast of characters includes some of the friendliest and funniest insect people imaginable. There are Honey Bee, the heroine; Hoppity, the grasshopper hero; C. Bagley Beetle, the villain; Swat, the Fly, and Smack, the Mosquito, plus many other brilliantly conceived, humanized insects all of whom will so enchant you that you will probably never again have the heart to use insecticide.

The story tells of the fight for life of a community of these little people against the passions of one of their own race and the encroachments of the human race upon their tiny speck of land. Gay music, including five song hits, and beautiful Technicolor are said to heighten the enjoyment of this thoroughly delightful film.

I.O.O.F.-Rebekah Supper

A potluck supper for Odd Fellows and their wives, and Rebekahs and their husbands, will be held at the I.O.O.F. hall Friday evening, May 8.

Four dollars, these days, buys about three dollars worth of goods—the war program has given us more money to spend but fewer things to spend it on.

LIST FOUR INFORMATION SOURCES FOR ANGLERS

Data on Wartime Regulations May Be Had on Inquiry

Fishermen puzzled as to where to turn next to be sure of not violating any of the new wartime boat and area regulations may get help from four different offices.

The U. S. Coast Guard will advise us to which waters are closed entirely and which waters of the Great Lakes may be entered only if at least one member of the crew has the fingerprint and photo identification card that only the Coast Guard issues.

The U. S. Internal Revenue office can tell whether a specific pleasure boat falls within the class 16 feet long or longer, with sail or motor, which must have a $5 tax stamp, like the stamp for automobiles.

The State Emergency Defense Board will tell which dams, water intakes and other works have been designated "special emergency defense areas" from which fishermen and everyone else is barred.

Local state conservation officers keep well posted on current rulings and can give anglers informal opinions about the situations in their own territories.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Summer 4-H Club Program Rapidly Developed

The greater interest in 4-H club projects is manifested in every community throughout the county. In some communities every boy and girl of club age has already enrolled and selected one or more projects to complete. The recently enlarged 4-H club council has been given the responsibility of organizing the program, in their respective communities, and already many have held local meetings and have selected the leadership which is so necessary for success.

We find that all young folks are greatly interested in contributing their bit toward winning the war. Especially is this true in their efforts to assist the Victory garden program. Present indications point to a 200% increase in garden club members. Likewise, we expect a 100% increase in Food Preparation clubs and in Canning clubs. During the past week several meetings have been held to cooperate with local counsel members to assist in the organization of the various communities. Everywhere we find both children and adults anxious to protect our home front.

This week and next will be Tree Planting Weeks. Some eighteen different schools will be setting out young pine seedlings in their school forests. In our county the Conservation clubs will set their trees out on Thursday and Friday, May 7th and 8th. Approximately 15,000 trees have been received and will soon be given the opportunity to develop into stately pines which will greatly add not only to the beauty but also to the land values. Many of these trees have been set out four years ago and are close to four feet in height now and are growing very nicely. We are anxious that all communities that have not thus far organized to do so very soon.

Charlevoix County Land Use Planning Report Completed

Copies of the Charlevoix Land Use Planning Report are now being distributed to interested organizations and individuals in the county. While this report represents the studies for 1940 it was necessary to delay its completion for many months until we could obtain the two colored maps which were made in Washington, D. C. It was felt that it was worth while to hold up completion of the report until the maps could be obtained as they very nicely indicate the various land types within the county and the recommended land uses approved by the local township committees.

The report covers 50 pages of instructive charts and graphs showing the various findings of the committees. The introduction includes the location and general description of the county, its historical background, population, climate, and a table showing the temperature and precipitation for a period of forty-three years. It is interesting to note that the average temperature is 44.4 degrees and that the average precipitation is 28.41 inches. For the driest year on record, 1906, the precipitation was only 17.71 inches while on the wettest year, 1920, it was 39.41 inches.

On the following pages are shown the eight recognized land types within the county and a discussion of each type. Also a very careful study was made of the present land utilization and various percentages of each use. Then a study was made of the government loans to farmers. This revealed that as on 1040 there were 423 loans amounting to $513,319.00.

Moving along toward the end of the report considerable attention was given to recommended land uses. Each township committee very carefully made recommendations as to the best uses to be made of the land. Certainly any person or group interested in obtaining a good picture of the resources of Charlevoix county would find this report an excellent reference. Copies of this report have already been sent to schools, county officers, teachers, supervisors, agricultural leaders, and many others with the hope that it will be of value to them in their respective fields of effort. A supply of these books is now on hand and will be gladly sent out to whoever will find a use for them.

Here's a little thing that will help a lot

It's a patriotic duty to help keep telephone lines clear so that important war messages will not be delayed. Even though your line may not be needed for war calls, a "traffic jam" of calls might tie up a central office, stopping emergency messages from getting through. And scarcity of war material makes it impossible for us to add to central office capacity as fully as we should like to do.

Keeping telephone conversations short will help. We suggest that you know beforehand what you want to say; speak distinctly so you won't have to repeat, and do not hold the line merely to talk of trivial things.

In so far as material shortages permit, we shall continue to provide the best service possible, and we look forward to the day when we can meet all requests as in the past. But now, and for the duration, war needs come first.

KEEP THESE POINTS IN MIND
You can help vital war messages go through if you—
- Make telephone conversations short
- Avoid the busy hours—10 A. M. to 12; 2 to 4 P. M.
- Be certain you have the right number
- Answer promptly when your telephone rings

THE HOME FRONT

It never has been necessary to defend the patriotism of Michigan. It can be taken for granted that the people of Michigan, whether they live on farms, in cities or rural communities, will give full support and whole-hearted cooperation to the President's battle against inflation—which he prefers to call the high cost of living.

The high cost of living is no longer a vague threat. It has become a grim reality.

In issuing a series of orders, which placed virtually all prices and rents—with specified exceptions—under a ceiling for the duration, Price Administration Leon Henderson commented:

"This action is one which the American people know to be necessary . . . It is, after all, the citizens' charter of security against rising living costs and it will be so recognized. Therefore, I know every citizen will look upon this program as his own and will do his part to make it work."

Share Alike

Attempts of any classes or groups to gain exemptions or special privileges surely would be giving comfort to our enemies and, as such, would be unpatriotic.

We Are All At War

Michigan is sending her boys to the battle lines in increasing thousands. How little in comparison seem the things which we are asked to do on the Home Front.

Just as the Selective Service is mobilizing our fighting forces, so must we who remain at home mobilize our economic resources. The Selective Service has brought few evaders. It hardly seems conceivable that any man or woman would dodge our less important economic duties.

But there are teeth in the price-rent orders for any Home Front slackers. Penalties for willful violation include fines up to $5,000 or a year in prison, or both; also civil suits for triple damages and loss of sellers license for 12 months.

Duty is Not Sacrifice

Rent gouging is an evil which generally does not exist in rural areas. As crowded industrial centers overflow into small towns and farm communities, this problem may arise.

Twenty-one Michigan counties are classed as defense-rental areas in the recent order and rents will come under federal control. This includes rural as well as urban districts in these counties: Lenawee, Macomb, Oakland, Washtenaw, Wayne, Genesee, Kent, Muskegon, Ottawa, Jackson, Calhoun, Kalamazoo, Clinton, Eaton, Ingham, Berrien, St. Clair, Bay, Midland, Saginaw and Monroe. Others are sure to be added, if the need arises.

* LANSING LETTER *

Thursday (May 7) is the final day for citizens to register for war ration stamp cards. Sugnr stamps Nos. 1 to 4 inclusive will be good for purchase of one pound of sugar per individunl each two weeks from May 5 to June 27.

Because sugar cane is needed to make molassess, molnsses is used to make industrial alcohol, industrial alcohol is needed to make explosives, explosives are needed to sink the nxis, and the axis threaten our freedoms, Michigan consumers must conserve sugar carefully—a small sacrifice but an important one.

Before you grumble about "bureaucrncy" and "muddling at Washington" as the reasons why sugar must be rationed today, consider this additional reason:

The Japanese attnck at Pearl Harbor and Manila resulted in stoppage of sugar supplies from the Philippines, while Hawaiian supplies become uncertain. Next, ships were needed to cnrry atrategic war materials, and sugnr is being shipped to our allies under the lend-lense plan. Ships which could carry sugnr are critically needed to transport tanks and airplanes, for example, to the Russian front.

Just another reason why you will have only a pound of sugar during the next two weeks!

Food experts say we really don't need any sugar at nll.

We do need the food energy that sugar gives us. And the same energy can be obtained from cereals, brend, potatoes, fats, nnd other familiar starch foods, rich in carbohydrates.

Syrups and honey nny be used instead of sugnr in baking. Cakes cnn get along without frosting, and milk hns its own sugar.

Corn, carrots nnd sweet potatoes are vegetables rich in their own sugar.

Custnrds and puddings need little sugar; sulads practically no sugar.

And literally tons of sugar nre wasted by Americans daily benuse they do not stir thoroughly their cup of coffee or tea!

Speaking of transportation, have you bought your winter's coal supply yet and have you joined nn "anto club"?

The two things are not unrelnted. Coal is shipped by railroad, and it accounts for one-fourth of the rail traffic of the nation.

Michigan automobile plants, fnst being converted to war production, are beginning to turn out an incrensing amount of tanks and bombers and other mnchines of death. Furthermore, these finished machines require thousands of parts, which, in turn, require transportation in thousands of freight cars.

By next fall and winter, two things will probably tnke place:

One is a critical congestion of railroad transportation, just ns shipping todny is fnced with a critical shortage. Every ton of coal bought today for delivery this spring nnd summer will free the railroad cars next fall and winter for rush shipment of tanks and guns aad shells and will ense any thrent of a coal shortage.

A plnne for MacArthur's men, a tank to shove the Germnns back to Rerlin, a gun to blnst the Japs out of Manila—will NOT be held up in order to ship coal for your home. Want to help MacArthur? Then order your coal TODAY!

Second coming event of transportation is an inevitable depletion of rubber tires. How long will your present tirea last? There is the rub.

Governor Murray D. VanWagoner has aunmoned mayors of some 30 leading cities of Michigan to consider adoption of the "Pontiac Plun" (explained in this column last week).

Instead of the wasteful speetacle of four or five automobiles heading in the same direction at the same time, each with an empty back sent, one car might do the job. Traffic would be reduced, parking problems eased, many lives saved—all because the Japs seized rubber plantations in Malaya, 10,000 miles away!

"Drive slower and speed victory" may be another 1942 wnr slogan.

These are small sacrifices fur us to make.

Michigan citizens are going to make them cheerfully and willingly. For we realize the war cnn be won or lost on the home front, that in the doing of thousands of little things, not always in spectacular acts of bravery, will we on the home front make our contributions for victory.

Orchardists in this regioa are keeping an anxious eye on the thermometer these last few dnys as the temperature dropped near the frost danger point. Crowers say that the sour cherry trees particulnrly bloomed this spring the carliest since 1913, and the same may he said for the early bloom of flowers and advent of folisge. A frost now would no doubt solve a threatening shortage of cherry harvest hands in July, but with it would be financial ruin for many, too. Frnst last spring nearly ruined the sour cherry crop, it will be remembered.

KIWANIS NOTES

Clifford McKibbin, Jr., city superintendent and air raid warden instructor, outlined Clnrlevoix's air raid precautions to members and guests of the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club nt their meeting, at the I.O.O.F. hall, Tuesday evening.

The city is divided into six air raid districts, each of which is manned by a force of four to six air raid wardens. Each district will be under orders of a post warden, who will, in turn, be under order of the senior warden of the city.

The speaker emphasized that air raids are not expected here, but warned that the best possible protection, should one come, is complete nnd adequate preparedness. The wardens plan to visit each home and place of business in the district, and explain what should be done in case a raid occurs. Inspection will also be made of attics and basements and suggestions made as to the best method of making the premises as safe from fire as possible. The wnrdens have a tough job ahead of them and it is expected that each and every resident and guest of Charlevoix will cooperate fully for mutual protection. Your air raid warden is a door to door salesman, selling safety. Meet him half way.

Mr. McKibbin nnd Kiwanis President Harry E. Bingham, are graduates of the American Legion District school for air raid wardens held recently at Traverse City, nnd have just completed local schools here.

The return of Albert Schaerer of Chorlevoix and Detroit, to the club wns a happy occasion. Mr. Schaerer and his family expect to spend the summer at their place on Lako Charievoix.

The club voted contributions to the Chorlevoix Servico organization and to the Girl Scouts.

MANY TYPES BUILDINGS ARE STILL PERMITTED

WPB Order to Save War Material, But Makes Allowances

Despite the recent WPB new construction conservation order recently announced, local lumber and building supply dealers point out that anyone cnn still build a garage or barn, add a new room or porch, modernize the attic or basement, put on a new roof, repaint or repair without any priorities or permits.

A number of building projects which may be completed entirely without permit are:

1. New residential construction in town or on farm costing up to $500.

2. Any farm building (dwellings excepted) costing up to $1,000.

3. Any commercial, institutional, industrial, recreational, utilities, highway, roadway or subsurface construction costing up to $5,000.

4. Any reconstruction or restoration of residential construction damaged or destroyed after December 31, 1941 by fire, flood tornado, earthquake, act uf Cod, or public enemy.

5. Homeowners who wish to repair, repaint their buildings, insulate to save fuel or apply new roofs can undertake such maintenance and repair work without permit of any kind and in any amount.

The order actually encourages with prioritiea the private construction of defense houses and the alteration of houses in defense areas. The so-called "freezing" of larger private construction erroneously reported by many news agencies is giving way to more cheerful and accurate facts. The order was intended to direct as much materinl as possible to war use, bnt it also makes generous and necessary allownnces for needed civilian construction.

NEW HIGHWAY SERVICE MAPS WILL BE ISSUED

War Department Censorship Lifted to Allow Distribution

State highway department officinls this week prepared to issue n revised service map following its approval by the War Department and Office uf Censorship.

Distribution of the new map, it was stated, will start about June 1. With the exception of omitting certoin information thnt might be of valuo to unfriendly ogencies, the maps will be very similar to former official stnte highway department maps.

The department halted distribution of the 1942 winter edition of mops March 16 at the suggestion of Army officials who pointed out thnt certain detailed information might be of use to our enemies.

"All such information," department officials said, "including key industrial nreas, nirports, emergency lnnding facilities and new construction in the vicinity of war plnnts will not he listed on the new summer edition."

Maps will be distributed in the usual manner and may be obtained from the Depnrtment's tourist lodges or by making application to the state highway depnrtment.

QUESTIONNAIRES GO TO 3rd DRAFT MEN

Worn Men Not to Confuse Military and Occupotionel Questionnairs

Col. E. M. Rosencrants, State Selective Servico Director, has cautioned men who registered for Selectivo Service Feb. 16 (third registration) not to confuse occupational questionnaires which they will begin receiving next week with the standard Selective Service questionnaire which local draft boards sond out to get classification information.

"In filling out the occupationol questionnaires men should give careful though to their skills, experience and aptitudes so that the best possiblo use of their services may be made in the nntion's war effort," Rosecrans said.

"I am confident I speak for the Republican members of the Senate and House and the people of Michigan, who will furnish the fund for this purpose, when I say they will gladly meet this call, not with any thought of payment for services rendered as no fund that the State could provide would adequately compensate for that. It would bo offered, however, immediately upon return, as a token of respect and esteem and with a hopo that it would bo helpful to them as they take their place in the peace life that will follow THEIR VICTORY."

TB CLINIC SCHEDULED MAY 13th BOYNE CITY

Health Unit Cooperatlog With Tuborculosis Association

In Charlevoix county there are probably 30 tuberculous persons who are spreading this contagious disease to others. To find these persons an X-ray clinic will be held in Boyne City May 13 by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association in cooperation with Dr. James W. Chapman, director of Health District No. 3.

The 30 estimated cases in this county are figured on a ratio discovered by medical research which shows that for every death from tuberculosis there are 10 persons sick with the disease. The Michigan Department uf Health lists three tuberculosis deaths from Charlevoix county in 1940. (The ratio was figured 20 years ago and some research workers now consider it too conservative; they think a 1 to 15, even 1 to 20 ratio, more likely).

Because tuberculosis has no symptoms in its early stages, innocent people often spread the disenso to others. For this reason, it is a wise precnution for every person to have a tuberculin test and a complete physical exnmination, including a chest X-ray, Dr. Chapmnn declared.

To find tubereulosis while it is in the early, easily cursble stages, is the purpose of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association X-ray clinics. This is part of the work supported by tuberculosis Christmas senls.

OWNERS MAY RECLAIM DELINQUENT PROPERTY

Have Ninety Days from May 4 to Purchese from State

Former owners of tax-delinquent londs to which the state gets title nt midnight Monday, May 4, will have 90 days this year rather thnn the 30 previously allowed for buying their properties bnck from the state on special low, time-pnyment terms, the conservation depnrtment is advising landowners in the northern 47 counties.

Another legislative change in the rules thnt is now effective provides that the former owner now need be only nn "owner of interest" rather than an "owner of record" to tnke advantage of the specinl terms.

Land now coming to the state, nnd in the north to the administration of the conservation department, is land that was offered nt the May tax sale of 1941, nnd was bid in by the state when no one else bid the minimum price. Former owners could have redeemed this land at any time in the 12 months since the sale.

WAR BOND DRIVE TO BEGIN FRIDAY

PLAN HOUSE TO HOUSE CANVASS FOR PLEDGES

Campaign to Oetermine Support Government Can Expect to Finance War Effort

A house to house solicitation for voluntary war bond and stamp pledges will be started in Charlevoix on the morning of Friday, May 15, Ralph Hamilton, chairman of the city war bond participation, has announced.

Ralph Price, general chairman for Charlevoix county in the pledge campaign, has selected the following directors: Charlevoix, Ralph Hamilton; Boyne City, Alex Heller; East Jordan, Robert Campbell; Boyne Falls, Mrs. Lewis Upton; rural, W. H. Henley. Chairmen for townships will be selected by Mr. Henley.

The local canvass will be conducted by a group of Minute Men, including a number of Kiwanians, who have volunteered their services for this campaign.

The pledge campaign should not be misunderstood as an attempt to dictate what the people'a war effort should be. Rnther, the survey is to be mnde as a demonstration that the method of freedom, of friendly appeal and voluntary response is the American way and the most efficient way to enlist the billions of dollars upon which our final and certain triumph will depend.

No machinery will be set up to collect the amount of the pledges, which are not orders for bonds, but only promises to buy whatever amount the pledger is able to buy. Every pledger will take upon himself the responsibility of buying the amount promised, through an authorized agency such as a post office, bank or store.

Those already purchasing bonds and stamps regularly are also asked to sign, because one purpose of the campaign is to determine how many people are already participating in the program, and the extent to which they intend to pursue the regular purchase plan. Our government would like to know how much income it can expect when figuring how to meet the costs of war.

One New Record Established as Team Out-Scored Onaway H. S. by 95 to 28 Margin

Coach Stewart Coleman'a Charlevoix thin-clads won the Northern Michigan class C conferenee track and field title for the sixth consecutive year at south side athletic field Saturday.

Competing in the smallest field since the event was inaugurated, Charlevoix out-scored Onaway high school by a margin of 95 points to 28 for their best record. The fact that Coleman's athletes "slammed" three events, won 10 first, nine seconds, and eight thirds was indication of a well balanced team despite light competition.

While rain and cold provided unfavorable conditions, Jim Feres heaved the shot 40 ft. 9¾ in. to better the conference record of 40 ft. 6 in. held for several years by Bowman, of East Jordan. Conditions held down other anticipated record-breaking performances.

Following is a summnry of events:

FEDERAL PRICE CONTROL DISCUSSED HERE

Merchants of Charlevoix, Antrim at Session Friday Night

An estimated 160 retail merchants of Charlevoix and Antrim counties last Friday evening attended a discussion at the city hall of the government's price ceiling policy—most drastic federal measure since the wnr begun.

First phase of the over-all price control program went into effect ut midnight Monday, May 11, when manufacturers and wholesalers changed prices to the highest price charged during March, 1942.

The next step in the program—that one that affects consumers directly—comes May 18 when millons of retail prices revert to the highest price charged during March, 1942.

City Superintendent Clifford McKibbin, Jr., has announced that copies of a pamphlet, "General Maximum Price Regulation," are available at his office in the city hall to all retailers desiring them.

MOTHER'S DAY THEME OF W.C.T.U. MEETING

Mrs. B. Saltonstall Hostess for Regular Meeting Friday

Mrs. W. L. Cruthers presented the topic "Our Town and the Mothers" at the W.C.T.U. meeting held at Mrs. B. Saltonstall's home last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. H. C. Ringenoldus conducted a devotional service, using Mother's Day as the theme.

Plans were made by the Union for circulation of petitions in local churches on Mother's Day, for local participation in the nationwide appeal on that day to President Roosevelt, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, to take steps to cause the discontinuance of the sale of beer in government commissaries and to set up dry zones around naval and military establishments. On Sunday, the petitions were circulated in churches, and pastors spoke on the subject.

FROST CAUSES SOME DAMAGE IN REGION

Heavy Rain Monday Night Believed to Offset Freezing Losses

Some damage to cherry, apple and early vegetables was caused by low temperatures over the week end. Temperature readings below the freezing point were registered Saturday and Sunday night, but it is believed that cherry blossoms were sufficiently advanced to escape the almost complete ruin which occurred a year ago.

Rain Monday night, heaviest of the spring, offset much of the frost damage. Hay, alfalfa and other growing crops flattened by the frost were revived and the ground was put in condition for the growing season.

MICHIGAN LEADS NATION FOR HUNTING LICENSES

Michigan led all states of the union in hunting license sales in the last year for which federal records have been compiled for comparison, with a margin of 40,000 over Pennsylvania and a comfortable lead over New York, Ohio, Indiana, Minnesota, Illinois, Wisconsin, California and Washington—other members of the "big ten" that rank in that order.

NEW MOTORBOAT LAW IS IN FORCE

REQUIRES LARGER NUMBERS BE PAINTEO ON VESSELS

Motorboat Owners Have 'Til June 1st to Comply With New Regulations; Penalty for Failure

Official regulations on size of numbers to be carried on motor boats of several classes were received Monday from Martin R. Bradley, collector of customs, Detroit.

For duration of the war and six months thereafter every undocumented motor vessel required to be numbered and found on navigable water of the United States shall carry numbers as follows: vessels nnder 20 ft., letters 6-8 inches in height; 20 ft. and under 40 ft., 10-inch letters; 40 ft. nnd under 60 ft., 18-inch letters; 60 ft. and over, 24-inch letters.

Letters shall be painted a color contrasting with hull, parallel with water line and as near forward end as legibility permits; also if construction of boats permits, numbers shall also be painted on top side for aerial identification.

The new regulations are a wartime measure, it is pointed out, which is deemed necessary for better identification of all vessels and are in the nature of a protection for the motor boat owner, as well as the United States.

In order to afford opportunity for motorboat owners to comply with the new regulations, a strict enforcement will not be required until June 1. Failure after this date to comply will make the motorboat owner subect to a penalty of $10 for violation.

SUGAR REGISTRATION COMPLETED

BOARD ANNOUNCES 12,030 RATION BOOKS ISSUED

Retailers and Consumers Who Failed to Register Must Go to Rationing Board Office

Registration for consumer rationing of sugar, begun May 5 in public schools throughout the county, was completed Thursday evening, May 7.

Fenton R. Bulow, chairman of the Charlevoix county rationing board, announces that a total of 12,566 persons out of the county's 13,011 population registered, leaving an estimated 445 persons who failed to comply. A total of 12,030 rationing books were issued.

Mr. Bulow announced further that trade consumers—retailers, restaurant and hotel operators, etc.—who failed to register April 28 or 29 as required, may now do so at any time at the rationing board office in the court house. Consumers who failed to register during the May 4-7 period, however, may not now receive books until on or after May 21st.

Failure of individuals to register and receive rationing books is liable to cause complications because of the fact they may later be used for other commodities such as gasoline, coffee and spices, as well as suger. It is therefor very important that each individual have a rationing book. As far as local officials are concerned, instructions do not carry the sugar rationing program beyond July 1. Curtailment of consumer purchases of this commodity may be discontinued, the amount allowed per person decreased or increased. Present regulations do not go beyond the July 1 date.

Mr. Bulow also stated that his office has so far received no official instructions on rationing of sugar for canning purposes. No blanks have yet been received, although they are expected at any time. Press reports indicate the limit will be placed at 5 pounds per person, but no official information to this effect has been received. Information on the subject will be released when available.

Members of the county rationing board express appreciation to school officials, faculty members and individuals who so generously donated their time to conduct the registration.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

Hitler's mustache closely resembles a Fuller brush on which the guarantee period has expired.

Ernie Kibbe wins the week's special mention for fishin' results with that 5-pound German brown taken Sunday from the Boyne Falls pound. It topped a catch of 11 browns made by Ernie and "Cy" Marshall. In view of the fact perch flahing is so darn poor here, indicating that a short-lived spawning run into Round lake harbor has about petered out, word that some local boys caught an awful mess of big yellow-bellies in Lake Michigan off the piers Monday creates a bright spot on the horizon. That down-state party Louie and Bill Wallace took to Beaver Island over the week end didn't do so bad, either. They got 300 pounds on a day and a half fishing in St. James harbor.

The good old days when it was possible to run next door and borrow a cup of sugar without having a co-signer are over for the duration, at least.

And that makes me wonder, will a two-faced man with a double chin be entitled to a double ration of sugar?

Saturday's massed parade of school bands was a colorful sight. If witnessing it created the same feeling within others as it did myself, it was one of great pride in seeing these smartly uniformed young people swinging along to their own music. Several hundred of them there were—several hundred finished musicians—truly typifying the educational standards of a democratic nation instead of the militaristic ideals of the foreign countries with whom we now battle to maintain our mode of living. We can be truly thankful we live in the United States and are privileged to exist as free people.

One reason fishing is so good in waters of the Inland Route—Mullet and Burt lakes and connecting waters—is the transforing program by which thousands of game

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Michigan retailers are tightening their belts this week.

Federal price control, probably the most revolutionary step ever taken in our national economy, will go into effect in just ten days.

It's the NRA all over again, except Uncle Sam is wielding the big stick. The Blue Eagle is back. Like it or not, price control is on the way. And with it are due other economic restrictions, staggering in their aggregate significance. Most economists agree that you can't freeze prices without the accompanying power of rationing commodities of which sugar is only the first. The grade will be steep.

What is it all about, anyway?

Let's take a look at it from the retailer's point of view.

On and after Monday, May 18, every retail store in Michigan must publicly display the ceiling prices of selected "cost of living" commodities—about 100 in number. After July 1 every retail store must have available to anyone upon request, a prepared statement of the highest prices for all commodities which the store delivered or supplied during March 1942, which is the period adopted for the price freeze.

Uncle Sam will possess control through automatic licensing of all retailers and wholesalers.

Exempt from price control are insurance, real estate and professional fees; advertising, motion pictures, wages, common carrier and public utility rates.

Although an estimated 60 to 70 per cent of all food consumed in the average family's budget are included in price control, the exemptions include eggs and poultry, all milk products, flour, mutton and lamb, fresh fish and seafoods and game, and dried prunes and beans.

Also excluded from price control are books, magazines, periodicals, newspapers, precious stones, etchings, sculptures, used automobiles and many others.

Official U. S. Treasury War Bond Quotas For May

The above map of Michigan shows the War Bond quotas, by counties, for the month of May, 1942. Total War Bond quota for the State is $21,616,500. Every income earner in the State is expected to step-up War Bond purchases on a basis of ten per cent or more of income. This is necessary to help America's armed forces take the offensive against the Axis powers. The American voluntary method of War Bond purchases must be successful in reaching the quotas set by the Treasury Department for every county in the nation. The job of every American now is to stop spending and save dollars to help win the War.

Before You Move . . .

BE SURE YOU CAN

GET A TELEPHONE

• Before you decide to move or build, the Telephone Company will be glad to advise you whether war restrictions will permit you to have the telephone service you will need.

Even though telephone service is furnished now in the locality to which you plan to move, it may not be possible to supply you with any service, or exactly the kind of service you want.

Drastic restrictions of telephone installations have been ordered by the War Production Board in the interest of conserving war materials.

Except as needed for war purposes, or by those responsible for public health, welfare or security—

1. Telephona service cannot be provided at some locations.
2. Party line service, only, can be furnished in many cases.
3. Extension telephones cannot ba installed in residences.
4. Additional apparatus may be installed only on a limited basis.

In so far as materials and war restrictions permit, we shall provide the best possible service, and we look forward to the day when we again can give the kind of service wanted, "when and where wanted." But now, and for the duration, war needs come first. That is part of the price of protecting liberty.

Part of $55,000 Beaver Crop

In spite of some unfavorable weather, northern Michigan's spring beaver trapping season yielded 2,266 pelts—worth about $55,000 and much in demand because of the wartime decline of fur imports. The take of 813 licensed trappers exceeded last year's lower peninsula crop by 519 pelts, but many trappers are suggesting a closed season next year. The upper peninsula, which produced 5,324 pelts last season, was closed to beaver trapping entirely this spring.

"I don't know," he admitted. "I don't know how they work." He grinned doubtfully. "Richard said the back end of a gun like this does as much damage as the front, but it's better than nothing; and if that bomb hits anyone, even if it doesn't explode, they'll know it!"

They stood together, the gun on the desk between them, its muzzle toward the bolted door of the main cabin. Mary was in the recess between the desk and the rack of muskets, George at the end of the desk nearest the companion.

If Mat Forbes were alive, he did not even groan. If someone watched the cabin companion, his feet did not shuffle on the deck. If Peter was preparing to break in the cabin door, his preparations moved without a sound. The very silence had terror in it.

"I'll shoot you if you do!" George retorted.

George had the bomb gun under his right hand. He held the revolver in his left hand. His eyes were on the companionway down which at any moment an attack might come. He looked now and then at the skylight; but the men on deck took care not to show themselves there, and minutes passed, and nothing happened, and he said at last, appraising their situation:

"Peter won't want to fight us unless he has to. And maybe he told the truth about Richard."

"No, no."

"If he did, if they don't find Richard, they'll have to come back aboard and surrender. They can't get away from here without the ship. Peter could slip the anchor and get some sail on her and make out to sea and come back with a gunboat or something. So if they don't find Richard, Peter needn't worry."

"They will find him."

"I'm afraid Peter killed Richard, Mary."

There was ice in her breast. "No, George," she whispered helplessly.

CHAPTER XIX

"If Richard is dead, then the ship is Peter's, and everything in her, and he'll be rich. Remember he was always thinking about how much money the ship and her cargo was worth, and the ambergris." He added soberly: "And—he may have known he was not Cap'n Corr's own son."

"How could he know?"

"His mother might have told him, when he was a boy. If he knew that, he could guess that Cap'n Corr had left everything to Richard."

"Peter worked on me from the time we left the island to make me hate Richard. I suppose he saw I was naturally jealous. He kept reminding me—how you used to feel about Richard; and when he thought he had brought me to the pitch, he gave me that letter. At least he put it in the pocket of Richard's coat and made me wear the coat and hoped I would find it there." He asked: "I wonder why Peter kept that letter so long?"

"Peter has always—wanted me, himself, George. He made love to me aboard here. Kissed me. Once Tommy Hanline saw him. Once I had to run and lock myself in. George, he even came to my cabin yesterday."

George said humbly: "I haven't been much protection for you, Mary." Mary touched his hand on the bomb gun, and his eyes met hers. He said slowly: "You've given me so much. I should have given you more."

Her eyes burned with tears. "I'm going to take such care of you, make you so happy."

"Yes." He smiled at his own thought. "After we get out of this mess. We will."

Her hand tightened on his, smiling with him. They had never been so close as in this hour. After a moment he asked:

"How many men are there aboard? Do you know?"

"Just Peter and Rannels and Gea and Willie Leeper. And Mat, of course, if he's not dead."

"Four of them?" He chuckled. "Well, any one of them could pick me up and throw me overboard. Even old Willie. But I've a gun—two guns—and they haven't."

She said wonderingly: "I think you're—enjoying this!" She smiled. "Rejoicing like a strong man to run a race. Isn't that in the Bible?"

"I'm not running a race, Mary." He smiled. "Maybe I would if I could, but there's nowhere to run to."

"I wish we could know if they do find Richard."

"You might be able to see the shore through the windows."

The window behind her revealed nothing. She went to the after window, saw only the length of the Bay empty of any life. But from her own cabin she saw the boats on the beach. She could see nothing else, no sign of the men. She stood vigil there, George by the desk steadily alert to meet whatever attack might come.

Time passed, and silence pressed down upon the Venturer. From the main cabin where Peter had been ironed came no faintest sound.

George faced the companionway. He was not tired, not weak. The emergency had stiffened him; he meant to meet it if he could. But deep in his thoughts, George felt suddenly Mary's eyes upon him. His eyes met hers; and after a moment, gravely, not smiling, she came toward him. She came to him and kissed him. Then, while they both smiled, without words, they kissed again.

She returned to her post. Time passed. Mary kept her vigil at the window. George could see her leaning across the bunk, resting her hands against the vessel's sides, her face close to the small square pane. There was something in the very posture of her shoulders eloquent of her yearning, of her hope, of her prayers.

George nodded, understanding, accepting the fact to which he could not be blind. But she and Richard, even if Richard were alive, would never speak to one another of their love; and they would take care that he should never guess. He knew this; and he vowed that so long as he lived, they must not know he knew the truth. Let them do their brave parts and think him blind.

Time somehow dragged itself away.

When Richard went ashore the day before, it was at Peter's suggestion. "Do you good to stretch your legs," the younger man urged. "You're going ship-crazy, Dick, the way you've acted since we passed the Rocks. What got into you? Mary?" He watched Richard shrewdly; but Richard without answering looked down at the boats preparing to leave the ship's side. "I'm going to try for some geese," Peter said. "Come along. Better bring a club. The pigs might jump us. They're ugly sometimes."

A walk ashore offered some outlet for his bottled energy, so Richard took that iron-bound club made out of a harpoon shaft, and went with Peter. While the men were hauling the floating coke ashore, he and Peter approached the little pond; but the geese were somehow alarmed, and they rose and flew up the slope and settled again far up the ridge. Peter called Gee, and the three men started that way.

The tussock grass, at first short and scattering, then taller and thicker, high above their heads, received them. Richard plunged through it headlong, welcoming its tough resistance, forcing himself into it, wrestling his way with his shoulders and his head bowed. His broken arm, secured to his side, made him awkward at the business. He dragged the heavy club behind him, bending his head, charging through the tough stuff with its interlacing luxuriance like a bull.

That which happened came with no warning. Richard, breaking blindly through the grass, lunging and fighting through the mesh of it like a fish caught in a net, stepped into nothingness. He fell, turning over sickeningly in the air. He fell on his right side, shoulder and hip striking together, in shallow water and muck. The breath was knocked out of him, and he was stunned and shaken and for a little could not move. Then he rolled painfully on his back and felt something hard under his head and laid his head on the shaft of the club he had carried. He got to his knees and stood up, gasping for breath; and his feet sank deeper in water and soft mire.

He looked up and saw the sky through a round hole five or six feet across, edged with grass, the long stuff broken by his fall hanging down into the hole. The hole was a full thirty feet above his head.

He called Peter's name, shouting it as loudly as he could with what breath his jolted lungs could catch; he shouted again and again, till he saw something move at the edge of the hole above him, saw Peter's head projected against the sky, heard Peter cry:

"Dick! Are you down there?"

"Yes."

After a moment Peter asked: "How deep is it?"

"Thirty feet, anyway. Maybe more."

"Can you climb out?"

Richard looked around, peering in the half-darkness of the pit; he walked two or three steps to one side, investigating. He tried for hand-holds, managed to climb a little; but he saw then, as his eyes became a little adjusted to the darkness here, that above his head the sides sloped inward toward the opening at the top.

He slid to the bottom again in a cloud of sooty dust. "No," he said. "It's shaped like the inside of a jug. The sides slant in to the top. You'll have to get a line, bring some men to haul me out."

"Sure."

"Be careful where you step," Richard warned him. "And make the men be careful when they come. Probably there are a lot of holes and pits around in the grass."

Peter repeated: "Sure." He said in sudden question "Hurt, are you?"

"No."

"I can see you now. You can't climb out, that's certain."

"No. Go ahead."

"I'll bring a line. You take it easy. I'll get the line we towed the casks ashore with."

"That's not heavy enough. Bring some whale line from the ship."

Peter agreed. "Yes, I'd better. I'll be quite a while, Dick; but I'll make it quick as I can. Take it easy."

His head disappeared. Richard stayed where he was, looking up at that small opening so far above him, wishing Peter were still there. He could hear the grass rustling in the wind; but the sound was faint. He was wet, and he was cold. The shallow pool of water into which he had fallen was directly under the opening, in the deepest part of the pit. He sat down at one side of it, plucking at the powdery gray-black ash with his hand, rubbing it between his fingers. It broke into a light dust that rose into his face and made him sneeze; but it stuck to his wet hands in a slimy smear. He shivered with a sudden chill, and wished Peter would hurry. This place had an unpleasant odor, vaguely alarming. Twenty minutes for Peter to reach the shore, ten minutes to the ship, ten minutes back to the shore again; say an hour in all before help would come. Richard did not like his plight. There was something terrifying in this prison into which he had fallen; in the stale, sick smell of it. He tried to estimate how long Peter had been gone. Five minutes? Ten? He sought to count off sixty seconds, and caught himself hurrying the count; so he began to beat time with his hand, tapping his knee rhythmically. It took a long time to count sixty seconds. There were sixty minutes in an hour. To count sixty seconds sixty times would need an eternity.

It must be at least half an hour since Peter left. Richard warned himself to be conservative; he called it twenty minutes. In an excess of caution, he decided it was only fifteen. If he began to expect Peter too soon, waiting would be hard. A rain squall drifted across the sky and a few drops pattered on the still surface of the pool with little tinkling sounds, almost musical. He liked them. They were company. They banished the dreadful silence here.

Peter must have reached the boats by this time. Probably the men were just sliding a boat into the water, shipping their oars. Peter would drive them, make them hurry.

Food for Freedom

YOU'LL hear more and more about the government's "Food for Freedom" program as the war progresses. It is a plan for assuring ample supplies of food to meet the needs of America and its allies in the war, and a large part of the world after the war. It is an undertaking of tremendous proportions, a challenge to American agriculture, and an opportunity of service for America's banks. Later in this series we will discuss this program and deal specifically with the ways that banks are helping make it a success.

PITY THE RETAILER

While the war restrictions may be tough on the average family, just stop to consider what it is doing to the poor retailer.

His profits will be cartailed, but that is not his big headache. Price ceilings on hundreds of articles have been declared and the retailer must keep these price ceilings and his own prices posted. The retail grocer must handle the rationing stamps, paste them on a large cardboard sheet and present them to the wholesaler before he can replenish his sugar supply.

Hardware men, plumbers, and all other merchants handling metal articles have been hit a terrific blow by government restrictions.

With all the discussion of gasoline rationing, seizure of private cars and tires, just figure out how much of a chance a car dealer has to sell an automobile. Actually, limitations on the use of gasoline and car seizure is only idle talk and should in no way affect the purchase of new cars.

So, while we sit around and think what a tough life it is, consider the poor retailer. He's the fellow who is really hard hit.

FIRE DESTROYS CHICKS IN GEO. SMITH GARACE

A garage at the rear of the George Smith home, West Lincoln Avenue, which was used as a brooder house for chicks, was badly damaged Tuesday afternoon by fire which resulted from ignition of oil leaking from the brooder stove. Ninety-nine baby chicks were in the building, out of which twenty were saved. A large amount of bean straw and vines stored in the upper portion of the garage was destroyed. The local fire department was called to extinguish the blaze.

FARMERS TO SHARE IN CONTROL PRICES

Tillers Seen to Gain by Federal Action Against Inflation

Michigan's 186,000 farmers would "lose their shirts" in any widespread inflation,—therefore they stand to gain by the new federal cost of living control measures which are going into effect this week and next.

That is the opinion of R. V. Gunn, Michigan State College agricultural economist, to preface a plan to acquaint all of the farmers in the state with the obligations and the opportunities which are apparent in the federal regulations. Rural neighborhood groups will get details throughout the state.

President Roosevelt's seven-point economic outline serves as background for the control over the cost of living. These seven points are: 1. Tax heavily and hold profits down. 2. Fix ceilings for wholesale, retail and manufacture prices. 3. Stabilize wages. 4. Stabilize prices received by farmers. 5. Encourage the purchase of war bonds. 6. Ration essential scarce commodities. 7. Discourage credit and installment buying and encourage the paying off of debts.

"This is the first time since 1910-14 that a farm parity seems to be at hand for many of farm products in terms of prices received and prices paid," Professor Gunn explains.

"Estimates of 1941 national income set a record of 92 billion dollars. Eighteen billions probably went into taxes and savings, leaving 74 billions for spending. In 1942, the national income may jump to 117 billions, but instead of having 74 billions of goods for consumers to purchase, there likely will be but about 65 billions in goods. After applying 31 billions to taxes and savings, there still would be an estimated excess of spending power of perhaps 17 billions. Unless this is directed into war bonds and pnying of debts, plus the use of a program such as this cost of living control, inflation cannot be avoided.

"Those with money compete in the bidding for the smaller stocks of consumer goods. The farmer, as in other inflation periods, likely would be left far behind."

NEW LIMIT ON PIKE IN EFFECT MAY 15TH

Reduced from Fifteen to Five; Ten from Great Lakes

The Conservation Department is reminding fishermen who will begin fishing on Michigan's 200 "pike lakes" May 15 that the creel limit has bee reduced from 15 to five pike a day. The Department said that special provisions will allow a take of ten pike daily on the Great Lakes.

Designated pike lakes are listed in the fish law digest distributed with each fishing license. Fishing on other lakes not in the pike or trout classification will not begin until June 25, the Department said.

SWEETS DO NOT ALL NEED TO BE SUGARED

Numerous Substitutes Suggested by Michigan State College

Sugar continues to make news and history but it isn't necessary to dip into the sugar supply to sweeten many of the normal Michigan meals.

Suggestions from the home economics extension service at Michigan State College indicate the several ways a cook can turn to save sugar.

One cup of refined white sugar can be replaced by one cup of maple sugar, maple syrup or honey or by 1½ cups of sorghum syrup or cane syrup or by two cups of corn syrup.

In the lemonade season a handy recipe can be used without disturbing the sugar. A tasty hot weather drink includes 2½ cups corn syrup, one quart ice water or carbonated water, a half cup strained lemon juice and an eighth teaspoon of salt. Mix the corn syrup and ice water, add the lemon juice and salt and serve with cracked ice.

In changing from sugar to syrup for sweetening, some modification is made in most recipes in the liquid.

Michigan State College authorities recommend:

For cakes and cookies, use honey to replace sugar, cup for cup, but use only half the quantity of other liquid usually recommended. If the original recipe suggests a cup of sugar and a cup of milk, then the cook can use a cup of honey and half a cup of milk.

When corn, cane or maple syrups replace sugar, reduce the liquid in the recipe by one-third.

Those who turn to sorghum syrup can follow the same rule as with other syrups, but the baking powder should be reduced. A half teaspoon of soda should be added for each cup of sorghum and this has the leavening power of two teaspoons of baking powder.

OPEN STATE PARKS FOR U.S.E. OF VACATIONERS

State Expects to Operate 46 Parks During Summer Season

Taking heed of the need for places of escape from premature summer heat, the conservation department is opening state parks to visitors as quickly as they can be fitted up for the season, without regard for the traditional Memorial Day start.

Picnickers have been using some of the parks even before the water systems were in working order and the picnic tables set out, the department's parks division reports.

The department expects to operate 46 state parks and three unimproved sites this summer, but higher labor costs and shifting of personnel to meet the anticipated load near industrial centers may delay complete staffing of some parks to June 15 or later.

POPPY DAY AN AID TO PAST, PRESENT VETS

Legion Auxiliary Sale to Take Place Saturday, May 23

Dimes, quarters and dollars dropped into the coin boxes of the "Poppy Girls" this year will aid the victims of the present war, as well as those of the first World War, according to Mrs. Eva McGhan, Poppy Day chairman, of Leslie T. Shapton No. 226 Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary.

The Auxiliary is rapidly completing arrangements for the annual observance of Poppy Day on May 23, when memorial poppies will be distributed throughout the city by Auxiliary members. A large corps of volunteers is being formed under Mrs. McGhan's leadership to work the entire day bringing the flowers of patriotic remembrance to everyone in the city.

"This year," said Mrs. Walstad, Auxiliary president, "the poppy not only honors and aids the men who defended American twenty-four years ago and their families, but also those defending America today and their families. Funds collected on Poppy Day will be used in the work the Legion and Auxiliary are doing for the disabled of both wars, and for needy families of men in the service, as well as those of veterans.

"The Legion and Auxiliary have had twenty years of experience in aiding service men and their dependents. They are able to make every dollar do maximum service in this field. Their volunteer workers have had long training and know the quickest and best methods of bringing relief to veterans and their families found in need.

"Victims of the present war are naturally turning to the Legion and Auxiliary for aid, and we want to give them the benefit of our service. The increased burden calls for increased funds. We hope that the public will be generous on Poppy Day this year because from the contributions made for the poppies comes the principal means of support for our work during the entire year ahead."

FARMERS ADVISED TO TREAT SEED POTATOES

Just As Much Labor to Grow Diseased Crop, Experts Aver

Michigan farmers preparing to plant an increased 1942 acreage of potatoes are urged to select good seed and treat before planting to insure quality and increased yields.

"It takes just as much labor to grow a diseased crop," warns J. H. Muncie, Michigan State College extension specialist in plant disease.

Three essential practices are recommended. Even healthy appearing seed potatoes may not be insurance they do not contain virus or degeneration disease. Therefore, says Dr. Muncie, it is important to get seed from a high yielding crop that showed little or no disease.

Second of the authority's recommendations advises treatment to kill scab or scurf. Commonly used is corrosive sublimate, four ounces of the chemical to 30 gallons of water. Seed tubers are soaked before cutting. Soaking should last 30 minutes and then the seed potatoes should be dried in the shade. If corrosive sublimate is too expensive or not available, then a commercial compound such as Semesan-Bel can be used as directed on the label. Formalin, one pint in 30 gallons of water, may be used for scab control, soaking tubers 1½ to 2 hours.

After the potatoes are treated, they should be placed in a cool, dry, shaded spot and allowed to green-sprout. This process increases the stand and insures earlier growth in the field.

Sprouts should be allowed to grow a quarter to a half inch before cutting into seed pieces. Then, says Dr. Muncie, the seed ought to go into a well-fitted soil. This is his preliminary recipe for a start on a volume of good quality potatoes for 1942. Spraying and dusting recommendations follow the crop into the harvest season.

KIWANIS NOTES

Scouts Donald North, "Bill" Poole and "Chuck" Bennett, members of the Charlevoix Troop of the Scenic Trails Council of the Boy Scouts of America, were guests and entertainers at the meeting of the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club held at the I.O.O.F. hall, Tuesday evening.

After the boys gave the Scout oath and recited the Scout law, Donald North, with "Chuck" Bennett as the victim, demonstrated the hand and head bandage and the arm sling. The boys proved their ability by sending Morse code by wire; and "Bill" Poole used a signal flag to send the alphabet in the same code.

The proper method of saluting the Flag, and decorum during the playing of the National Anthem were discussed by members and guests.

Many members volunteered to assist the CSO in its war-bond sales pledge campaign.

SPICES ARE INCLUDED UNDER QUOTA SYSTEM

Rationing Regulations Expected to Be Followed Soon

The war has added another hardship for civilians—a curtailment in the seasoning of food.

The War Production Board warning that many foreign spice-growing regions were in enemy hands, ordered a quota system for distributing eight common imported spices. The shipping shortage will prevent normal importations from those regions that remain available, the WPB said.

The spices named were black and white pepper, pimento (allspice) cassia (cinnamon), cloves, ginger, nutmeg and mace.

BOATS VISITING CANADA NEED DEPARTURE PERMIT

Effective immediately, departure permits will be required for all yachts, sailboats, and small boats traveling on the Great Lakes from ports or places in the United States to any place in Canada. The required forms are available at the offices of the various customs officers whose districts' border on the lakes. It is advisable to make application for permits at least three days prior to the time of departure.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

May 17 has been set as "I'm An American Day" by President Roosevelt and he has asked for nation-wide observance of that date. In response to that request the AAA county committee reporter, Geo. C. Ferris, has interviewed several naturalized foreign born farmers of Charlevoix county who are actively and enthusiastically participating in the AAA "Food for Freedom" campaign. After a few minutes of conversation, there can be no doubt in anyones mind of the patriotism of these men and as they are among the leading and successful farmers in their localities, they can be considered typical of all foreign born citizens in the county rural districts.

Carl Prohaska, AAA community chairman of Bay township, was born in Silsin, Germany, on the farm of his father which he and his brothers helped to work. He was in Germany during the last World War and states that two Russian prisoners of war were used to assist in the farm work during that period. He added that many French and English prisoners also worked on neighboring farms. The farm was well equipped and mach machinery was used, such as potato diggers, mowing machines and grain reapers. His father was considered a successful and solid citizen. After the Armistice, Carl went across the border into Chekoslovakia and entered into business for himself for a year. It was during that stay that he met and wedded the charming woman who is now the mother of his four lovely daughters. In 1925 he came to America and purchased the farm on which he has since lived, except for a short time when he worked in Grand Rapids. He says, "I like America, it has given me a freedom that I enjoy, I would not want to return." A piece of work that he is especially proud of is the pine and evergreen plantation he set out, under the provisions of the AAA program, on the sand dunes south of the Boyne City, Charlevoix road to prevent wind erosion. A few years, it will be an effective wind break and will give added beauty to that road.

Peter Dobinink, in Hudson township, another AAA community chairman, is an example to his neighbors, not only as a farmer but as an active participant in his township school and other AAA activities. Born in Ukrania in 1889 on the 60 acre farm of his father, who on account of the size of the farm was considered wealthy, 8 horses and 16 cows, he left home at 17 years of age because the country was too crowded and no opportunities were in prospect. After traveling through the countries of Europe and acquiring the ability to speak 15 languages, he came to the United States where he was in business for many years in various cities. In 1927 he located on his present farm on the Boyne Falls, Walloon Lake road where he lives with his family today. A son-in-law, now working on defense materials, expects to be drafted in a very short time. Peter says, "Anyone can have the old country, who wants it, but for me, America. I like it and here I intend to stay."

Julius Jesse, Chandler township farmer, was born on a farm in Russia near Patkow, in 1889. He came to the United States in 1909 and helped his father on a farm near Chicago for eight years and then in Boyne City for two years. He then bought the present farm on which he lives. He states that he is glad to be here as he has more liberty and freedom. America has given him opportunities of which he has taken advantage. He enjoys his car, horses and 34 head of cattle which he would not have had in his old home in Russia.

Gust Olstrom, of Eveline township, was born in Soderhelm, Sweden, in 1879 on the farm of his father where he helped and also worked in a saw mill. He says that farmers there are in scattered holdings with neighbor's plots located in between. Each field is fenced and the cattle were allowed to run free. He was married there and one son was born in Sweden. He and his family came to the United States in 1903 and located in Mancelona where he worked in the saw mill and coal kilns. Later he came to Boyne City and after a few years spent at the tannery he returned to his farm on the Advance, East Jordan road which he purchased in 1918. An active and successful farmer, he and his wife are well liked and admired by all their neighbors and friends. Four sons, two of them on farms of their own, one in State Forestry work, one still in school, and one daughter, have given them great pride. They feel that they have contributed their share toward America. Mr. Olstrom said, "I have no desire to return to Sweden, except maybe for a short visit. America is good enough for me and my family."

These men and women are all active in helping in the "Food for Freedom" work. They want to see America win and retain its way of life—the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness, without old world barrier and serfdom.

Charlevoix girls who want to help win the war by working in war industries, now have the opportunity to obtain war production experience and training in mechanical fields that will fit them to take factory jobs.

This training is made possible through the National Youth Administration, which federal agency is now opening its war production and training shops for girls. The first resident center for girls was opened by the NYA in Saginaw, May 1, 1942. While the shop is located in Saginaw, the resident units make it possible to accommodate girls from all parts of the state.

During their period of training, girls will receive $30 a month for productive work. Deductions made on a semi-cooperative basis for food, medical care, and housing, leave approximately $10 for personal use.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

You aught to meet my friend, Will Dudley. I suppose Will must be seventy-eight or nine . . . but you'd never koow it. He's tall and lean and hard as a hickory. Aod although the only formal education he ever had was a few wioters io the old red schoolhouse, I thiok that he's the wisest man I know in maoy ways.

For one thiag, Will taught me tha value of what he calls "Just a-settio!"

Come upon Will in the evealng, when his hard day's work is dono, aod you'll find him "just a-settin," in a rocker on his porch. In ona hand he'll have his old briar pipe and in the other, a tall cool glass of beer.

"Wholesome, appetizin' beer," says Will, "is standard equipment for proper settin! Puts a feller in an easy-goin' peaceful mood."

You see, Will holds the theory that in our present mixed-up world, a man needs a quiet hour every day. An hour in which to sit down qaietly aad restore his strength and courage.

Will thinks, and I agree with him, that a man ought to forget all his own and the world's worries darlng that hour-of-peace. And Will feels that a glass of fragraot mellow beer helps most to bring you quiet relaxation.

Show me the man who sits down quietly of an evening with his glass of beer nnd I'll show you a man who is wise in the ways of living. Such men, like Will Dudley, live to a ripe old age, unembittered by the troubles of the world. They seem to remain, all their lives, sweet-natured and kindly.

Time has a way of rendering accurate judgments on the value of the things men use and snjoy in the world. And Tims . . . thousands of years of it . . . has banded down the verdict that beer is a pleasant and worthy companion for all men of good will.

Nine Million War Bond Purchases Reported for Beer's 9th Birthday

Hundreds of Millioos in Taxes Paid in 1941 Help Fund Natioo's War Effort

A 9-milllon dollar purchase of defense bonds by brewers and their employees was announced as a feature of the industry's commemoration of the ninth anniversary of beer's re-legnlization by Congress in 1933. Continuing purchase of additional millions of defense bonds has been arranged throughout the industry "for the duration."

In additlon to bond snbscriptions, the industry's huge tax payments are swelliog the Federal revenues for the Nation's war effort. The Brewing Industry Fonodation announced that beer taxes of $348,876,726 paid to the Federnl government last year, were sufficient to buy nbout 1,000 four-engined bombers, or 3,488 fighter planes, or 43 destroyers, or 58 submarines or 5,194 medium tanks or to equip 1,392,000 soldiers.

Listing other social and economic gains in the nine years since Congressional action re-legalized tho manufacture and sale of beer April 7, 1933, The Foundation cited these benefits:

1. Thousands of local communities have shared in business benefits totaling 15 and a quarter billion dollars through retail sale of beer, and distributed in trade channels of every state.

2. Employment was provided for a million persons, engaged in tho manufacture and distribution of beer, and in about 100 allied industries supplying materials, equipment and services.

3. Brewers have purchased 33 billion pounds of farm products at a cost of about 815 million dollars.

4. In nine years, Federal, State and local beer taxes approximated $3,280,000,000. Taxes represented about 2½ cents of every dime the consumer paid for beer in 1941. Beer tax money is applied in different states toward old-age pensions, maintenance of public schools, state institutions, relief, public health, physically handicapped and dependent children, aid to agriculture and various public improvements.

5. Promotion of moderation has resulted in better law observance and in lower traffic casualty and alcoholism rates.

6. A record of temperance and good conduct throughout the armed forces in connection with sale of beer in military areas in 37 states.

7. The brewers' program of voluntary cooperation with law enforcement agencies continues to win increasing public approval.

8. A wholesome beverage of moderation is legally available in every state and consumed by from 40 ta 50 million people.

Throughout the country, the brewiog industry is asking the people to be moderate, patronize only legnl and reputable places where beer and ale are sold, and to urge upon friends and public officials the vital need of separating beer from any unwholesome influeaces. The industry is vigorously opposed to the "black sheep" type of licensed retailer, as are those who erroneously hold beer responsible for his misdeeds.

Ever since the start of the war in Europe and more especially since our own entrance into the war, the military authorities of the country have beeo very much concerned about the possibility of damage to our shipping docks and shipping lines on the Great Lakes through possible acts of sabotage. The uninterrupted movement of iron ore, limestone, coal, grain, cement, lumber, petroleum, and other products essential to the war effort on our Great Lakes Waterways is of paramount importance in the successful prosecution of the war. Damage or destruction of any of the important shipping docks on the lakes would be very serious. However, there are certain restricted areas and certain narrow channels in the Great Lakes system in which the hazard is much greater. The sinking of one of our large ore carriers in such restricted channels would cause a very serious tie-up in the entire lake transportation system. The greatest bottleneck on the Great Lakes is, of course, at the Soo Locks through which must pass 90 per cent of the iron ore supply of the Nation which means that in its raw state, 90 per cent of every tank, of every gun and rifle, of every military motor vehicle, of every aircraft fuselage, passes through these vital Soo Locks. What a delay at this point could mean to the war effort was clearly illustrated last year when a railroad bridge in the Soo Channel was damaged and put out of commission for several days which not only caused an estimated loss of one million tons of iron ore but seriously delayed the operation of a huge fleet of carriers. Military garrisons guarding the Soo Locks have been tremendously increased recently and it is now believed that the locks are adequately protected against damage from enemy aircraft.

The Coast Guard has been charged with the responsibility for security patrols on important waterfront property and their guards have been stationed at all important docks. All persons who have to go on the waterfront for any purpose must carry a Coast Guard pass to obtain which they are required to be registered, photographed, and fingerprinted. There is no question but that such precautions are absolutely necessary in war times.

The military authorities, however, have been very much concerned over just what to do looking toward the protection of our lake vessels and the prevention of any possible sabotage on those vessels.

A similar danger, of course, has always existed at the Panama Canal but down there it has been possible for the Army and Navy for many years to meet vessels on arrival in the harbor and to put aboard all vessels a squad of soldiers who patrol the deck during its entire passage through the Canal and, at the same time, when necessary, search the vessel. As an additional precaution in Panama, naval officers stationed in the pilot house and engine room and connected by a portable telephone unit insure the vessel against damage either through unintentional or intentional mistakes in signaling from the pilot house to the engine room. Such a method of protection by the Army and Navy has for various reasons been rejected as impractical if not entirely impossible for protection of vessels in our several restricted areas on the lakes.

It was proposed that the Coast Guard put enlisted men on every boat but this plan has now been rejected for various reasons. In the first place, some of the smaller boats do not have quarters for additional men. In the second place, in view of the fact that there is acutally need for such armed guard protection only for relatively short and very infrequent periods, it can easily be seen that such a method would not only be very costly relatively but, at the same time, would to all practical purposes cause the immobilization of these enlisted men for the entire navigation season.

Consequently, a new method has been worked out which it is thought would prove entirely adequate and satisfactory. By means of legislation which we have reported out of our Merchant Marine Committee in the House last week, it is proposed to commission in the Coast Guard Auxiliary for temporary active duty at certain times and without pay all licensed officers on our Great Lakes vessels. This whole question has been given very careful thought and it is felt that the deals have been satisfactorily worked out so that no captain, mate, or engineer on these lake vessels should fail to sign an application for commission in the Coast Guard Auxiliary. For this special service, the Coast Guard has waived all customary physical and mental examinations believing, of course, that these licensed officers are fully capable of performing the duties assigned to them. Under the plan, captains will be commissioned as Lieutenant Commanders in the Coast Guard Auxiliary; Chief Engineers as Lieutenants, Senior Grade; First Mates and First Assistant Engineers will be Lieutenants, Junior Grade; Second and Third Mates and Assistant Engineers will be Ensigns. The Government will provide uniforms and fire arms for these officers and whenever their vessel is moving through these restricted channels or are anchored in such restricted areas, several of these licensed officers in the crew will temporarily go on active duty in the Coast Guard Reserve. They will be in uniform and will be wearing their revalvers and for the time they are on active duty in the Coast Guard Reserve they will be charged with the security of that boat, they will be fully answerable to and be fully supported by the Federal Government in all acts necessary to insure the safety of these vessels and the security of the United States waters. During such periods of temporary active duty they will have nothing whatsoever to do with the operation of the boat in their customary capacity but will be solely and strictly officers of the United States Coast Guard Reserve.

Under existing law, while these officers will be permitted to wear their uniforms at any time or at all times, nevertheless they will have no regular military status when they are not on such temporary active duty. Furthermore, it is understood that the Coast Guard will use these officers on such temporary active duty only during the Great Lakes navigation season and they will not be transferred by the Coast Guard to any other vessel on the Great Lakes, or be transferred from the Great Lakes to other duty elsewhere.

It is confidently expected here in Washington by the Coast Guard and other military authorities, that by the adoption of this program it will not be necessary to place any other armed guards on board Great Lakes vessels for the duration. This is assuming, of course, that these licensed officers on the vessels fully carry out the orders given them by the Government looking to the security of their vessel. These orders will of necessity be as strict and rigid as may be necessary and it must be distinctly understood that while such officers are on temporary active duty, every man on that boat must obey his orders as coming directly from Uncle Sam himself.

Be careful! Our forests are vital to victory, Claude R. Wickard, U. S. Secretary of Agriculture, points out that 20 million acres of timberland destroyed annually represent thousands of planes, ships, guns and equipment that should, but don't go to our fighting men. Don't miss this important and instructive article written exclusively for The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next week's Sunday Chicago Herald-American.

USE, DON'T ABUSE

Jacking up a car to rest idle for the duration will not help to win the war, The car merely deteriorates its life out instead of wearing it out.

Driving fast is now out of the picture. Buying two new tires per year, which used to be n virtue, is now not even a vice—there's no exercise of will involved. It does not happen. The ordinary pleasure driver must get along with what he now has for u long time.

But idle cars are not useful. In the opinion of an expert, this is about what happens to them: In about three months the battery will lose its charge. The tires will begin to go bad. The inside of the crankcase will begin to accumulate moisture from the air. If the engine is not used for a long time, this water condensing from the air will pit the cylinder walls, rust the piston rings and corrode the surface of bearings.

It is the part of wisdom, then, to use the car. Most drivers know roughly how much gas they use in a year, how many miles they usually drive. If they think first before jumping in and rushing off, they will find they can get along on half that mileage. If they cut the speed down by a fourth, they will save more things than gas. They will conserve tires, road-surfaces and their own nervous systems.

There will be some gas, even in the East. Tires used, not abused, may hold out the three or four years necessary before synthetic rubber comes.

The car is a creature intended for motion; inaction is bad for it. Speed and abuse must go for the present. Moderate use will keep it in condition.

NO GAS

If Americans were in England they would take the coming gasoline shortage quite calmly. They would be used to it. For some time the British have been limited to enough gasoline for 120 miles a month. Of course with their short distances such restriction does not mean what it would here; but in no country would this allow for much driving to and from work. Now even this meagre amount is to be cut off. After July 1, there will be no gasoline except for war work.

If necessary, Americans could take this, too, and like it, with a stern and puritanic satisfaction in the hardship.

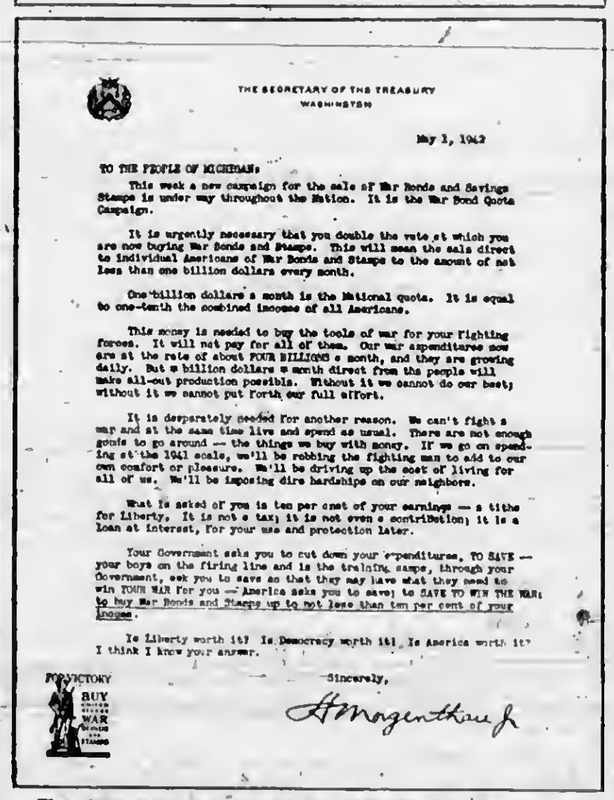
A MESSAGE FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY



THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY
WASHINGTON

May 1, 1942

TO THE PEOPLE OF MICHIGAN:

This week a new campaign for the sale of War Bonds and Savings Stamps is under way throughout the Nation. It is the War Bond Quota Campaign.

It is urgently necessary that you double the rate at which you are now buying War Bonds and Stamps. This will mean the sale direct to individual Americans of War Bonds and Stamps to the amount of not less than one billion dollars every month.

One billion dollars a month is the National quota. It is equal to one-tenth the combined incomes of all Americans.

This money is needed to buy the tools of war for your fighting forces. It will not pay for all of them. Our war expenditures now are at the rate of about FOUR BILLIONS a month, and they are growing daily. But a billion dollars a month direct from the people will make all-out production possible. Without it we cannot do our best; without it we cannot put forth our full effort.

It is desperately needed for another reason. We can't fight a war and at the same time live and spend as usual. There are not enough goods to go around — the things we buy with money. If we go on spending at the 1941 scale, we'll be robbing the fighting man to add to our own comfort or pleasure. We'll be driving up the cost of living for all of us. We'll be imposing dire hardships on our neighbors.

What is asked of you is ten per cent of your earnings — a tithe for Liberty. It is not a tax; it is not even a contribution; it is a loan at interest, for your use and protection later.

Your Government asks you to cut down your expenditures, TO SAVE — your boys on the firing line and in the training camps, through your Government, ask you to save so that they may have what they need to win YOUR WAR for you — America asks you to save; to SAVE TO WIN THE WAR; to buy War Bonds and Stamps up to not less than ten per cent of your income.

Is Liberty worth it? Is Democracy worth it? Is America worth it? I think I know your answer.

Sincerely,
H. Morgenthau Jr.

FOR VICTORY BUY UNITED STATES WAR BONDS AND STAMPS

The above letter was sent to this newspaper by Secretary Morgenthau in Washington. We publish it in the interest of the War Bond Quota Campaign and earnestly recommend that all our readers do their share in the tremendous job ahead of financing the War effort.

"The Great Man's Lady"

Romuntic drama played against the vast sweep of our own vast country with the thrills und power that went into its development is headed this wuy in Paramount's triple-starring filn, "The Great Man's Lndy," with Barbnra Stnnwyck, Joel McCrea and Brian Donlevy.

Due to nrrive May 16-17 at the Palnce Theater, "The Great Man's Lady" is said to combine the excitement of the highly successful "Union Pacific," in which the three stnrs nppeared together for the first time, and the romantic fireworks of "Ball uf Fire." The story covers a spnn of many years, showing Miss Stanwyck first as n girl of sixteen when she elopes from her staid Philadelphia home with McCrea, a Lochinvar in buckskins, and carrying her through a whirlwind life to the point where the world waits on her doorstep to learn the secret behind "The Great Man's Lady."

"Glamour Boy"

Film fans, meet Jackie Cooper, Hollywood's newest glamour boy!

Yessir, Jackie has matriculated into the big time although he still has three years to go before he'll be old enough to vote. He'll be at the Palace Theater on May 18 jn his first real grown-up picture, Parnmount's sparkling new comedy romance entitled, appropriately enough, "Glamour Boy."

Shnring stellar honors with the 18-year-old Cooper will be 17-year-old Susanna Foster, one of tho screen's youngest songbirds and one of Paramount's most promising youngsters. According to advunco reports, this new romantic team makes "Glamour Boy" one of the season's brightest and freshest comedies.

"The Night of January 16th"

A murder mystery well-garnished with laugh lines and situntions is a piece of film entertainment to treasure, nnd it looks very much like "The Night of January 16th," the new Paramount chuckle mystery, which arrives May 21 at the Palace Theater, is just that kind of picture.

It stars handsome Robert Preston and lovely Ellen Drew, a pair who would seem to complement each other ndmirably to the satisfnction of their legions of fans. Preston has been scoring personal successes in picture after picture.

Miss Drew, one of the screen's best-looking enchantresses, has an neting ability that is outstanding, as she has proved in several recent performancea.

Looking over the featured cast, one finds assembled n group of seasoned performers. Heading the cast is Nils Asther, smooth and polished film favorite. Among the others are Margaret Hayes, Clarence Kolb, Alice White, Cecil Kellaway and Cliff "Double-Talk" Nnzarro.

Whern Uncle Sam fixed the top price which can be chnrged for everything from aspirin to ironing hoards, it was the most far-reaching governmental order ever experienced by the American people.

"Tell us what to do and we will do it," has been the attitude with which the order has been received.

The Office of Price Administration tells you whnt to do in a simple three-point guide to shoppers:

(1) Before July 1, educate yourself as to hew the price rules work and don't try to be a price policeman.

(2) After July 1, report established violations to War Price and Rationing Bonrds.

(3 For the duration, remember thnt you have a personnl obligation to buy at or below the ceiling price and the plun won't work nnless you mako it work.

We Are All at War

Since finding out how the price rules work is the first step in the OPA guide, the following questions and answers will acquaint you with the essential provisions:

Q. Why was the Generni Maximum Price Regulation issued?

A. It is a war measure to stop further increases in the cost of living.

Q. Why have prices been rising?

A. People have more money to spend and less civilian goods to buy.

Q. What prices are covered?

A. Nearly all prices charged by retailers, wholesalers, manufacturers and producers.

Q. What are the ceiling prices?

A. In general, the highest price charged for an individual artiele during March, 1942, hy each individual seller.

Q. Then a can of tomatoes might cost me more at one store than at nnother and both prices be legal?

A. Yes. The maximum price for an articlo is fixed at the highest priee at which it was sold at that particular store in March, 1942.

Q. When does this ceiling become effective?

A. For goods sold at retail, which affects most of us, it becomes effective on May 18. However, for retail services to the consumer, it does not become effective until July 1; while for sales by manufacturers, producers and wholesulers and services rendered to an industrial consumer, the ceiling became effective May 11.

Q. Is there a limit on charges by laundries, dry cleaners, autu repnir shops, radio repairmen and such?

A. Yes. These are classed as retail services to the consumer, but purely personul services such as heauty nnd barber shops, are exempt.

Q. Can prices be lower than the ceiling?

A. Yes. They can be as low as the seller wishes.

Q. Is there n maximum on food or beverages served in hotels, restaurants and lunchrooms?

A. No.

Q. What does the price regulation cover?

A. Practically every article used in the life and work of America. Included are the basic "cost-of-living" articles — clothing, fuel, furniture, most foods, hardware, uppliances, tobacco, drugs, toilet articles and agricultural supplies.

Q. But there ure some exceptions?

A. Yes. The OPA is not permitted to set ceilings on farm products that are selling below parity. The Act also exempts newspapers, magazines, theater admissions, railroad and bus fares. Because of obvious administrative difficulties, also exempt are fresh fish, fresh fruits and vegetables, rare stamps and coins und objects of art. Raw farm products such as wheat are exempt from ceiling but those sume products, when processed and prepared for the consumer, as in the form of bread, are under price ceilings.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

May 10, 1942

Dear Ken,

A new "ship" and a new address, therefore, I must advise you so I'll continue to receive the "good ole Courier." I sure do enjoy getting it nnd read every line a couple of times.

I made a jump in raise on May 1st, and am now a second class petty officer, but can't fully appreciate it until thnt first pay check comes through next week. (Only about 20 more jumps and 1,000 more yenrs and I'll be an admiral.)

I wish I could say something about my new duties, but even the good Courier might fall into the wrong hands, so I must remain quiet.

The letters you receive from all the boys from all over the world clearly indicate their appreciation to you for your generous service, and all I can say is, just add my name to that list. Thnnks loads.

Respectfully,
Morrie Foster.

No ceilings exist on food ur beverages sold for consumption on the premises by restaurants and hntels, because of difficulty of enforcement due to possible adjustment in quantity and quality of servings.

Farmers may sell commodities grown und processed on his fnrm to a total of not more than $75 in any one month without price restriction.

Of course, used household merchandise is excluded. And so are professional or skilled services.

How will this effect the retailer?

According to Otis Cook of the Michigan Retail Institute, the general effect will be unfuvorable on small units of business unless the Office of Price Administration grants equitable relief from the nrbitrary freezing of both retail and wholesale prices to March, 1942.

More important than price freezing, in Cook's judgment, is the prospect of a growing scarcity of merchandise due to war priorities and a resultant shrinkage of sales and prufit. Rationing of important commodities is regarded hy Cook to be inevitable.

One favorable factor may be a tendency for the price ceiling to become the prevalent selling level. As sales drop off, selling prices will rise toward the ceiling.

Lag of price movements is the hasis of complaint by retailers.

For example, n store may have sold in March a product for $1 which it purchased six months before for 60 cents, thus allowing 40 cents for operating costs and profit.

At the same time this store, if it bought the same merchandise in March, might have had to pay 70 cents. Hence the selling price would have become $1.10.

When the government froze the price at $1, it automatically cut the retailer's margin from 40 to 30 cents, a 25 per cent difference. The OPA insists that any "roll back" must be at the expense of manufacturing and wholesale prices; that the $1 ceiling must prevail, come what may. But will this be done?

One general effect is a drastic readjustment in which efficient stores may make the grade but inefficient units may not.

Services, instead of merchandise, may become substitute sources of retailing revenue.

One compensating factor for the small retailing unit which may help to offset the disadvantage of price control and rationing is today's transportation situation due to the scarcity of rubber tires. People will tend to shop at the nearby local stores whether they are in cities or small towns. This offers an opportunity, almost unparalleled, to merchants of rural trading centers whose chief competitors in the past have been Chicago mail order houses and the large city stores.

Advertising, if used intelligently, becomes a powerful and profitable selling weapon.

Rationing of gasoline, which is now being introduced in Atlantic coast states, may be extended nationally by July 1, 1942.

The big "if" in the picture, as it is reported relinbly to us, is whether volunteer rationing of automobile transportution can be effected in Michigan through public acceptance of the "Pontiac Plan."

If citizens are willing to make sacrifices by voluntary action, then gasoline rationing may be put off.

The same conclusion may be drawn with regard to purchase of war bonds nnd stamps. If citizens agree to voluntary payroll deductions, then enforced methods may be avoided.

"Look, Pop—our Standard Oil dealer's gonna help keep our tires rolling!"

You know how important it is to have correct tire inflation. Tires underinflated 30% lose at least one quarter of their possible life. But you can't get correct inflation with inaccurate tire gauges—and it's a fact that many gauges now in use are inaccurate by a number of pounds.

To guard you against this danger, Standard Oil has equipped its men with devices for testing the gauges of all Standard Oil dealers. A constant inspection is maintained so that faulty gauges can be discovered and adjusted.

Perhaps it is not true patriotism to make a pleasure of necessity, but it is a fact that there is no hardship in doing most of the things we have so far been asked to do, as civilians and householders, in this war. Most of us have long prayed that the time would come when it would cease to be fashionable to keep up with the Joneses. We have wanted to reduce our standard of living because its maintenance took so much of our time and energy that we could not enjoy our so-called blessings. We resented the idea of trading in houses, automobiles and household utilities at heavily depreciated prices, when they were nearly as good as new. We couldn't understand why styles in clothing and furniture changed as often as the film at the theater. We couldn't reconcile ourselves to the habits and nttitudes of the younger generation, but to make a stand against the trend was a lonely, if not impossible job. Now suddenly taxes and high cost of living make thrift imperative and the purchase of war bonds makes super-thrift compulsory. For two decades we have told ourselves that we should walk more, find our recreation in inexpensive games, and seek in the quiet of our homes a source of family unity and uplift. The American way of life was not all good. We are quickly discarding the undesirable features. The new order is likely to produce gains in national character of which we are now only dimly aware.

Bring the chip on your shoulder, too, if you have one, for the CSO committee will welcome any criticism.

LAKE SUPERIOR TARGET AREA OUTLINED

Warn Boat Operators Keep Clear of Zone from May to June 11

A warning was issued today to lake shipping captains and fishermen by Col. Fred T. Cruse, commanding officer of the Sault Ste. Marie military district with headquarters at Fort Brady, that coast artillery anti-aircraft practice firing May 12 through June 11 will create a danger area extending on the east coast of Lake Superior from Agawa Point, Ont., to Corbeil Point, Ont., and west into the lake from 19 to 22 miles.

Col. Cruise announced that firing at towed aerial and waterborne targets will begin one hour after daylight and will cease one hour before dark each day.

The official description of the area was as follows: "The water area enclosed by an east-west line extending west from Agawa Point, Ont., to the 85-degree, five-minute meridian—south along the 85-degree, five-minute meridian to an east-west line through Corbeil Point, Ont.—east to Corbeil Point, Ont."

From Agawa Point to the meridian indicated is approximately 19 miles. The danger boundary then extends approximately 32 miles south and then 22 miles east to Corbeil Point, Ont.

Bands from Alanson, Alba, Bellaire, Boyne City, Charlevoix, East Jordan, Gaylord, Harbor Springs, Kaikaska, Kingsley, Mancelona, Onaway, Petoskey, and Traverse City came for the event.

William D. Revelli, University of Michigan band director, was guest conductor and critic. No awards were given the bands, but each band was individually appraised and offered constructive criticism as to their best features and in what way each could improve.

Individual performances were given during the morning and afternoon at the gymnasium. At noon all bands paraded down Antrim street, through Bridge street, and up Park avenue.

Baton-twirlers of several bands gave an exhibition on the junior high school lawn at 7:30 in the evening. Judges were Mayor Robert Bridge and City Superintendent Clifford McKibbin, Jr., whose selections for honors were, in alphabetical order, Colleen Casey of Alanson, Mary Mellencamp, of Boyne City, Jim Rockwell and Don Welsh of Gaylord. Identical medals were awarded the four twirlers.

All bands joined in a massed concert at the gymnasium at 8:15, in which 575 musicians took part, led by Mr. Revelli.

FOREIGN WAR VETS POPPY SALE MAY 23

Proceeds to Aid All Present and Ex-service Men of U. S.

Proceeds of the 21st annual Buddy Poppy sale, to be conducted Saturday, May 23, by Charlevoix County Post No. 1153, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will be used exclusively for the betterment of conditions among all men in uctive service, and ex-service men and their dependents, according to Lee C. Allard, chairman of the Buddy Poppy sale.

Indisputable evidence is available to prove that the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States was the first veterans organization to promote a nationally organized campaign for the annual distribution of poppies made by disabled and needy veterans.

"Ever since other organizations have taken up the sale of poppies, we have urged and worked for cooperntion and harmony in spite of opposition, rebuffs, and misstatements that have been used to discredit our rights, our methods and our purposes," declares a stntement issued by Adjutant General R. B. Handy, Jr., from National Headquarters here of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S.

"In February, 1924, the V.F.W. registered the name 'Buddy Poppy' with the United States patent office, and a certificate was issued on May 20, 1924, granting the V.F.W. all trade-mark rights in the name of 'Buddy' under the classification of artificial flowers. The V.F.W. has made that trademark a guarantee that all poppies bearing that name and the V.F.W. label are genuine products of the work of disabled and needy veterans. No organization, firm, or individual, can make legal use of the name 'Buddy Poppy.'

"The poppy was adopted as the official Memorial flower of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. by the National Encampment held in Seattle, Washington, in August, 1922 following the first nation-wide distribution of poppies in May, 1922, ever conducted by any veterns organization."

FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

So you're going to have a victory garden this year? If you're looking for an easy-to-grow vegetable and also a health building one, you can't go wrong with tomatoes. They are packed with vitamins A, B and C, being one of our best sources of the latter. Of all garden vegetables it is the most versatile. You can eat tomatoes fresh, cooked, canned or juiced; green, they may be made into sweet pickles or relishes.

A half dozen plants well tended will keep a family of four in tomatoes for three months or more. A couple of dozen plants will provide enough for every use and then leave some for your friends.

The best varieties to buy are the newer, disease resistant ones. Tomatoes, like most other vegetables, like sun and a well drained location. It is well to spade compost on the ground if possible. The ground needs to be well spaded and worked up, of course.

Tomato plants should not be set out until danger of frost is over. They should be set three to four inches deep in the ground and about two feet apart if they are to be staked, or four to five feet apart if they are to be left unstaked. Evening or a cloudy day makes an ideal planting time. They should be watered well after planting, and the next day the loose dry soil should be pulled over the damp space about the plant to prevent evaporation and to avoid leaving the ground baked.

BOUNTIES FOR COYOTE HIGHER DURING APRIL

State Pays Trappers for 158 Taken In Upper Peninsula

Bountying of 158 coyotes last month—an unusually high number for April—is believed by conservation department officials to be merely a reflection of advanced weather conditions rather than an index to coyote numbers. Ordinarily the take of coyotes, including pups, does not increase markedly until May.

The total April bounty bill, including payment for 16 bobcats taken in the upper peninsula, but no payments for wolves, was $2,810. Only two of the 158 coyotes hountied were taken in the lower peninsula.

DRAFTEES WILL GET IMMEDIATE FURLOUGH

Selective Service Headquarters Change Ruling on June 15

The Army selective service headquarters has announced plans to grant selectees a two-week furlough immediately after induction to permit their return home at government expense tn adjust personal affairs.

Effective June 15, the new arrangement replaces the present system of 10-day furloughs upon requests and is designed to "eliminate any injustices which might occur to men inducted immediately following physical examination by the Army."

If found qualified for military duty by Army medical men at the induction center, a selectee would be transferred to the Enlisted Reserve Corps for a 14-day period. He thus would be able to return home before he is called to active duty.

Transportation and meals enroute from the induction center to the locality of the board which ordered a selectee to report would be paid by the government.

LOCAL SAILOR ON TORPEDOED SHIP

ROBERT GALLAGHER WAS ONE OF 24 SURVIVORS

Tells of Hardships During Eight Days Adrift Before Rescue by United States Destroyer

Robert Gallagher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Gallagher, 402 Antrim street, this city, was one of 24 survivors of a torpedned vessel of the American merchant marine, which was sunk April 15 with a loss of 14 men. Gallagher was an oiler on the ship.

Gallagher arrived here May 10 from New York and spent a week at home before going on to Milwaukee, Wis., to report to a doctor for physical check-up. He is recovering quickly from the effects of his experience.

The torpedoing occurred when the ship was a day and a half out of Boston. Two U-boats, "one so big it looked like a tughoat," stalked the American merchantman as it zigzagged through the sea, and at 9:42 p. m. torpedoes crashed through her sides. The No. 1 lifeboat was splintered, the No. 2 boat got away with 24 men. The ship went down in four minutes, seeming to split right in the middle.

Their lifeboat's rudder was lost, and for eight days the men were buffeted by headwinds until rescued by a United States destroyer and landed at Bermuda. They had drifted 500 miles, living on rations of two hard crackers and a cup of water a day. From Bermuda, the men were brought to New York by clipper plane, and taken to Marine Hospital on Staten Island for treatment of exposure and salt water blisters. Gallagher's feet were severely frostbitten, as he and many of the other men did not have time to put on their shoes before getting into the lifeboat.

POPPY DAY PROCLAMATION

Saturday, May 23, was proclaimed as Poppy Day in Charlevoix in a proclamation issued today by Mayor Robert Bridge. The Mayor called upon all citizens to observe the day by wearing memorial poppies of The American Legion and Auxiliary and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The proclamation stated:

"Whereas, the wearing of the memorial poppy is a fitting and effective way of keeping bright the memory of those young men who gave their lives in America's service in the World War, and

"Whereas, the men of Charlevoix served gallantly in that war, some being called upon to sacrifice their lives in that service, and

"Whereas, the present national emergency requires the same type of unselfish patriotism displayed by the men and symbolized by their memorial flowers, and

"Now, therefore, I, Robert Bridge, Mayor of the city of Charlevoix, do proclaim, Saturday, May 23, to be Poppy Day in the city of Charlevoix, and urge all citizens to observe the day by wearing the memorial poppies in honor of the men who died for America in the war of 1917 and 1918."

Wa always warned our family that they would have to face a day of solemn reckoning, but we naver expected a dny liko the one we aro now living in.

Vetorans of World Wnr I, through their own experience, know how difficult it was to obtain American-made cigarettes after being sent to foreign soil. It is this thought that is now prompting the Veterans of Foreign Wnrs of the United States to solicit contributions of cigarettes or money so that they may provide them to the soldiers in our country's armed forces. As a general thing, cigarettes mailed by parents or relatives to those in the service never reach them, but the Veterans of Foreign Wars have made arrangements whereby cigarettes will be shipped under government direction in cargo lots to points where soldiers are now stationed. This explanation is given so that when you see a box with a sign on it reading "Cigarettes for Soldiers," you'll know its purpose and I'm sure gladly make your individual contribution.

He: "Yeah? What's that?"

She: "Hands off."

The weather we've been having sure covers all the extremes. During April we were crying fervently for rain and the last two weeks we've had so much of it that most anything else would provide a satisfactory relief.

I spoke out of turn, I guess, when I stated last week that the perch spawning run into Round lake harbor was about petered out, because last Sunday and subsequent days this week have provided the best fishing in recent weeks. And an indication that the steelhead run has started was provided Sunday by Orvie Richardson, who landed two nice ones out of four strikes off the railroad bridge. I know some Grand Rapids fellows who think I'm the

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Mrs. Housewife, when you go to your favorite stores this week and find that prices vary for the same commodity, don't jump to a conclusion that someone is profiteering.

Price control, which became effective Monday (May 18), does not impose uniform prices.

Ceilings will vary from store to store, according to the highest prices charged in each store for commodities during March, 1942.

Likewise, you must take into consideration the element of quality as well as price. And you should know the exempted articles and services, too, before you talk disparagingly over the back fence.

Apprehensive that misinformed consumers might flood the local rationing boards with complaints of price violations, the Michigan Council of Defense through its committee of public information, is taking steps this week to acquaint retailers and consumers with provisions of our revolutionary war system—federal price control.

It isn't as simple as you may think.

Retailers merit your sympathy and full cooperation, for they are going to be penalized severely—many of them, at least—under arbitrary freezing of wholesale and retail prices for the same base period of March, 1942.

The bookkeeping load alone will be tremendous at a time when many stores are wondering how they can retain trained clerks in competition with nearby war plants and the selective service act.

Yet, interesting enough, leaders of Michigan retail trade associations say the average retailer is accepting the new order as part of numerous sacrifices to be expected from the home front.

It is all-out war, this time, and no mistake.

Consumers, likewise, realize that the soaring cost of living, unless checked in some effective manner, would continue upward endlessly.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By H. C. Mellenamp

Poorly Fed Chick May Turn Up Toes

Current high prices and shortages of some foodstuffs which ordinarily act as carriers of vitamins in poultry rations have led some poultrymen to reduce the quantity of these materials or eliminate some entirely. A case in point is the finding of Dr. E. S. Weisner that riboflavin (formerly called Vitamin G) deficiency is being observed in birds sent in from various parts of Michigan.

This deficiency causes a paralysis of lower part of the legs and the toes of poultry and occurs between the ages of 3 to 12 weeks. The toes turn in and under in such a manner that the bird walks on what should be the tip of its toes.

The chief sources of riboflavin are skim milk whey, yeast, liver meal, alfalfa leaf meal, green grass, new byproducts of fermentation and distilling industries, fish meal and meat scrap. It promotes growth, preserves the health of peripheral nerves and is essential for good hatchability.

The feed mixer may try to skimp on or skip this important vitamin and thus reduce the cost of the ration. Experience has proven that this is false economy. The feeder of the ration, says P. J. Schaible, Michigan State College chemist, loses far more than the cost of such ingredients in the profit he might have made had the ration been properly constructed.

Overfeeding of grain in proportion to mash is a common method of encountering this difficulty. If the mash has been so formulated to be fed with equal parts of grain, it is good economy to feed it that way. Likewise, it is more profitable to include adequate levels of riboflavin carriers even though the first cost of these may be higher than cereal products. Greater amounts of poultry meat and better egg production will result with less outlay if the needs of poultry are met in regard to riboflavin.

4-H Club Members Are Urged to See Picture, "Young America"

Never before has such a delightful picture directly associated with 4-H club work been filmed as "Young America," with Anne Withers in the star role, to be shown at the Boyne Theatre on Saturday, May 23. This picture has been acclaimed by all 4-H club organizations throughout the country as the greatest effort toward the correct and accurate portrayal of 4-H club activities. Jane Withers found it a thrilling experience as her private pet during the filming was Diamond Domino XXX, 1100 pound Hereford bull which, of course, was a little experience. Also for the first time in her life, she has learned that animals and plants and trees and soils have personalities—which a million and a half 4-H club members have already learned to know and which she wants to know about.

Club members may see this show at the Boyne Theatre either Saturday afternoon at 3:00 or in the evening, with the first show starting at 7:30. Club members, this is a wonderful opportunity, why not plan to enjoy this great picture and Anne Withers.

Last Wednesday night the second meeting of our 4-H County Club council was held with a splendid attendance of club leaders from all communities in the county. Already it can be announced that there are over 200 Victory Garden projects in operation. This is a huge increase over the number of 4-H club gardens in 1941. Likewise, over 100% increase in enrollment has taken place in food preparation and canning projects. The twenty-five members of the county council certainly have volunteered their services splendidly in organizing their various communities. Along with the victory gardens in the cities we fully expect to have between 1200 and 1500 gardens. Reports that have come in indicate a large increase in gardens. Yes, each individual is doing his or her part in helping to win victory.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

The AAA wheat referendum vote for controlled production and marketing of that commodity was carried by about the same percentage as in 1941. This is an indication that the farmers of the country understand their problems and do not wish to return to the former chaotic conditions existing in the wheat raising districts. Under the present rules, farmers complying with all provisions of the wheat program are guaranteed a combined AGP and Parity payment of 23.4 cents a bushel on their allotment.

Have you planted your war garden? Yes, farmers are busy, I know, but a farm without a war garden is like a soldier without a gun. With rubber, sugar and tin rationed, home grown foods locally raised and consumed, save transportation. No one knows what the future may bring in additional war needs and demands—so get busy and do.

USDA County War Board Activities

The USDA War Board of Charlevoix county has just finished the organization of community War Boards throughout the county. Township lines were not adhered to in the formation of the subsidiary committees but rather the natural and geographical grouped communities were picked. In turn these local community war boards subdivided their territory into four to six natural groupings of farms and appointed one man and one woman in each group as a War Club. The object of these clubs is to aid the War Board in the county and community when needed in an emergency created by our war work. In nearly all communities the local AAA chairman was elected chairman of the War Board.

Richard sat down again, forcing himself to relax, to stop thinking about Peter. Peter would get here as soon as he could. Richard lay down on his back, his arm under his head, watching that hole above him, and the gray sky from which rain again descended. A man watching that hole, waiting and waiting for the head of a rescuer to appear, could go crazy. Richard dragged his eyes away from it.

He studied the inside of his prison, forcing himself to wonder about its origin. The fire which dug this hole in the peat must have burned for years, eating its way down and down till it came to hard pan. He asked himself, aloud: "Why didn't rain put it out?"

He wondered how long a man would live in this wet cold that bit his bones. The thought made him shiver, and he sat up to warm himself again. Everywhere the soft ash under his feet was honeycombed by the little mice of fire that had eaten tunnels in it; and his feet sank into it halfway to his knees. He hated the feeling, stopped walking, beat his chest with his arm.

Richard thought he would be glad to leave Hoakes Bay forever.

Now and then, in the back of his mind, like a watching, beckoning figure, Mary appeared. He shut his thoughts against her. He must put her out of his mind, keep her out of his mind. Forever.

Peter would come soon. Surely he would come soon.

Richard decided they might even now be hunting for him, up there. He began to shout.

He realized suddenly that he was screaming like a maniac; and he stopped in shame at himself, and controlled his voice, and thereafter he hallooed almost decorously, at regular intervals.

He realized suddenly that he was screaming like a maniac.

But now he watched the opening above him without respite, never taking his eyes away from it.

It must be an hour since Peter left him here. He refused to admit to himself that more than an hour had passed. When the sky grew darker, he argued desperately that this was merely a thickening of the clouds.

That was not merely a thickening of the clouds above him. It was dusk. Night was coming on. It had been early in the afternoon when he fell into the pit; so now he must have been here five hours or six.

In any dreadful crisis, a man must make for himself a formula. Richard had no illusions about Peter; but to believe that Peter had returned aboard the Venturer and sailed away, leaving him here in this pit to die, would mean quick madness and despair. Richard was of that breed of man which does not despair, which does not surrender.

He found a formula. He decided to believe that Peter, on his way back to the ship, had fallen into a pit like this one. He decided to believe that Peter too was a prisoner. The men must be hunting for them now. Night was coming on; but good Mat Forbes would keep the men hunting all night.

CHAPTER XX

Peter was in danger, and the men hunting for them would be in danger. As much to protect these others as to save himself, Richard decided to dig his way out.

He had for tools the stout club, about four feet long, two inches thick, one end shod with iron; and he had his pocket knife. He whittled the end of the club into a flat, chisel-shaped blade, not too sharp, not sharp enough to break easily.

Then he began to dig steps up the side of the pit. For the first few feet, the sides sloped outward. That was easy; but above that, they became perpendicular. He began to excavate a sort of spiral gallery around the sides of the pit; a shelf wide enough for him to lie on, on his stomach, while he reached up ahead of him and loosened the soft stuff with the end of his club, and then scraped it out with his right hand, flinging it over the side of the shelf to fall to the bottom of the pit.

The dust of his digging through the charred, half-burned peat choked him. He descended and drank water from the pool, and wetted his handkerchief and tied it across his mouth and nose. While there was still some light, he had been able to climb ten feet above the floor of the pit; but then the light failed and he worked in darkness. Some time later, the shelf on which he lay broke off under his weight, and he fell, rolling down into the water again. He guessed that he had reached a point where the walls of the pit began to slope inward; so that there was nothing to support the gallery he excavated so laboriously.

He would have to tunnel upward through the solid peat and reach the surface somewhere to one side of the hole.

He began to do so. Almost at once the texture of the peat became tougher. Till now he had worked in stuff half-burned, the life baked out of it by the heat of those old fires; but now it began to have substance and cohesion, held together by grass roots dead centuries ago. His task became increasingly laborious. Using the chisel-shaped end of his club like a narrow spade, he drove it upward, cut around blocks of peat, and then with his right hand clawed these blocks free.

He burrowed like a mole. The tunnel he dug was no larger than necessary. If he could wedge his body through it, and have room to use his club, he was content. There was now some moisture in the peat through which he tunneled, and not much dust; nevertheless thirst harassed him.

Once when he went down to drink, he saw that there was light in the hole at the top of the pit. The short southern night was ending. Dawn was near.

A long while after that, he realized by the tougher fibre of the chunks he tore away that he had reached live grass roots. The realization, even though it proved he was near the surface of the ground and promised an early end to his labors, did not speed them. He worked slow and slower, tired without knowing it, sluggish with weariness. He thrust the pointed club upward with a heave of shoulders and back, his feet braced hard.

Presently one of these thrusts sent the club through into open air. There was still the mat of grass roots to rip apart; but five minutes later Richard dragged himself like a crippled mole through the opening he had made, and lay prone.

It was Corkran, following the broken trail through the tall grass, who hours later found him there.

Aboard the Venturer, George and Mary kept their vigil; George by the desk with the revolver and the bomb gun ready, Mary at the cabin window through which she could see the boats on shore. After a long time, George heard a voice on deck, a sudden cry; so he knew the truth before Mary spoke.

She turned with glowing eyes; she whispered: "They've found him! He's walking. Two of them are helping him. George, Richard is alive!"

George nodded. "Then they'll be at us," he reminded her. He knew what to expect. Since the men had found Richard, Peter must hold the Venturer and escape in her, or be damned. To hold her against the men in the boats, he must have the guns.

George did not stop to consider what means Peter had in hand. He meant to hold the cabin against any odds. If he could. But he might fail. In the sudden imminence of crisis now, like a revelation, he realized that even if he failed, he could still leave Peter weaponless.

He spoke to Mary, sharply. "Take all those cartridge boxes, the powder, everything. Break the window. Throw it all overboard."

She began to throw out the boxes of cartridges. Someone on deck heard them splash in the water and looked over the rail and saw what she was doing, and shouted a warning.

"Stop that down there, you!"

George shouted back:

"I'll shoot the first man who shows himself!" Looking up through the companion he could see nothing except the sky, and a segment of the roll.

Mary kept at her task, working fast and without pause, till it was done.

The sounds over his head kept George's attention fixed on the companion. No movement in the main cabin warned him; but it was from that quarter that the attack came.

Rannels, Gee, Hurd, and Peter were united by the greedy hope of reward. Peter had won them by promises, playing on each according to his appetite. For weapons, they had the edged tools of the whale fishery; harpoons, lances, spades. It was only necessary to find a chance to use them. With this in mind, Peter planned to draw George's eye in one direction, to attack from another. He set Rannels by the cabin companion with a cutting-in spade, the keen chisel blade six inches across, the handle long enough so that Rannels from the deck could reach the cabin floor. He posted Hurd on top of the after house where from high overhead he could see down through the glass of the skylight and dart a harpoon at any mark that offered. He directed Gee to take an axe down into the main cabin and strike the door into the common room a smashing blow that would make George turn that way. When he thus turned, Rannels, at the companion, or Hurd, darting the great harpoon, would kill him from above.

When the others were in position the Negro went below. Peter himself would take no active part in the affray. Gee was barefooted, and he moved silently. He was accustomed to use an axe left-handed. The door he had to attack swung into the after cabin, the hinges on the port side. Gee stood on that side when he swung the axe.

He delivered that blow with a nervous violence which proved his own destruction. The axe hit the panels just beside the bolt, and the flimsy screws flew out and the door flew open so easily that Gee by his own weight was pulled forward, the axe and his swinging arms dragging him off balance, into the doorway.

George, when the Negro struck, was standing at the foot of the companionway, looking up, the bomb gun in his hands, the door into the main cabin ten feet away and behind him. At the crash of the axe blow, he whirled and saw the Negro in the doorway. Gee bawled in dismay, trying to leap clear, as George lifted the bomb gun and fired.

At the sound of the axe, Rannels stepped to the top of the companionway above George. At the foot of the companionway he saw George swing to face Gee, and as George lifted the bomb gun, Rannels stabbed downward with the long spade. He aimed at the nape of George's neck.

If the blow had struck fairly, it would have decapitated the man below; but the recoil of the gun knocked George off balance backward. He was already falling when Rannels struck, so the harpooner missed his aim. The spade that would have caught George in the neck, instead slid over his shoulder and down his left arm. It bit into his forearm just below the elbow. It sliced the flesh like a razor, grated on the bone.

George, thrown backward by the recoil, fell on his left side. The smoke of powder from the gun's thunderous discharge had instantly filled the cabin; but through this smoke as he lay on his side he saw Rannels at the head of the companionway recovering the spade to strike again. He rolled on his back, dodging that blow; and he dragged the revolver, already cocked, out of his belt and fired it upward blindly. The heavy slug struck Rannels in the breast bone. He slid feet first down the companionway and lay in a huddle on the cabin floor.

The thinning smoke made George cough. He heard a faint sound that seemed to be far away, and realized it was a voice, and saw Mary on her knees here beside him.

Mary was trying to hold him. He pushed her away. He had not meant to do this violently; but under his thrust she staggered backward till she collided with the corner of the desk. He shook his head regretfully. Too bad to hurt her; but he had business in hand.

He looked for Gee, and saw him with a calm surprise. George had not heard the bomb explode; but it had exploded. There was no doubt of that. Gee was in the main cabin, on the floor by the table. Something had flung him backward; but what lay there had been Gee. It must have been. The skin was black.

Mary was here again, ripping at his coat, trying to tear away the sleeve, trying to tend the terrible wound in his arm. Weakness swept over George in a slow, sick wave; yet his mind was clear enough. Rannels was dead, and Gee too; but in a minute now he, George McAusland, would collapse from loss of blood, and lie helpless here, and then Peter could come down and get the guns.

That had to be stopped. He must kill Peter while he could.

George decided to go through the main cabin into the steerage and thus reach the deck. Mary was trying to hold him, but he put her aside. Whatever she was saying did not matter. It could not matter. He must reach the deck somehow, and manage Peter Corr. Mary hindered him. He said to her in an elaborate whisper, loudly, so that she would be sure to understand:

"Stay here. Talk. Make them think I'm here."

He pushed her aside, and she was thrown three or four steps backward against the wall and fell. He thought: Why, I must be strong, really strong, to do that! Too bad! Poor Mary!

He went through the after 'tween decks. He moved briskly, the revolver in his right hand, his left arm hanging. He remembered to cock the revolver before he started to climb to the deck. He could not help himself with his left hand, because it would not do what he wanted it to do; and he had to hold the revolver ready in his other hand; so he went up the companionway very slowly, pushing himself with his feet, his body leaning forward against the treads.

The housing looked aft. When his head rose above the deck level, he faced the mizzenmast. He crawled out of the companion on his hands and knees; and the revolver in his right hand thumped on the deck.

Peter heard that sound and turned and saw him.

LET'S BE REASONABLE

At the risk of being called unpatriotic we are going to discuss a situation which is bound to occur here within a very short time.

In a few days teams of men will be calling on local workers to sell War Bonds. We believe that every person who can possibly do it will authorize a ten per cent payroll deduction to be used for buying War Bonds and War Stamps. They must do it if we are to continue fighting. The government needs scrap metals and scrap paper and rubber, but, most of all, it needs money and the only place it can get it is from you and me.

There can be no excuse for anyone who can afford it refusing to agree to a ten per cent wage deduction for this purpose.

But how about the man who can't afford it? We are not talking about the fellow who could cut down on his beer or his gambling or his high clothing allowance or his club dues. We are talking about the fellow who is doing everything in his power to get out of debt and meet his honest obligations, the fellow who has cut every expense to the bone in order to meet his current expenses.

The president, in a current message, urged every citizen to clean up his obligations, pay off his mortgages, and otherwise get his finances in shape. It's excellent advice.

Now, what is going to happen when enthusiastic workers call on a man whose current financial condition absolutely forbids him to take on an additional ten per cent? Many a man is going to sign up for a ten per cent wage reduction who just can't afford it, rather than be called a slacker and unpatriotic. On the other hand, many who can afford twenty or thirty per cent, are going to sign up for ten. The struggling fellow should not be embarrassed into doing something contrary to his judgment or his ability to pay.

Notification by County Treasurer Lillis M. Flanders is made elsewhere in this issue of the June 1st deadline for payment of dog tax without penalty.

The rate of 75c for male and unsexed, and $1.50 for female dogs remains in force through May 31st. After that date the rate for license is doubled.

ABOUT THE PRICE CEILING

The following article prepared by Office of Price Administration, Washington, D. C., provides a question and answer method of outlining merchant requirements to meet the new price ceiling regulations which became effective Monday.

1.
Q. What merchandise must carry a posted maximum price in a retail store?

A. On and after May 18, the maximum prices of all items listed as "cost-of-living commodities" in Appendix B of the General Maximum Price Regulation must be publicly and prominently posted or marked in every retail establishment dealing in any of these things.

2.
Q. What about those items that come under the ceilings but are not contained in the "cost-of-living list"?

A. While the retailer is required to determine his maximum prices for these items and to charge no more, he does not have to post his ceiling prices.

3.
Q. Is the retailer required to indicate ceiling prices for merchandise on display in show windows or advertised in newspapers and on the radio?

A. No. He must display ceiling prices only in the part of the store where merchandise is actually offered for sale.

Q. What form must the price posting take?

A. For "cost-of-living" items, maximum prices must be identified as "Ceiling Price....$....." or the retailer may use "Our Ceiling ....$....."

5.
Q. Does the "Ceiling Price" have to be marked on each individual item of merchandise falling within a "cost-of-living" commodity class?

A. Not necessarily. A retailer may use a simpler means of marking wherever that is practical. The Regulation permits a storekeeper to mark the ceiling price on the shelf, bin, rack or other holder or container where the goods are displayed. Ceiling prices also may be posted on a list at or near the point of sale, but the merchandise to which such posted prices refer must be clearly identified.

Q. How may the ceiling price be displayed for a single price line of merchandise—as, for example, a table containing only 89c men's work shirts, or a rack containing only $1.98 infants dresses?

A. Whenever a line of goods selling at one price is displayed together, and kept separate from any other line of goods, one sign showing the ceiling price for these items is sufficient. This applies to all cost-of-living items and makes a separate price label on each article unnecessary, regardless of whether or not they are marked by an asterisk in Appendix B.

Q. Where items in several price lines are offered for sale together—as for example, a rack of men's suits priced at $25, $30 and $35—how should the ceiling prices be displayed?

A. If the merchandise falls in one of the classifications marked by an asterisk in Appendix B, Maximum Prices may be posted by price lines for the whole group. In the case of the rack of men's suits it would be adequate to have one sign saying "Ceiling Prices: $25, $30 and $35." However, in addition, the selling price must be marked on each individual item to show which price line it falls into, but "Ceiling price" need not be marked on each item. If the group is not marked by an asterisk in Appendix B, each piece of merchandise must be marked with a ceiling price.

Q. What statement of maximum prices must be filed with OPA?

A. Each retailer must submit to the War Price and Rationing Board in his area a list of his maximum prices for all cost-of-living commodities which he offers for sale. This list must be submitted by June 1. It must contain every article on which the retailer is required to post or mark his ceiling prices, and must include an identifying description for each item. If the retailer retains a copy of this statement, it will help him prepare his "statement of base period prices" which must be available in his store on or after July 1.

Q. Does the statement of maximum prices for "cost-of-living" items to be filed with OPA have to be on any particular form?

A. No particular method is required, but the statement should be typewritten or neatly prepared in ink on paper supplied by the retailer. Also, he must be sure to identify each "cost-of-living" item clearly on the list he submits.

10.
Q. What does the retailer do about keeping the cost-of-living list up to date?

A. On the first of each month, the retailer must file a further statement showing any cost-of-living items which the retailer has added during the previous month, and must show his maximum price for each.

11.
Q. What records of prices during the March base period should the retailer keep?

A. There are three requirements:

1. The retailer must preserve for OPA examination all records or documents relating to his March selling prices on all items of merchandise.

2. He must prepare by July 1, 1942, a complete statement showing his highest selling price (or, if he did not make a sale, his highest offering price) for each item of merchandise delivered during March. Each item must be clearly described and identified.

3. He must also prepare by July 1, 1942, a statement of any customary allowances, discounts or price differentials which were available in his store during March to any classes of customers.

Q. Specifically, what types of records or documents relating to March prices should be preserved?

A. Any records which might help the retailer to demonstrate what his March prices were. These include sales books or charge books, duplicate customer sales slips or receipts, unit control records, mark-up and mark-down records, his own or manufacturers' retail price lists, and suppliers' invoices on which the retailer has marked his retail prices.

Q. Must the retailer submit the statement of his base period prices and discounts to OPA?

A. No, he simply must keep it available in his store, on and after July 1, for the examination of any person.

Q. Must the statement of base-period prices be kept in any particular form?

A. No, but most retailers will probably find it convenient to keep this statement in the form of a "maximum price book" or "maximum price list," either for the whole store or by departments. Such a listing could also record information about maximum prices of goods carried after May 18, but not sold during March, 1942.

Q. How should merchandise be described in the statement of base-period prices kept in the store, and in the statement of maximum prices on cost-of-living items filed with OPA?

A. So that any item can be readily identified by any person looking at the statement. The name of the article should be given, together with additional description, such as the brand or style name, the manufacturers' or suppliers' name, the size, grade or weight, the manufacturer's lot or style number, the retailer's lot number, the material from which the item is constructed, or any other identifying physical characteristics.

Q. Suppose a retailer does not have a complete record of his March prices?

A. He should make the best use he can of what records he does have, plus any other available information. He may get assistance, for example, by checking his purchase invoices. Above all, he should guard against recording his April or May prices where he has the least reason to believe that such goods were marked up after the end of March.

Q. What current records must the retailer keep after May 18th?

A. There are two requirements:

1. He must continue to make and preserve the same types of records relating to prices which he customarily kept, such as his retail price lists; duplicate sale or charge slips, mark-up and mark-down records, or invoices with retail prices marked on.

2. He is required, after May 18, to maintain records which show clearly the basis on which he determined any maximum price in the store. In the case of goods sold in March, his statement of base-period prices will satisfy this requirement. But for goods which he did not sell in March and, therefore, on which he had to determine a maximum price in accordance with the provisions of the Regulation, he must show how he arrived at the price. That is, if he used the price of a similar item sold in March, he must identify the similar item and state its ceiling price; if he took a competitor's price on the same or a similar item, he must identify the competitor and the competitor's commodity and price; or, if he used the pricing formula in Appendix A of the Regulation, he should preserve a copy of the report filed with OPA.

Q. Is a retailer required to give sales receipts to customers?

A. If it has been the retailer's practice to give sales slips, he must continue this practice after May 18. But regardless of past practice, if a customer requests it, the retailer must provide a sales receipt showing the date, retailer's name and address, and the name and price of each article sold.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

WHENEVER I hear about anybody having a big family I think of Dad and Ma Hoskins. The Hoskins' had thirteen children.

They weren't a bad bunch of kids, by and large — but it seemed one or the other of them would always be having a fuss with the neighbors, or would break a window playing baseball, or some other kid trick. Kept Dad and Ma mighty busy all the time.

One day Dad got a bright idea. He called the whole family together for a special meeting at the dinner table.

He told them he was tired of ebecking up on them all the time. He said he thought they were old enough now to check up on themselves. The older children would watch the younger ones. They would have meetings every so often and hand out rewards or punishments.

Well, it was a crazy idea but the kids liked it and they started behaving better than they ever had before. The idea worked and Dad finally did get a little time for himself.

I mention this story about Dad Hoskins because it's something like what I understand the beer industry is doing to regulate itself.

As I see it, most of the beer industry behaves itself perfectly all right . . . but every now and then, I guess, a retailer comes along who runs a place that isn't up to scratch . . . sort of like a wayward kid.

So like Dad Hoskins' family, the brewers and beer distributors have united together in an industry self-regulation program to help the proper authorities "clean up or close up" offending retail places.

The brewers, who want to protect beer's good name, cooperate wisely with the authorities who enforce the laws.

From where I sit, that's a fine thing for the brewers to do . . . particularly when you realize that after all they're really not responsible for retailing conditions.

DISTRICT HEALTH DEPT.

Venereal Disease Control in War Time

One of the more important health problems has always been and is now the control of venereal disease. Just now they are particularly important because from the standpoint of national defense these diseases exact a devastating effect on men in the productive age groups and upon these we must depend for the manufacture of planes, guns, tanks and all material of war and for the carrying of these arms against our country's enemies. These diseases then attack mostly the very group upon which we must depend to safeguard our own future as a free people.

In the first World War 60 of every 1,000 men examined for induction into the armed forces were rejected because of venereal disease and these examinations did not include blood tests.

Of the first million men examined for Selective Service in the present war, the rate for syphilis, based on examinations including blood tests, was 45 per 1,000. The rate for white men was 18.5 per 1,000 and for colored men was 247.7 per 1,000.

Michigan men showed a lower rate than the national average being 19.1 per 1,000 for all rates, with white men showing a rate of 11.2 per 1,000 and for colored men 150.2 per 1,000. New Hampshire showed the lowest rate, 5.8. Michigan's rate of 19.1 placed her in fourteenth place among the states.

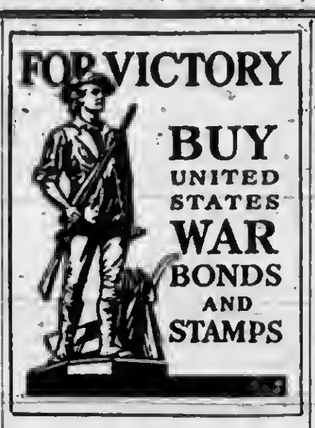
The result of premarital and prenatal examinations in Michigan give indication of some improvement in the venereal disease picture. The percentage of persons having evidence of syphilis as shown by a blood test among premarital candidates in 1940 was 1.45% and in 1941 was 1.22%; among prenatal patients in 1940, 1.25% showed evidence of syphilis and in 1941 1.16%.

We feel that this represents great improvement over the World War situation but the venereal disease problem is one with which we can never afford to be satisfied. With venereal disease we adopt the motto of a famous French general—"The best defense is a good offense." We cannot sit and wait for it to come to us; we must go to it. We must develop earlier and better case-finding methods.

These diseases are not reported very well but here, too, the situation is improving slowly. Physicians have hesitated to report venereal diseases, particularly when they were acquired by individuals in the higher social brackets. They feared that their names might, linked with venereal disease, become known to the public and embarrassment both to physician and patient follow. Venereal disease reports are quite carefully kept so that it is impossible for anyone not connected with the Health Department to have access to them. Also, the public is gradually removing the stigma once attached to venereal disease as it becomes better acquainted with the disease and realizes that often it is acquired innocently—that it is not always associated with sin and that after all, it is a disease that is a threat to the public health and must be found and treated no matter who has it or how acquired.

Many persons requiring venereal disease are afraid to seek help from a physician. This is due to the attitude that the public has heretofore taken toward the disease—that it is something to be hidden and kept secret. This often prevents early treatment when so much can be done to cure the disease and more important to prevent its spread. All physicians stand ready to help a person with a venereal disease. They realize the importance of early treatment and thorough treatment and most of them treat the disease and those who do not will gladly refer the individual to a physician who will. Lack of funds is no excuse for neglecting to have a venereal disease treatment. For those who do not have sufficient funds to pay for treatment, the state will furnish the necessary drugs for treatment and the county will recompense the attending physician. There is no excuse for anyone going to a quack or treating themselves as many do.

By taking a sensible attitude toward venereal disease everyone will help bring nearer the day when we will have none at all—it is possible.



INVEST IN VICTORY!

Our boys can take the War to the enemy, if we back them up with ships and tanks and guns! But that takes money!

Help your Government to put the tools of war into the hands of our soldiers by purchasing War Savings Bonds and Stamps. And remember . . . just one Bond can't lick the Axis any more than just one gun! It takes millions of Americans buying War Savings Bonds and Stamps every pay day!

Bonds cost $18.75 and up . . . and they pay you back one-third more in only 10 years! Stamps cost 10¢, 25¢, and up . . . soon total the price of a Bond if bought regularly.

Help our boys on the fighting fronts wherever they may be! Buy War Savings Bonds as an investment for yourself and your country.

For our part, we intend to tolerate no venereal disease in this area not under treatment, as long as an individual is reported to the Health Department as having a venereal diseases remains under treatment, all well and good, but when treatment is refused or neglected it will be our duty to quarantine that person and we will do it—the laws of Michigan give the Health Department the power. Nothing that we can prevent is going to be allowed to endanger the public health and so hamper the war effort of this area.

VOLUNTEERS LEAD FOOD THRIFT PLAN

How to make the most out of Victory gardens in Michigan so that rural families can help relieve some of the nation's transportation problems is to take a turn toward "walk-to-it" meetings scheduled for every community in the state.

That is the plan of the home economics extension service of Michigan State College. Sponsors already have lists of volunteer local leaders and the movement is gaining momentum. Information gained in previous extension food projects is to be passed on by the local volunteers, even to the extent of sharing canning equipment. The local leaders are to receive additional training in district sessions.

"Our home economics members have experience in food preservation," explains Edna V. Smith, state home demonstration leader. "These women are willing to help teach their neighbors how to put up food needed by rural families as a contribution to the war effort and to better health."

Demonstrations in May in southern counties are to be followed by activities further north in June and July.

The use, care and conservation of canning supplies such as jars, covers and rubbers is one phase of the statewide program.

The number of pressure cookers available is to be determined. This type of cooker is necessary for canning all non-acid vegetables and of ments as the only safe method. The water bath system is considered adequate for fruits and tomatoes.

Victory planning for next winter's food, the sponsors assert, begins with spring garden products and ends only when frost cuts down the last fruit or vegetable in the fall.

THE HOME-FRONT IN MICHIGAN

Michigan motorists have no occasion for a smug "titter up the sleeve" as nearly 10,000,000 autos of the Atlantic Seaboard are placed on short rations.

Gasoline rationing isn't just an Eastern headache. Actually, it is only one aspect of a national transportation problem, which is growing more acute and soon may come home to all of us. There is plenty of gasoline. The difficulty is that already over-burdened railroad lines can't get the gasoline from oil fields to distant points, for distribution to the consumers.

We must save our transportation facilities for essential uses, just as we must save our materials, machinery and manpower. Without transportation, the whole war effort would fail. Railroads these days are highways along which men and munitions stream toward embarkation points, and raw materials stream toward the munitions factories.

That's why it may become necessary to ration train and bus space. That's why the continued operation of the taxicab is on trial. That's why—together with the national rubber shortage—we all must give up "motoring as usual" for the duration.

Railroads Are Our Life Line

A stitch in time saves pinning, but ladies, you'd better start saving the pins. The common ordinary household pin has a new importance today as copper follows steel out of the home and into the arsenal.

The War Production Board has added more than a hundred consumer articles to those which no longer may be made out of copper and its alloys, including brass and bronze. A third of the household pins last year were made of brass. Other articles on the way out include Christmas tree bulbs and cords, dog collars, fountain pens and musical instruments.

To give an idea of what this means to our fighting forces, the copper that went into building materials for American homes last year will provide all the brass and copper fittings for twenty-three 10,000 ton cruisers. Copper that was used in costume jewelry, gifts and novelties will do the same for forty 1500-ton destroyers.

Pin Back Hitler's Ears

Ceiling prices now are in effect for most goods bought by consumers. Everyone should remember it is up to him or her to help the merchant put into effect this far-reaching program.

Remember that prices need not be the same in all stores for the same article. The maximum price is the price for which a particular store sold a particular article during March. Also, there are some articles on which there is no fixed maximum.

Give the store-keeper a break. Don't start yelping right off the bat. This is your program; it is for your protection; eventually, you will be called upon to help with its enforcement; but, right now, be tolerant, considerate and cooperative.

We're All at War

Preliminary figures show that 122,604,000 persons were registered for sugar rationing, or about 91 per cent of the total population....Not so pleasing, was the fact that 6,400,000 persons who registered didn't get their War Ration Book No. 1 because they had more than the allowable six-pound "hoard"....They're advised to cut their sugar use to half-pound a week, for it'll be that long before they can get more sugar....Fruits can be canned without sugar; then sweetened as used....King Cotton hasn't been snubbed in the war effort....Cotton is being used, among other things, in modern camouflage....OPA offers a three-point guide for milady's wardrobe... "Buy Practical Outfits"...."Mix Them Up"...."Make Them Last"....Beruffled nighties are out for the duration....By the end of next year living standards will be at the 1932 depression level....Spices, such as black and white pepper, allspice, nutmeg, ginger, mace and cinnamon, have joined the sugar bowl in the "handle with care" status.... The War Department has announced it cannot answer individual queries as to the whereabouts of Army personnel or as to whether men are casualties or have been taken prisoner....Nearest of kin of casualties will be notified by official telegram immediately upon receipt of information from the field....It has been impossible to get mail through the Japanese blockade of the Philippines....No mail is being sent to and none has been received from American forces in the Islands since Dec. 8.

When your tomato plants are a foot high, apply a complete plant food. Two tablespoons scattered about each plant in a circle six to twelve inches from the base of the plant is about right. A stake five to six feet high may be used to stake your tomatoes. Suckers should be pruned off so you'll have just one upright stock. Contrary to general opinion, unstaked plants produce bigger and better fruit than the staked ones, but they don't look as neat and they take up far more space which may be at a premium.

Small tomato plants need frequent cultivation, but as they grow, feeding roots are extended out from the plants near the surface so cultivation should let up somewhat.

Weeds may just be scraped from the surface as deep cultivation may be more harm than good.

YOUR SCRAP

Here's what that 100 pounds of scrap iron lying idle around your home or farm can do to help speed the war effort:

To make 100 pounds of pig iron (the only substitute for scrap iron) requires 150 pounds of coal, 200 pounds of iron ore and 50 pounds of limestone—all hauled out of mines and shipped by boat and rail over great distances to blast furnaces where an expensive operation reduces this combination to pig iron.

Your scrap iron can eliminate these costly, time-consuming steps, so give your scrap metal to charity or sell it to a collector today.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley,
11th District, Michigan

From a legislative viewpoint the Congress has been rather quiet for a number of weeks and very little of a controversial nature has been considered. As I write this news letter, I can advise you that early next week the House expects to pass with very minor changes a recently passed Senate Bill which provides for doubling the base pay of enlisted men in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. This is certainly a good bill to which no one can object.

Representative Faddis (D. of Pa.) has been seeking to amend the bill to prevent the Army and Navy from commissioning officers who are not qualified from a military viewpoint for such commissions. His purpose is laudable without question. The ones he is aiming at are a number of young men who are seeking to avoid active combat by being commissioned to sit behind a desk here in Washington. He is also seeking to deny commissions to a few individuals in the country who have no desire whatsoever to face shot and shell but who, through influence, seek to be commissioned in some Reserve Corps in order to be able to wear a uniform and boast about some military rank in order to appear patriotic and promote their own public interests, while at the same time deliberately avoiding active military service.

A good example of this racket which has been developing is the case of a noted newspaper columnist and radio commentator, one Walter Winchell, who for some time past liked to call himself publicly—Lieutenant Commander Walter Winchell. Recently the Navy called him to active duty with the Fleet, but after a hurried trip to Washington, it is said Mr. Winchell succeeded in having that order rescinded on the ground that he had previously signed contracts for his news column and his radio broadcasts which would cause him serious financial embarrassment if cancelled, and I presume his public would suffer likewise from the want of much needed information.

There is unquestioned merit in the idea back of the Faddis proposal and it is sincerely hoped that in the future such tainted commissions will not be awarded by our Army and Navy. On the other hand it must be remembered that we have a terrific war on our hands which must be fought with brains which are trained to the mechanical age in which we live. In other words, there is a very definite place in our war effort today for the finest mechanical brains of this nation. Such men must be in a position to confidentially study military secret information coming back from the battle-fronts and must at the same time be subject to military discipline. Many of these skilled men, however patriotically inclined, cannot afford to give up their business income and serve the Government on a completely voluntary, or low monetary basis. Consequently, in my opinion, the armed forces are fully justified in awarding to those trained men reasonably high commissions commensurate with their proven ability and reputation, in order, that they might continue to serve the Government on a full time basis and at the same time live in some reasonable degree of comfort in our high priced Washington and have something left over to provide for a reasonable degree of comfort for their families back home. I see nothing wrong, unsound or unjust in the awarding of such commissions. It would be fine, I'll grant you, if these men could be sent to an Officers' Training School for several weeks or months, but we have not time for that today. We need their brains on active duty right now, and it might also be said in passing that in obtaining experienced mature men, we will be relieving for active combat service many of the handsome young men in uniform we see on every street and in nearly every office in Washington today.

By keeping the cuffs off trousers already manufactured or in the process of manufacture, WPB will save enough wool for 300,000 additional suits, while the cuffs from just 21 pairs of trousers save enough cloth to make a complete army uniform.

"Every penny saved helps to blackout the Axis."

THE simplest of home recipes for saving pennies: turn out unnecessary lights. One person shouldn't have to follow other around, turning switches! Besides—ample electric supply is vital to war production!

Use the pennies saved to purchase U. S. SAVINGS STAMPS—as your share in the "Home Front" fight for freedom.

Charlevoix county enjoys the distinction of being the most diversified county in the state in conditions of soils, water courses and natural resources, including wild life. The state department of agriculture has selected this county as a starting point for a survey of these natural resources, as it is a pattern county upon which to model surveys of the entire state. Let us not be boastful. We knew it all the time.

LANSING LETTER

As Price Administrator Leon Henderson explained on April 28, "a staggering excess of money over the supplies of goods available threatens disaster to the civilian economy and to the war effort."

Who is caught usually in inflation's squeeze? The little man with a fixed income; the small merchant whose margin of operation is small.

Posting prices of cost-of-living commodities was required of every retailer this week, starting Monday.

Every merchant must send a statement of these ceiling prices—highest prices which he charged during March—to the Office of Price Administration in Detroit not later than Monday, June 1.

Furthermore, he is given until July 1 to prepare a statement of the ceiling prices of all commodities or services which he supplied during March. Another reason why consumers should be patient during the next few weeks.

Price control will be administered in Michigan by Arthur F. Sarvis, Flint banker who has been rationing director of The Michigan Council of Defense. Seven regional district offices are to be established with executive staffs.

Because such organizations cannot be completed over night and because retailers have been given a big pill to swallow, it has been suggested that consumer complaints on ceiling prices—except in cases of flagrant violations—should await July 1.

Sarvis is convinced retailers can be relied upon to cooperate with the government wholeheartedly in an honest and equitable compliance of the act. It is no secret that many retailers are going to be penalized for not taking price mark-ups in March on merchandise which they purchased months before at lower wholesale prices. And as their stocks must be replenished at higher prices and as war priorities will gradually curtail wholesale deliveries, Michigan retailers are confronted with dark days, indeed.

To these people, economic victims of the war, consumer tolerance would be most helpful.

You can't keep politics out of 1942 headlines.

And you can't keep Elton R. Eaton out of a good fight.

That's why the entry of this militant anti-boss newspaper editor of Plymouth into the race for Republican nomination for United States senator is certain to afford additional reader relief from war communiques.

Eaton will be opposed by Gerald K. Smith, social justice crusader of Detroit who received his reform baptism in Louisiana with the late Huey "Kingfish" Long. Both men are mean slingers of words, and colorful accusations are assured.

Judge Homer Ferguson, Wayne county circuit court, was reported a few months ago to be on the edge of candidacy.

The latest reports are he may not declare.

Section nine of the Michigan state constitution says: "They (circuit judges) shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they are elected and for one year thereafter." Judge Ferguson, if elected would risk a possible contest in the United States senate, and being a Republican he could not expect joyous senting by the Democratic majority.

Civil service, plus the federal Hatch act, will restrict activity of government employees in politics this year.

James Greenfield of Norway, associated with Auditor General Vernon J. Brown at Lansing, has been granted a leave of absence by the Michigan civil service commission to become a candidate for the Republican seat at Congress held by Frank Hook of Ironwood.

The Hatch act forbids anyone in the military service from running for public office. It is going to nip many budding candidates.

LETTERS FROM THE ARMY CAMPS

Camp Claiborne, La.

Dear Sir:

I sure was pleased to receive your paper as I enjoy reading all the news, even if it is a little late. I get your Wednesday paper on Sunday, so I have lots of time to read it. After I read it I send it to a friend of mine from Beaver Island who is in Camp Robinson, Arkansas, and I know he enjoys it as well as I do. We are having real nice weather here, but you don't get the cool breezes like you do from Lake Michigan. It gets part of cool at night so we don't have any trouble sleeping as yet.

I like the army pretty well so far, but would rather be in a cooler climate.

We aren't going to be here much longer, probably three weeks yet, but have no idea where we will be transferred to. So, once again I'm thanking you for your paper.

Very truly yours,

"Lady Has Plans"

Loosen your stays and let out your seams, because the funniest spy-hunt thriller ever unreeled—Paramount's 'The Lady Has Plans'—is coming May 26-27 to the Palace Theatre.

Co-starred in this mile-a-minute merry chase are Ray Milland and Paulette Goddard, assisted by Roland Young, Albert Dekker, Margaret Hayes and Cecil Kelloway.

The story is spiced with hilarious situations stemming from the fact that foreign agents in Lisbon mistake reporter Paulette Goddard for a spy who has drawn upon her back in invisible ink, plans stolen from the U. S. Navy. Everyone, including newscaster Ray Milland, finds Paulette's back irresistible.

Advance reports have it that "The Lady Has Plans" is film fun designed for every movie-goer's enjoyment.

"Sunny"

Song and dance lovers are in store for a treat when Anna Neagle's latest musical vehicle, "Sunny" has its local showing May 28-29 at the Palace Theater.

Adapted from the well known Broadway success, "Sunny" features in addition to its vivacious star, Ray Bolger and the famous terpischorean satirists, The Hartmans, in a variety of dance novelties. In addition, the sparkling musical numbers, which include the beloved "Who?," "Sunny," "D'ya Love Me?" and "Two Little Bluebirds," are rendered by Miss Neagle, leading-man John Carroll and various other members of the notable cast. Edward Everett Horton, Frieda Inescort and Helen Westley act other principal roles in this RKO Radio film produced and directed by Herbert Wilcox.

Like Great Britain, Canada has been controlling prices since the outbreak of war.

worst liar on earth when I tell how good the fishing is, because every time they show up and I try to prove it to them, the fish never bite. Just between you and I, it must be their homely mugs that scare the finny tribe away.

Conductor on bus: "Can't you read that sign? It says 'No Smoking'."

Sailor: "Sure, mate, that's plain enough, but you've got a lot of dippy signs here. One of 'em says 'Wear Nemo Corsets,' so I sin't payin' attention to any of 'em."

Now is the time when the old-fashioned family man can turn his thrift speeches into patriotic lectures.

Many parents ask this question: "If a child is miserable in athletic sports, should the parent insist on his participation?" The answer could be a series of questions: "If a child is miserable in studying arithmetic or spelling, would you excuse him from these studies? If he rebels at eating with a knife and fork, would you permit him to eat as he likes? If he hates school and has difficulties with other children, would you allow him to give up school?"

Michigan's second largest industry—the tourist and resort business—is being threatened by rumor. Just at a time when prospective vacationists are making plans for summer tours, out of Washington come stories of probable gasoline rationing, rationing of airplane and train passenger space, seizure of private cars, requisitioning of automobile tires and a hundred and one other things which merely serve to befuddle them. Just as if happenings on the world's battlefronts didn't supply enough front page newspaper material, swivel-chair artists at the national capital, most likely with nothing else to do, seem to spend their time concocting news releases about some one or another proposed federal commodity curtailment and radio commentators bla-bla such releases over the air and add their own version, whether it be true or not, as trimming. I believe sincerely in free speech and a free press, but after hearing radio commentators and seeing newspapers exaggerate the truth so grossly, I sometimes believe both should be compelled to stick to facts or quit. The tourist and resort industry in Michigan is a $400,000,000 business, second only to the automobile industry in normal times. It is all that some communities, like Charlevoix, for instance, has. As matters now stand, it is being frightened out of existence, and with it will go the means by which thousands of Northern Michigan residents make a livelihood and support the nation's war effort through taxes and war bonds. If all the rationing stories which come out of Washington are based on necessity, let's have them, but if they are not immediately needed, why not keep quiet until the proper time.

We know who bosses the men, but who bosses the women?

KIWANIS NOTES

A musical program and talks by two local Indian boys, now in the armed services of the United States, featured the meeting of the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club held Tuesday evening at the I.O.O.F. hall.

Mrs. Archie Belding, at the piano, accompanied Joseph Hanna, of Petoskey, in a series of Kiwanis and patriotic selections. Mr. Hanna played an instrument of his own invention, which is capable of imitating any other instrument or group of instruments.

Wallace John, USN, who is home on furlough from Great Lakes Naval Training Station, and awaiting commencement of further studies in signal work at the University of Chicago, talked on the work of the signal man, and the advantages of sending messages in the Indian language.

Archie Wasegishik, para-trooper, also home on leave from Fort Benning, graphically described his training and experiences as an army parachute jumper.

President Harry Bingham and Secretary "Bill" Meyer were at Cheboygan attending the mid-year meeting of the Ninth Division of the Michigan District of Kiwanis. In the absence of the president, vice-president Fred Bancroft conducted the meeting here.

VICTORY GARDENS

Michigan Council of Defense

By George Tomlinson, Director, Michigan Victory Garden Program

Transplanting is a task Victory Gardeners must perform throughout the season. Every garden requires it because certain crops, such as cabbage, cauliflower, tomatoes, and cucumbers may be started indoors much earlier than they possibly could be in open ground, and also because some plants, such as celery, form a fine fibrous root system if transplanted once or twice before final planting in the field.

Transplanting makes better use of land. After early radishes and peas are gone, late cabbage may be transplanted into the same space. And then, too, transplanting will save many seedlings, such as lettuce, cabbage, and beets, which may be thinned by transplanting into another row.

What Success Depends On

Now, success in transplanting depends on a variety of conditions. When the plants are ready to be planted in the ground it is a good plan to shorten the tops of such plants as cabbage, celery, cauliflower, and similar plants when they are to be moved. This may be done by twisting or cutting off a third or even half of the tops.

Transplanting must be done when you are sure there is no serious danger of killing frosts. The soil should be neither too wet nor too dry, but as they say, "just right." If the soil is moist the setting of plants in the open ground is a simple operation with little chance for failure. In dry soil, to be successful, you must have a first-class sturdy plant that has not been crowded in the seed bed, and it is best to water the soil until it is moist—but not wet and sticky.

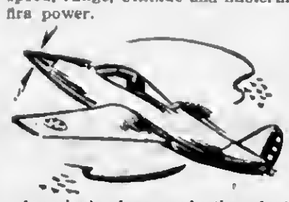
The best transplanting time is when it is cool and cloudy or when the humidity is high. The best time of day to transplant, after 4 p. m., when the moisture in the air is increasing and the plants have the cooler night air in which to recover before being subjected to the intense heat of the sun. If the weather is cool and cloudy, the plants may be set out any time of the day.

Don't be stingy; dig hole large enough to spread out the roots without crowding. In the case of seedlings which have a long tap root, it will help promote stocky growth if this tap root is shortened. Avoid permitting air pockets to be formed among the roots. See that the soil is filled in properly to cover the roots, and then firm the soil, so that contact is close, since without this contact the roots cannot absorb water from the soil. Seedlings should usually be set a little deeper than they stood in the flat box. In the case of overgrown plants, it may be wise to lay the stem horizontally under the soil for several inches, rather than let it project above the surface. This is especially the case with tomatoes.

The soil should be soaked after the transplanting operation is finished. A little dry soil sprinkled over the surface will check evaporation. Vigorous growth in seedlings will be assured if plant food is applied while the seedlings are small. In transplanting vegetables mix thoroughly one level tablespoonful of complete plant food with the soil in the bottom of the hole before setting the plant. Then apply the plant food over a radius two feet from the plant at a rate of one round teaspoonful to each square foot of ground. Four to six weeks later apply another application at the same rate. Apply evenly over the soil surface except that immediately adjacent to the plant.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The Army's fighter planes are the finest in the world and develop speeds up to 400 miles an hour. They cost approximately $100,000 each, provide fighter escorts for the huge flying fortresses, and combine speed, range, altitude and blistering fire power.



America's plane production plants are working over-time turning out thousands of these fighter planes. War Savings Bonds will help pay for them and the American people are committed to at least ten percent of their income to finance their cost in War Bonds. Every American, buying his share every pay day, will make it comparatively easy to supply our army and navy air corps with these supreme Eagles of the air.

GOVERNMENT IN NEED OF SKILLED WORKERS

Local Men May Make Application to Louis O'Neil, at Postoffice

Many skilled men are needed at once to go to work for the United States government at the Panama Canal or at Pearl Harbor, according to the United States civil service commission. The current recruitment program being conducted by the commission has been extended, and qualified men still may file applications for this important war work. Applications are being received by Louis O'Neil, a civil service commission secretary at the Charlevoix postoffice.

Wages to be paid qualified workmen are unusually high and transportation to either the Panama Canal or Pearl Harbor is paid for by the government. Working and living conditions at both places today are better than average, and besides government maintained quarters, all workers have the use of government recreational facilities. Hospitalization is also provided at no cost to the men.

The workers most needed include: machinists, aviation mechanics, metalsmiths, painters, parachute repairmen, bombsight mechanics, pipe coverers, wood boxmakers, coppersmiths, aviation and ordnance electricians, instrument repairmen, armature winders, wiremen, toolmakers, mechanical engineers and draftsmen, blacksmiths, marine boilermakers, pattern makers, planing mill hands, boat builders, sailmakers, riggers, shipfitters, shipwrights and engineering draftsmen.

Most of the positions offered cover a 40-hour week with time and one-half paid for all work over forty hours.

LOCAL MERCHANTS AID IN STATE-WIDE PROMOTION

Campaign Aimed to Stimulate Production and Sale of Michigan-Grown Foodstuffs

When tha Charlevoix housswife visits her favorite retailer during the week starting Thursday (May 28) she will be greeted by a display of banners and pennants annouaciag the "Michigan Days for Victory" campaign—a seven-dny drive to stimulate the production and sale of Michigan-grown foodstuffs.

Tempting stora displays of Michigan-grown produce in wide variety will themselves tell the story of why tho home state foods aro to bs preferred. The food retailer himself will supplement the displays with tips for the interested. Not only food but variety stores, drug stores and general merchants are participating in the educational program.

Designed to promoto the common interest of the Michigan producer and consumer alike, tho "Michigan Days for Victory" cumpuign will ho conducted in 179 Michigan communities with the combined forces of agriculture and retailing joining to inform the consumer of the part that Michigan food is playing in the war effort.

A statement today from the Lansing headquarters of the "Michigan Days" committee points again to the vital industrial contribution to the wur effort being made by Michigan factories by converting their enormous facilities into arsenals of supply for the tools of victory. Michigan is not only an arsenal of democracy, tho committee declared, but an arsenal of agriculture that is daily assuming n more vital role in producing food for people at home as well as those on the battle fronts of the world. Agriculture, next to war materials is the state's greatest industry.

LLEWELLYN S. SEE DIED LAST WEDNESDAY

Tho application, to be made by one adult member of a family unit, will require the following information: the names of the consumers on whose behalf the application is filed and serial number of their war rationing books (which must be brought to the place of registration); number of quarts of fruit canned in the preceding calendar year; number of quarts of fruit then in possession of the individual or family; number of quarts to be canned during the period for which application is made; whether sugar is to be used for preserving; excess sugar supply as of the time of registration.

BASEBALL TEAM BEAT IN INITIAL CONTEST

Dropped 7 to 4 Decision Sunday to Traverse City Outfit

Charlevoix's independent baseball team lost 7 to 4 to Traverse City at Traverse in the season's initial contest last Sunday.

Charlevoix blew a 4 to 2 lead and lost opportunities to win in the seventh and eighth innings when they failed to score one time with the bases loaded and none out and again with the sacks full and one down.

Each team was charged with two errors, Charlevoix had 11 men left on base and Traverse 9. Sommerville, local hurler, struck out eight, Stall fanned nine for Traverse. Charlevoix was out-hit 10 to 7.

The team goes to Chehoygan for their second contest on Sunday, May 31.

The best work is done by men whosu consciences won't let them do inferior work.

If Uncle Sam keeps on rationing fattening foods and makes more people walk, there'll be more streamlined men and not so many bay windows between the dining chair and the table.—Uncle Josh.

Until Lake Charlevoix received its coating of road tar Sunday, it appeared the steelhead run had got away to a better than average start, although the lack of fish and presence of oil may be only coincidence. John Kling got a 5-pound German brown while trolling Sunday for steelhead. His was the second of this species taken in Lake Charlevoix during the past week, 'cause I landed myself a 3-pounder Friday night along with a 3½-pound steelhead, which should all go to prove that the fishin's mighty good when I'm lucky enough to produce results. Numerous other boats last Sunday were dragging from one to three steelhead alongside, too.

A young man ordered two dozen roses to be sent to his fiancee, age 24, and wrote on the card that was to go with them: "A rose for every year of your precious life."

"Throw in an extra dozen," said the florist; "he's a good customer."

The assistant did as he was told and so far the marriage hasn't taken place.

With their very existence threatened through proposed nation-wide rationing of gasoline, Michigan resort operators have become aroused. With a spirit which does, however, recognize and show willingness to make personal sacrifices necessary in the all-out effort to win the war, they have banded together in an attempt to save the resort industry—which in many communities not favored with manufacturing is practically the only financial resource. LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Willow Run is but two mere words.

It stands for America's growing power in the air.

It is a symbol of our hopes for Victory.

Its four-motored bombers, produced to the extent of "dozens daily," are capable of flying from the new Ford Airport at Dearborn to any military airdrome on the globe. They can leave Willow Run at 6 a. m. in the morning and arrive the next day in Europe! Superman couldn't do much better himself.

While the government prevents publication of vital information, nearly 200 Michigan newspaper editors were given an exclusive tour of the giant aerial hatchery last Friday (May 22) and they learned much about it.

The visit, arranged by the Ford Motor company with permission of the war department, afforded a new insight into war complexities of the Michigan home front.

For example, where was once rolling meadow land 13 months ago, today stands an industrial engineering triumph in construction. It is the largest one-story industrial structure in the world—another superlative.

When in complete production, the plant will require employment of an army of workers—100,000 at least, of whom one-fourth will be women.

The Housing problem is vast. Ypsilanti, the nearest city, cannot accommodate a fraction of the Willow Run army of workers.

The government is building dormitories for men, huge apartment units, and thousands of single homes—all within a short distance of the plant—in an emergency effort to meet the needs. Because of the transportation problem created by scarcity of rubber tires and shortage of gasoline in the East, officials do not believe it is practical to transport 100,000 persons twice daily at any great distance.

Ypsilanti and Washtenaw county officials fear that Willow Run

HE: Hello . . . that you, Helen? Listen, I forgot to tell you to send the car over for greasing and an oil change.

SHE: Oh, all right Bob, but what about the tires and the battery and all the other things it might need?

HE: Right . . . everything should be attended to. Gosh! . . . can't you take some responsibility for the car?

SHE: All right, smarty . . . I have taken the responsibility. I joined the Once-a-Week Club today.

HE: Great Caesar's ghost! Another club! Didn't we just agree last night to cut out unnecessary expenses?

SHE: That's exactly what we are doing. This is a club without any dues, fees or anything.

HE: I'm listening . . . proceed with caution!

SHE: Well, you know that nice Conoco station over on Myrtle Street? I went in there this morning and Mr. Blevins, the Mileage Merchant, told me he would go over our car every Thursday morning; check the tires, the battery, water . . . in fact, everything . . . and if he saw anything needed, he would write it down for me.

HE: Atta girl! This war will make a business woman out of you yet!

SHE: Oh, yeah? Well, I may be a business woman, my dear, but I'm going to get a permanent this afternoon just to prove I'm still a female . . . and the price will be charged up to the extra life of our car and the savings we're going to have because of that Conoco Once-a-Week Club.

Peter was on the starboard side of the cabin companion, by the door of the potato room where Tommy Hanline slept. He had a boat spade poised ready to slice at anyone whose head appeared in the companion. George saw him. George did not see Hurd. Hurd was on the port side, beyond the door of the galley, where old Willie Leeper, as though blind to all that went on aboard here, persistently banged and clattered at his work. Hurd had a boat spade too.

But George did not see him. He saw Peter, and Peter saw George and leaped toward him. George fell on his face and rolled on his side and lifted the revolver and shot.

Peter ducked and dodged; and suddenly he screamed like a woman. Panic fear broke him down. He turned to run aft toward the companion, squalling as he ran.

George thumbed back the hammer of the revolver and shot again. Peter seemed to trip and fall, and he no longer screamed. George, lying on his side, his cheek against the deck, the revolver flat on the deck at his arm's length, pulled the hammer and shot again and again, slowly, laboriously aiming through eyes half closed.

After a space, the hammer clicked on an empty cylinder. He could do nothing more. He rolled on his back and looked up; and then his eyes opened wide in clear recognition of what was about to happen to him. Hurd, the little Cockney, stood over him in silhouette against the sky and the web of rigging. Hurd was lifting his boat spade to strike. He seemed to stand there motionless; and time had stopped, and instants were eternal.

CHAPTER XXI

Behind Hurd—George could see him under Hurd's upraised arms—Willie Leeper was holding upraised a heavy cleaver. Before Hurd's spade stopped going up for the downward blow at George, the cleaver, already lifted, began to descend. It came slowly against Hurd's neck, on the side under the ear, at an angle inward. The broad keen blade went far in and in.

The spade in Hurd's hands dropped to the deck. The blade of it brushed against George's side, and stuck in the planking; and the spade stood erect for a moment, and then fell over sidewise as the blade, for lack of any deep hold, broke out of the planking. The handle fell across George's body.

Hurd fell the other way, making choking sounds. Willie Leeper looked down at him. Willie said in a piping, thin voice to Hurd dying on the deck:

"There, drat yel"

George laughed. That was funny. He had never heard Willie speak before. Willie had a thin, squeaking voice that was completely absurd. George was much amused.

Then he forgot Willie, for here was Mary. George rolled his head sidewise to look at Peter lying on the deck aft; but Peter had not moved, so everything was all right.

He told her so. He said carefully: "Everything's all right, Mary." He tried to nod, to reassure her. "It's all right, Mary," he repeated.

She said fiercely: "Husb! Oh, my brave dear!"

"It's all right," he insisted, and smiled. Something was running out of him. His life. It was running out through his arm, fast; but he must be sure Mary understood, so that she would be happy, afterward.

He tried to tell her that he knew she loved Richard, that he knew she and Richard were fine, that it was all right, that she was not to feel badly about him, or about anything.

But so much of him had already run out that there was not enough of him left to say what he wished to say; and while he lay happy in Mary's arms, the rest ran out in a dwindling little stream.

On a day almost four months later, under all sail, the Venturer moved serenely upon a white-capped sea. Richard had for the moment gone below. Mat Forbes was aft, Tommy Hanline proudly taking a turn at the wheel. Corkran and Mary stood together by the starboard rail amidships; and the parrot nibbled at Corkran's ear, and whispered wheedlingly. Two or three miles away, a whaler, bark-rigged, was outward bound; and Corkran nodded toward it and said quietly:

"That one left New Bedford no longer ago than yesterday, ma'am.

"We've been a long time shipmates, Mr. Corkran."

Or it might just be the day before. We're near home."

Mary nodded, dreaming. "We've been a long time shipmates, Mr. Corkran."

"Aye, ma'am, since the day you came aboard at Honolulu. And I was shipmates with himself before that." His eyes were warm. "There was a fine one! Oh, he was a sore trouble to himself, but fair and fine for all that. I loved that little man."

"So did I. And we were right, weren't we?"

"We were so!"

She said: "He was fond of you, too."

"Queer, that," he reflected. "But he was, for a fact. I never let on to him to be what I wasn't; and he knew all my ways and had no use for them at all. But he took to me, in spite of my ways."

"He'd be proud of you now. You've changed, Mr. Corkran." She smiled. "You were a pagan, once, you know."

"Aye; but friends you and I were, even then, you'll mind." He chuckled. "Now why will a woman that likes a man as he is he always wanting him changed into some other manner of man altogether?" he demanded; and then he said: "I was a pagan ashore, it might just be; and I might be again, for all either of us can be knowing now."

"You're certainly different aboard ship."

"Well, the sea has a way with a man," he reminded her. "It'll make him or mar him, one way and another. Give it long enough and it will show you what's inside him, every time. Look at Peter Corr, for one, ma'am, and himself for another. Not but what I knew from the first that himself was a man under all."

After a little, she asked: "Corkran, what do you think Peter meant to do?"

"Meanness, ma'am. Any kind that offered. He was one would do anything for loot, if he could find the spine for it, or get other men to take the risk for him. No knowing now what all was in his black mind. It's sure he tried to talk Reverence himself into killing the Cap'n. With the Cap'n dead, all else would be in Peter's hands. He would have figured so."

"Do you think he meant Cap'n Corr to fall into the pit that day?"

"Like as not! He'd been up there his own self the day before, after pig; and he must have seen many traps of the like sort in the tussocks. While we were hunting the Cap'n, we found a dozen pits like that one, or less, or maybe bigger; and there was a pig that had fresh fallen in, squealing and grunting in one of them. Aye, the mate might have meant it; but more like he just hoped it. If he'd seen the Cap'n standing on the very lip of the pit, I doubt he'd have had the heart to push him in. It was a trouble to that one that he had not the insides in him to do all the black things he could think of that he'd like to do. He's dead, rest him; but he was a bad one while he lived." He said in sober judgment: "Let that one be forgot by every decent man forever Amen. Himself is the fine one to remember, and us be the better for remembering."

"I always will," she whispered.

"Aye." Corkran looked at her wisely; but then he said in a new tone: "Himself knew more than most, ma'am. A wise one, that. He knew always more than you might think."

She met his eyes. "You mean more than you say."

"That I do, ma'am." His smile was reassuring.

"What do you mean? Tell me."

"Well, for one thing, I'm meaning it was a fair fine word he said, to bid me go back and find Cap'n Corr that night; and a brave strong one he was to say it. If he had not bid me go, I'd not have gone; and well he know it, for well he knew I was his man. And if I'd not gone, Mat Forbes would not. So it was himself sent us back to fetch the Cap'n, and him knowing what he knew about the true thing between the two of you. Aye, it was a grand fine thing for him to do."

She said quietly: "In my arms, at the last, he kept telling me that everything was all right."

"Aye, he would. A man, that." There was a movement aft and he looked that way. Richard had come on deck. Her eyes followed Corkran's, and rested on Richard, and Corkran added quietly beside her: "That was what himself meant, when he told you everything was right. I tell you, he knew."

"Did he, surely?" she asked.

"Aye. He knew. When he told me we must go back, he paid the Cap'n a great compliment, ma'am; and yourself too. But you've deserved it, both of you."

She looked at him for a long moment. "How have we deserved it?" she asked slowly.

He smiled at her. "Has the Cap'n said yet one word to you of the thing you're both thinking every minute that you live?"

"No, Corkran."

"Nor you to him, I'll be bound."

"No."

He touched her arm. "That's how you've deserved the way himself acted you. But—let you not wait too long, nor the Cap'n either. Himself would not want you to wait longer than a fair decent time; and that you've done." And when she did not speak, he said quietly: "Be not uneasy, ma'am. If the Cap'n has not yet said his mind—and his heart—he will."

She met his eyes honestly, smiling a little. "Yes," she said. "I know he will. When we're home." Her eyes were warm and deep. "I know what he will say, Corkran."

"Aye," he assented. "And what you'll say, I'll be bound." He chuckled. "Not that words will be mattering to either one of you."

Richard came toward them, his eyes quickening on Mary as he drew near; but before he reached them, Big Pip called from the crosstrees: "Land ho, Cap'n!" Richard looked up, and Big Pip swung his arm to point. "Dead ahead!" he cried.

A great shout rose, and men went swarming into the rigging to see for themselves the dim blue line on the horizon. Corkran moved forward; but Richard stayed with Mary, and he looked down at her, not speaking. The parrot on Corkran's shoulder watched them standing together, their eyes embracing, forgetting all the world. Head on one side, the bird drawled:

"Mighty pretty."

Corkran lifted the parrot down, held it in front of him so that it would not see them. "And why not," he said in mild chiding; "and what right has a bird like you to peek and peer at them? Himself would have it as it is. Whose business is it anywise, but his, and theirs? Hush you, and let be."

(THE END)

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

Like a brand-new baby, Michigan is getting used to price-control and likes it.

If you or Mrs. Jones are still confused about it, here are a few reminders.

Price control is our charter of security. Without it, the cost of living would rise to heights which would bring suffering to many.

Your cooperation is needed to make it work smoothly.

There are a number of exceptions—seasonal foods such as fresh fruit, vegetables, fish and game. Excluded also are butter, cheese, canned milk, flour, mutton, lamb, poultry and eggs.

It seems kind of funny that there is a ceiling price on pork and beef but none on mutton. The office of Price Administration can't put a maximum price on any farm products until the price of a product reaches 110 per cent of parity. If the price of mutton goes up until it reaches this parity, then a ceiling price can be placed on it—and probably will.

United We Stand

How about a quiz program on the price control regulations the next time the Busy Bee Sewing Club meets? The quicker EVERYONE gets acquainted with these regulations, the smoother and better it will work.

There are some other exceptions which do not touch the family larder, including newspapers, magazines, books, admissions to movies and other amusement places, collectors' items such as antiques, pictures, stamps, coins, and precious stones.

Of course, you know that the price of a can of corn can be 15 cents at one store and 13 cents at the store down the street. A merchant is entitled to set his price at the highest level he charged for that particular article in the month of March, 1942. That's No. 1 on the things you must remember.

You still can shop around.

One Goal: Victory

Your grocer has his problem—and the butcher, the druggist and the drygoods store.

If the druggist has not posted ceiling prices for all his merchandise—don't get worried. He is supposed to have posted the maximum prices for "cost-of-living" items. But he can't possibly cover the thousands of articles he sells. They are under the ceiling, however, and he will give you the ceiling price, if you ask him.

America Is One

The ceiling on retail service charges doesn't go into effect until July 1. Retail service charges are to be controlled only if they are performed in connection with a commodity. This means the prices of automobile and radio repairs, laundry, dry-cleaning, shoe mending and such will be controlled. Personal services such as hairdressing or dental work will NOT be controlled, even after July 1.

You're not a price policeman—at least not yet.

Be patient and tolerant with your merchants. Give them until July 1 anyway to get the things to working. Only flagrant and unmistakeable violations should be reported—to your local War Price and Rationing Board.

We're All at War

President Roosevelt recently directed a message to newspaper editors, which well might be applied to everyone one the Home Front:

"The men and women of a nation at war have the right to expect.....the same loyalty with which they send their men to join our fighting forces. The same energy with which they raise food and make arms for America and the other United Nations. The same courage with which they face an enemy who would destroy the world, the same vision with which they foresee the world of freedom for which we are fighting....."

How To Shut Ears and Mind Against Too Much Noise

War nerves may start if air raid noises come, unless you clamp down now on unnecessary dins that raise blood pressure, cause fatigue, poor work, and even paralyze digestion. An article in The American Weekly with this Sunday's (May 31) issue of The Detroit Sunday Times, explains how to do this. Be sure to get The Detroit Sunday Times this week and every week.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

Have you ever thought how much a million dollars really is? Sure is an awful lot of nice things a fellow could do with a million dollars . . . if he had it. A million dollars is a lot of money.

* * *

Just think . . . it would take about three weeks, counting as fast as you could 24 hours a day, just to count up to a million.

I read in the paper the other day that the beer industry pays more than a million dollars a day in taxes . . . Federal, State and local. Every day . . . more than a million dollars.

I guess the government is glad to get that help these days, what with a war to win and pay for.

Of course, not all of that beer tax money goes to the Federal government. Quite a lot of it goes to the States and is used for such useful purposes as public health, emergency relief, old age assistance, education and public welfare.

Farmers surely ought to like the beer industry, too, from what I hear. Last year the brewers bought nearly two billion pounds of barley malt and nearly half a billion pounds of corn and corn products. And plenty of rice and hops, too. That's a lot of farm products.

Back around '33 and '34, when the tough old depression was hitting all of us pretty hard, farmers were certainly glad to sell those extra crops that beer bought from them. And come to think of it, when beer came back it made lots of new jobs for plenty of other people, too. City folks and country folks both.

If I hadn't gone in for this writing business, I think I'd like to have tried my hand at the brewing business.

I'd like to be making a fine tasting beverage that helps the public treasuries so much and that people can rightly call the "beverage of moderation." That moderation incidentally is another of the fine things about beer.

NOTHING IS MORE IMPORTANT

With war—and the penalties of war all about us; with longer hours and harder work often taxing our physical resources; with our attention often scattered in so many directions that we are easy prey for nerve strain, many of us are apt to overlook the most important thing of all.

And that is our personal health—governed so much by proper nutrition and a balanced diet. Attention to health, authorities tell us, is more important in war time than in normal years because the demands of a war economy take a toll on us whether we are at the front or at the fireside.

All of which leads us to commend the current "Michigan Days for Victory" campaign as constructive action to imprint this important matter on the consciousness of the Michigan citizen. It is human nature to neglect what is at hand for what is far afield. Certainly we can't do a job for ourselves or our country in its critical hour if we don't command that personal vigor and efficiency that such a perilous hour cries for.

The way to get it is to eat plenty of fresh Michigan fruits and vegetables, livestock and dairy products. They cannot be beaten for quality, freshness and accessibility. Your food dealer will substantiate this statement.

The four-man team taken to the event by Coach Stewart Coleman placed in four events. Dick Hallett was fourth in low hurdles and sixth in the broad jump; Jim Feres placed fifth in the shot put; Archit Livingston was sixth in the mile. Clare Martin, fourth member of the team, failed to place.

Class C championship went to Imlay City with 40 2/3 points. The season just concluded will be marked up as one of the most successful on record. Charlevoix trackmen won both the conference and regional titles and placed well in state competition.

PLANT TO PROCESS MILK WEED PLANNED

War Industry Will Be Located at Petoskey, It Is Reported

Preliminary details of a plan for location a proposed factory for the processing of milk weed and its manufacture into many useful articles, including war supplies, are being worked out by the Petoskey chamber of commerce.

Development of the milk weed crop would center at Petoskey, but the crop would be harvested all over northern Michigan, it was stated.

Financial assistance from the navy department has been assured in the form of an "Intent of Purpose" agreement issued from the purchasing division of the department, Petoskey officials stated. The intent calls for the processing of 1,000,000 pounds of floss, starting with the crop to be gathered this fall. To secure that amount of floss, will require the use of milk weed pods from 50,000 acres of wild lands, which would be one of the obligations of the Petoskey chamber of commerce.

Present plans will incorporate the building of, or making use of certain buildings now located at Petoskey to process the material.

NO FISH LICENSE IS A FREQUENT VIOLATION

Topped List of Causes for Department Arrests in April

Forgetting to buy a license before going fishing was the most common breach of conservation rules and regulations in April, and neglect of this detail landed 121 anglers in court. Setting grass fires without permits, possession of guns in game areas without permits, and having guns in a car when neither in a case nor taken down contributed heavily to the total of 354 arrests.

Among unusual offenses were killing game fish with firearms, taking game fish by hand, and permitting dogs to molest deer. Fines and costs amounted to $2,300 each, and jail sentences added up to 264 days.

REGISTER FOR CANNING SUGAR

It is quite probable that only one registration will be held to cover the canning year, but the amount allotted will be split for "early" and "late" season canning to be released in given amounts on specified dates.

The amount of sugar allowed for canning and preserving will be based largely on the integrity of persons applying and those in charge of registration will be instructed on determining through their knowledge of local conditions, the honesty of applicants and make allowances accordingly.

Full details of the registration will be announced next week.

LONGER CAR LIFE TO BE OBTAINED BY CONOCO PLAN

A new service to motorists, designed to prolong the life of motor cars and make tires last longer, is being introduced by Continental Oil Company through Charlevoix Oil Co., its local dealer, it was announced today by Will A. Morgan, company advertising manager.

"The new service," Mr. Morgan stated, "will be announced to the public in a series of advertisements to start this week in Charlevoix Courier.

"Knowing that regular inspection and proper lubrication are absolutely vital to the long-life of cars now operating, dealers in Conoco products throughout the country are organizing Once-A-Week clubs among motorists, with the idea of making thorough checks of each car on regularly specified days every week. Conoco dealers will keep careful records of tire serial numbers, grease and oil change periods, and all information necessary to the proper servicing of the car. They will remind motorists when lubrication and other services are needed, and will do everything possible to help the motorists get the maximum life from their cars at the least possible cost and trouble," Morgan said.

All Conoco dealers in this territory are cooperating in the plan, it was announced.

FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

Considerable interest in soy beans has been aroused in recent years. The fact should be remembered, however, that most of the varieties offered in the catalog are not suitable for home gardens. Nevertheless, several of the catalogs are now listing a kind which is recommended for home use. Still, the average amateur will be wise if he experiments in a small way when he first starts growing soy beans of any kind.

The actual growing of the vegetable is a simple matter. The seeds are planted like those of other garden beans. The plants make a strong growth and get to be two feet high in the course of the summer, but the period of growth is much longer that that required for other beans.

The amateur will experience his chief difficulty when he comes to harvesting the crop, for the small pods, each holding three to four beans, are soft and extremely hard to open. Shelling soy beans by hand is soon found to be a difficult job. Some growers open them by applying hot water. However, there is one advantage which the soy bean has over other beans; it is seldom troubled by Mexican beetles.

DISTRICT LAYMEN MET AT METHODIST CHURCH

First Annual Retreat Directed by Fred Bancroft, Dist. Lay Leader

Lay leaders of the Grand Traverse District of the Methodist church held their first annual retreat at the Charlevoix Methodist church, Sunday and Monday of this week, under direction of Fred W. Bancroft, district lay leader. Rev. William H. Helrigel, of Traverse City, district superintendent, acted as dean of the retreat.

At the opening session Sunday afternoon, guests were introduced and Mr. Bancroft explained facts and purposes of the retreat.

Sunday evening a rally of all Methodist laymen was held, at which speaker was Ralph Goodell, Michigan conference lay leader. He spoke on "The spirit of laymen's work." J. Royce Brown, director of Temple House, Lansing, talked on the subject "Visual teaching for children. Leonard Burleigh talked on the laymen's work in the First Methodist church of Lansing.

Monday morning the group met at the Bancroft cabins for general discussion. Rev. Helrigel talked on "Personal work and evangelism."

MEET AT GAYLORD ON GAS RATIONING

We hope you will join with us in a vigorous protest to President Roosevelt, Honorable Joseph B. Eastman, Honorable Leon Henderson and our Senators and Congressmen of the northern districts of Michigan, against the rationing of gasoline by weekly gallonage allotment.

Our proposal is to ration gasoline on a mileage basis plan, using cards showing speedometer readings and allowing a gross gallonage, 10 gallons at a time, according to the official rating of each make of car for each one hundred miles, penalties to be imposed for tampering with or changing speedometers or operating without a speedometer that is in A-1 working order.

This plan would serve to conserve tires, as an owner could make his trip and then place his car on jacks, or he could use it daily to the limit of his mileage pro-rated.

Please advise us by wire or letter at once of the number who will attend this meeting, which is of vital importance to us all. Address as follows.

Sincerely,
Harry Fowler, President
Otsego Lake Chamber of Commerce
R.F.D. 1, Gaylord, Mich.

"MICHIGAN DAYS" TO BEGIN ON THURSDAY

Proper nutrition will play an important part in the campaign. The committee called attention to the grave situation which confronted military authorities when the first contingents were called for army physical examinations. Government figures showed that 40 per cent of the men examined were found to have deficiencies occasioned in many instances by malnutrition and faulty diet. This situation called for action.

The committee of retailers and agriculturists responding to a popular appeal for all elements of the community to play their respective parts in the war effort, set out to educate the consumer on the importance of a properly balanced diet at home as well as in the armed forces. Those in the armed forces were assured of a balanced diet and therefore it seemed important to stress its importance to the consumer at home. The need of a balanced diet is emphasized in government reports which show its great contribution to the morale and physical fitness of youth in camps.

Michigan is trying to keep the civilian army in the same proper physical condition and to that end is waging war on "hidden hunger," claimed by authorities to be due to improperly balanced diet. That corrective means was immediately at hand, the committee showed by calling attention to the wide variety of health-building foods grown in the state—in fact it pointed out that Michigan is as self-sufficient in food as any state in the Union.

Attention was called to the large selection of greens, fresh vegetables and fruits produced here as well as the huge output of eggs and dairy products. Further Michigan leads the nation in the output of white beans and cherries and has recently come to the forefront in potato production.

While the state food retailers are playing one of the most active parts in the "Michigan Days" program, the committee was gratified by the favorable responses that have been received from other types of retail establishments. Even non-food retailers have come to recognize the importance of cooperation and that there is something to be gained for all in telling the Michigan food story.

Leo V. Card, state commissioner of agriculture, had high praise for the campaign. "It is probably the most commendable display of cooperative effort and patriotic response that I have ever experienced to see these non-food retailers join so enthusiastically in this movement," said Mr. Card.

The "Michigan Days for Victory" committee is sending out more than a million pieces of display material that will make their appearance Thursday in retail stores throughout the state.

Co-chairmen of the committee arranging the program are M. J. Maynard, of Lansing, for the chain stores and Cecil B. Taylor, Lansing grocer, for the independent food retailers. Others on the committee are W. G. Armstrong, Niles, Master of the State Grange; C. L. Brody, manager, Michigan Farm Bureau; Leo V. Card, state commissioner of agriculture; Gene Alleman, manager of the Michigan Press association; W. R. Kearsey, manager of the independent food stores organization and W. F. Doyle, chain store representative.

New Furlough Ruling Expected to Cause Vacancies in Camps

Draft quotas for June will be increased sharply because of the new army policy, effective June 15, allowing two weeks furlough for inductees immediately after they receive their call, Lt.-Col. J. I. Croshaw, head of induction for the state selective service headquarters, has announced.

Colonel Croshaw said the two-week furlough ruling would cause a slackening in the number of troops in replacement centers, which would have to be made up by an increase in the number of men inducted.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

The House last week passed a bill increasing the number of cadets in the United States Military Academy by 536, thereby entitling Members of Congress to one additional appointment. Heretofore by law each Congressional District was entitled to have three boys in the Military Academy and five in the Naval Academy at any one time.

To be admitted to our Service Schools, young men must meet rigid mental and physical requirements. Appointees with either one or two years of college training most often meet the mental requirements by submitting college certificates or, if they lack the necessary credits, by writing the required validating examinations. Boys who cannot do so, must write the complete entrance examinations.

I regret to state that the greater mejority of the boys who have applied to me in the past, and have come to me highly recommended as outstanding scholars, have failed when they have written the entrance examinations to these schools. Admittedly, these entrance examinations ar stiff, but other boys from all over our country write them and most of them pass successfully. Consequently, it is most disturbing to me to find that many of my appointees, graduating with honors from our district's high school's, have failed to come up to boys from other high schools in scholastic ability. I believe the fault isn't with these boys, nor do I believe that it lies to any extent with the school authorities. I do believe, however, the fault lies with you and me as parents. Possibly we have been lax in our duty to impress upon our young people the importance of education today. Possibly, as parents, we do not ask that our young people spend sufficient time on study. Possibly, as parents, we are inclined to feel that the school teacher or superintendent is "picking" on our own pet child if he dares to inform us that our boy is a little backward in school. Possibly it is our fault if we do not demand of our schools such a high standard of education as will permit our boys to compete on an equal basis in after life with the graduates of schools from other sections of the country. The repeated failures of our boys writing the Service Schools' entrance examinations is a matter of grave worry to me. It seems to be positive proof that something is wrong.

Another thing that greatly concerns me is the lack of interest exhibited by boys of our district in their Nation'e Service Schools. There is no finer college education to be offered anywhere in the world than that which a boy receives in either Annapolis or West Point. Not only does he receive such education free, but in fact he is paid by the taxpayers while attending that school and all they ask of the boy—and all I ask of him—is that when he is admitted to one of these schools he is determined to do his very best and upon graduation will make service in the armed forces of his country his life's career. When selecting my appointees, I do not ask the political affiliation of the family of any boy. I seek to appoint to these schools only such boys who I feel will give the best in them to Uncle Sam and make the best possible officers.

Some congressmen yearly are swamped with applications and find it necessary to have their applicants write preliminary examinatiops conducted each fall by the Civil Service Commission. From the boys receiving the highest ratings, they then select their appointees. In this way they are fairly certain that their nominees will successfully pass the entrance examinations. In the three and one-half years I have been privileged to serve as your Representative, I have not once found it necessary to avail myself of the commission's preliminary examination service. True, I have had more than the customary appointments open to Annapolis due to its expansion program and the resignation of midshipmen because of scholastic failure. For each Annapolis appointment, as you may know, I can name a principal and three alternate candidates, all of whom are privileged to attempt to qualify for admittance. A vacancy in West Point calls for the appointment of a principal and two alternate candidates. In the event a principal fails to meet the requirements, the principal appointment passes on to the alternates in the order named. Therefore, it is important that all alternates attempt to qualify for admittance. An alternate should not become discouraged because of his position in the lineup. For instance, two weeks ago I was notified that both my principal and first alternate appointees to West Point this year failed in their validating examinations. I was most disappointed when I learned that my second alternate had not even taken the trouble to attempt to qualify. Had he done so, and passed, he could be a Cadet July 1st.

Let's stir up more interest throughout our district's high schools in our service schools the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and the United States Military Academy at West Point. I shall welcome applications from interested young men of my district.

Romance, Fast Action In New Mystery Film

Two murders within its first two minutes on the screen send Paramount's newest romantic thrill film, "Fly By Night," off to a flying start. This swift-moving mystery, co-starring Richard Carlson and pretty Nancy Kelly, shows June 2-3 at the Palace Theatre.

"Fly By Night" promises an evening of exciting entertainment. According to preview critics, it is a smartly-paced blend of melodrama, homicide and romance, with more than its quota of laughs. It was directed by Robert Siodmak.

The picture's plot hinges on the plight of a young doctor, played by Carlson, who finds himself falsely accused of murder when Martin Kosleck, as the victim of a gang of international espionage agents, is slain in his room. To evade the police, Carlson invades the apartment of Nancy Kelly and takes her along as a hostage when he starts out on a thrilling hunt for the real killers.

The team of Carlson and Kelly, both fresh from triumphs in recent pictures, are reputed to make an attractive a romantic combination as has been seen on the screen in a long time.

Albert Basserman, famous Continental character actor, heads the list of featured players in this rollicking romance. Others are Walter Kingsford, Nestor Paiva, Edward Gargan, Michael Morris, and Miles Mander. Sol C. Siegel was the producer.

Michigan ranks first among the states in the production of cherries, field beans, cantaloupes, celery and cucumbars.

State Parks Provide Week-End "Breather"

A refreshing change for war workers, after long hours tending machines in Michigan's busy factories, is a week-end, or even a day, spent camping with the family in a state park where facilities for fishing, swimming and just plain loafing are made convenient. Though the traditional opening date for state parks is Memorial Day, May 30, most of the 46 state parks that will be in operation this season are already in use.

COMMUNICATION

Editor's Note:—We are again privileged to republish a letter from Miss Olive Allen'e brother, residing at Hawaii. This communication explains in detail defense preparations on the island and gives conditions under which residents live in wartime. The letter, in part, follows:

Dear Sis:

Bob (Bob Pearl) comes out every four days. Friday he was a hero. He and "Rich," (one of his buddies), took the car and Metta (Mrs. Allen) and Mrs. Engler shopping. He is fine and good natured as ever. Do not see much of Bill (Bill Eccleston). He is a corporal now and I'm afraid he has a girl, but that is an 'officially unconfirmed report.'

"My work about the same. All employees of the water works have been getting First Aid lectures, Wednesday from 3 to 4 p.m. Now starting on chemical warfare (gas attack) two hours Saturdays. Besides that, smaller groups getting special training in First Aid, fire fighting, gas de-contamination, etc. Most all utilities and organizations doing the same. At several places scattered around town the utilities have common 'pools' or emergency yards where the water works have stored pipe, valves, etc., the electric company wire, cable, poles, etc., and when an alarm comes certain men and trucks go to these 'ponls' to standby. Air raid warnings are sounded by sirens scattered around so everybody can hear them. So now the ambulances and fire trucks can't blow their sirens when the driver is hurrying home to lunch.

"The gas alarm is sounded by striking two pieces of metal together. These are mostly auto brake drums or steel triangles hung on telephone poles not over 1,000 feet apart. First aid stations at most all schools, churches or other suitable buildings and First Aid signs on most street intersections pointing to the nearest station. Traffic law during raid has been changed. At first when the sirens sounded all civilian traffic halted. Now civilian cars proceed to destination, but not to waterfront, air field or military establishment and have to give right-ofway to military or utility cars. Some utility cars have first right-of-way. These cars have a white square painted on right front fender. Other have second right-of-way. These have special sign they put on their windshield only during raids. My truck has one of these. To show you how much in detail it is worked out, if we are in the yard when an alarm is sounded, every truck driver starts his truck. Men who work in the yard take positions directing traffic in the yard and out in the street and every driver has a specified place to take his truck to and park it, then come back to the yard and into the B.W.S. cockroach cellar (the B. W. S. spent $10,000 digging it). We have practiced it and with over 50 trucks in the yard have emptied it in less than 2 minutes and the last driver in the shelter in 4½ minutes. I drive my truck about a block and park it in the yard of the Odd Fellow temple.

"Everybody has a gas mask that could be fitted and they are now altering some to fit the smallest children. Everybody has had smallpox and typhoid shots and I hear anti-tetanus comes next. We hope nothing happens, but By Golly we are trying to prepare for everything. Dictatorship don't sound nice, but I'll tell you that practically the same thing under martial law gets things done.

"We begin to feel the pinch of war a little more every day. Don't think I am 'bellyaching,' but just to give you a picture of conditions as is or as I see 'em. We have had no fruit shipped in for two months, I guess, so have had no apples, oranges, lemons, grapefruit, peaches, plums, etc., except about a week ago some oranges and lemons came in. 700 crates of oranges (ordinarily we had 5,000 to 7,000 crates a week) and out of it we got 6 lemons. Butter is scarce, also oleomargarine. Stores limit you to one pound of Nucoa or one-half pound butter when they have it. We have a Chinese vegetable man we have bought vegetables from since 1928. He used to come every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, now he comes whenever he can get gas and vegetables. Now his truck is loaded mostly with bread, cookies, etc. We formerly shopped at Piggly Wiggly Saturday noon for the week. Now do it Friday p. m. Generally no meat. We have traded at store for years so if possible he will hide a pound of Nucon for us, but meat counter dry. He will say, 'you come early tomorrow.' Metta can't make it, but Roy goes down. He is about 6 foot tall now and can spot a piece of meat at 75 yards, so he brings home the bacon—maybe pork, t-bone, mutton or hamburger, but when anybody brings anything home there is never a complaint—just rejoicing.

"By the way, all navy vessels here are named the Tuscarora. It is a wonderful ship. Travels under water to Japan, throws 12-inch shells into the Marshall Islands, convoys ships to San Francisco and transports troops to Australia all the same time.

"There is rumor of food rationing here and I hope it is so. When butter was all out, one man bragged of having 12 pounds in his ice box. A neighbor of ours (a Finn at that) crowed because she three pounds and had just a half-pound making a batch af cookies. There is just she and her husband and she haunts the stores and whenever she sees a delivery wagon leave anything she goes in and howls until she gets what she wants—or what she knows is scarce—and then on to the next store. Her husband is a civilian worker at Pearl Harbor and they have commissary privileges so they often can get things not in civilian stores. Metta and I are un-American I guess. We don't like to try to wiggle in ahead of others and get more than our share and consequently don't get our dues, and for that reason we will welcome rationing where all are treated alike. What gripes me are some of these defense workers. A few years ago they cut our wages 10% to 15% to keep the wrinkles out of their bellies while they leaned on their shovels and voted every 4 years. Now with their sinecure taken away from them and a case of work or fight they condescend to accept a position with a cost-plus contractor at three times my wages and commissary privileges where they can buy at much lower prices and often get things not sold to us. If they see a better job they take it. My job and salary are frozen. I can't quit (and they can't fire me) and no raise during the duration. Taxes have gone up and are going upper but I can't raise the rent on the apartment occupied by a defense worker making 4 times what he did a year ago and 3 times what I do.

People being evacuated steadily to mainland—Army and Navy families and non-essential civilians. Rumor No. 68756 is that all women and children will have to go. Hope not as Metta and boys don't want to go, decisively and emphatically NO! However, every person who is here has to have things shipped from mainland this space could be used shipping things to Australia to be presented forcibly to the Japs. The news just came in yesterday that we have delivered the first April 1st Christmas present to Tokio. Hope they like it. They will get many more.

We are happy and not complaining and 75 years from now we will deny we ever wrote this.

Aloha—Lew 'n' folks.

P. S. In case you do hear of a raid here don't worry (if possible) if you don't hear from us for quite a while. Cables would be overloaded—air mail by the ton and clippers might be carrying other things—a big flood of ordinary mail and the censor might be wounded or gassed. Also we might be out of touch with Bob and Bill for some time.

Wins Kroger Safety Ring

will bccoma a great "ghost town" when the war is over. But you can't stop for philosophy when there is a war to ba won. And so it'a all-out for bomber planes. The cost can not be measured in our freedom.

The rate of production at Willow Run is a highly guarded military secret.

But this much can be said: The objective is fantastic, but it will be reached. Tho mechanical wizardry of Henry Ford is legond to every school child.

President Roosevelt himself has put the nation's goal at 185,000 warplanes by 1944. That is in terms of annual production.

Little wonder that Detroit war officials, while quarreling among themselves over jurisdiction, agree on this: Willow Run is an invitation to nn Axis air raid, just as the Sault Ste. Marie locks at the "Soo" constitutes a challenge.

Wives of editors—and some of Michigan newspaper editors are women—were greatly irked by a government regulation forbidding admittance of women visitors into the plant.

After all, were not women sacrificing for the war? And were not women being invited to work in tha plant?

The oxplanation, however, is far from being critical of the fair sex.

Michigan newspaper women are blessed with beauty, a fact that no one ean possibly deny.

As a public relations diplomat explained the situation to us, war workers would bo distracted from concentration at the assembly line, thousands of hours of needed war work would be lost, and perhaps bombers would not be finished which would mean the difference between defeat and victory on some far-off front.

All becnuse of the ladies!

Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner and officials of tha Michigan Council of Defensa recently made an inspection tour of the "Soo" locks.

Army troops paraded through the main streets.

Balloons wera high in tbe sky, guardians against dive bombers.

Residents of the border city viewed tha spectacle with great satisfaction, for this historic frontier town is today one of Michigan's best protected centers. Antiaircraft posts have been established in a huge ring on both sides of the bordor. Soldiers and trucks cross the border without formality of passports, evidence of a coordinated program of military preparedness by both American and Canadian governments.

It is a well publicized fact that these locks at the "Soo" serve twice as much freight tonnage each year as Panama and Suez canals put together.

Rationing of gasoline is now regarded as inevitable.

It may be proclaimed about July 1, a date that traditionally has ushered the summer season of Michigan's well developed tourist industry.

Resort proprietors are not any too happy about tha prospect, but they aro finding bright linings on the rationing clouds. If railroad and bus transportation facilities are not rationed, as the office of Defense Transportation recently intimated it might require, resorts served by good transportation will have a good season.

People will come to hotels and cottages and stay PUT for the "duration" af their vacations. The usual gadding around at dancing and night spots, hamburger stands, taverns and other American institutions will not be possible. Roadside cabins will probably take a licking in business this summer, if gasoline rationing is declared.

But the demand for lake cottages is the greatest in many years, so we hear from Cheboygan. Healthful vacations may be re-discovered; families will stay together and get acquainted.

To John S. Knight, newspaper publisher of Akron, Miami, and Detroit, our "inept, spineless" Congress at Washington, is one of the worst in history. In a long page-one editorial Knight recently blasted Congressmen for their pension "Bundles" and "X" rationing cards. He branded our representatives at Washington as being a "total waste of time, money and effort," and he urged all voters to do something about it.

A contrasting viewpoint is offered by Frank R. Moses, publisher of the Marshall Evening Chronicle, who points to the latest Gallup poll as convincing proof that the next Congress will be increasingly Democratic.

"The idea most frequently expressed by voters in this poll was that they didn't want to change parties while a war was on and the Callup people came to the conclusion that the Republicans had not found an issue which appeals to the people or a leader who could rally the voters to the Republican cause.

"Congress is bitterly criticized year in and year out, but taken as a whole, it does a good job."

Take your choice.

Campaign tactics by Messrs. Van Wagoner and Kelly will be officially non-political for the next few months.

Both men are making frequent appearances throughout the state at war rallies, and they are shunning politics in their prepared talks.

Van Wagoner's cue may ba the reasoning of the Gallup poll: Don't change bi-partisan government while a war is on. Kelly's appeal may be: Put more efficiency in Michigan'a war effort.

Each reasoning haa the same motive: Help to win the war.

Charlevoix County Victory Garden Set Record

Residents of the urban communities in this county can be justly proud of the number of Victory gardens they have as indicated by recent surveys. From a recent letter from George Tomlinson, State Director of Victory Cardens, a quota for Charlevoix county was established for 500 Victory gardens. When we now know there are over 900 Victory gardens then this should cause great satisfaction.

Boyne City reports 366 Victory gardens of which some seventy folks are included who did not have a garden last year. This represents slightly over 20% increase in gardens and around 30% increase in size. Rev. John Wyngarden, assisted by tha various ministers, head up tha Victory Garden program. Our sincere thanks to the members of the Monday Study Club who made the house to house canvass to obtain a true picture of the movemeat.

East Jordan, under the leadership af Lester Welcutt and L. B. Karr, members of tbe bigh school faculty, report 244 gardens of which some 20 are new. Here again tbe ladies deserve much credit as members of the garden club made the canvass to arrive et their results.

In Charlevoix, Wyatt S. Wilson, the chairman, is ably assisted by an executive committee of six members, two from each of tho threo wards. The garden club ladies made the canvass and are to complimented upon the speed with which the campaign was conducted. Complete reports have not been received but it is estimated that there aro approximately 300 Victory gardens in Charlevoix.

In Boyne Falls, out of some 60 families, there were approximately 35 Victory gardens. Clyde Coff has been kind enough to submit this list and has greatly added encouragement to those having gardens. Thus for the urban communities there are over 900 Victory gardens. All chairmen report great interest and enthusiasm in their communities. Many communities have had the activa cooperation of their city councils in that they hava plowed and cultivated property to be turned over to Victory gardeners.

In tbe rural sections we find about the same increase in numbers af gardens and size. Approximately 250 4-H club members are actively supervising their own gardens, or the gardens of tba family.

Yes, it can be safely said that Charlevoix county is loyal and actively supporting all programs having to do with the successful completion of the war. Just as a warning, don't neglect to take care of these Victory gardens.

Over 60 Neighborhood War Clubs Organized In Rural Sections

The USDA War Board has recently completed the organizing of the entire county of over sixty neighborhood war clubs. Each war club is made up of from around ten to thirty families. During the last two weeks the members of the county war board have conducted twelve community meetings.

The county has been divided into twelve large communities. A group of from four to seven committeemen were selected by the county war board to meet together and help organize their community. Each war club has one man and one lady as co-chairmen of their local group. Thus it can be seen that in the case of any emergency within a few hours time contacts can be made to each neigbborhood and speedy action taken. For tha first time all defense activities will touch every farm family in the county. The response on tho part of these many individuals who were selected as committeemen has been wonderful. We find that every individual is interested in doing his or her part.

Following is a list of the twelve communities, community leaders and number of neigbborhood war clubs organized:

Bay, Carl Prohaska, chairman; Mrs. Paul Skronia, secretary—6.

Boyne Valley, Joe Toplinski, chairman; Mrs. Harry DeNise, secretary—(number as yet uncertain).

Chandler, Carl Clark, chairman; Mrs. Constance Gallop, secretary—5.

Hudson, Bert Woodward, chairman; Mrs. Milton Holbron, secretary—2.

Evangeline and Melrose, Melvin Somerville, chairman; Mrs. Clara Norton, secretary—8.

Hayes, Alfred Allison, chairman; Mrs. Ruth Hair, secretary—7.

Marion, L. E. McGhan, chairman; Mrs. Sam Straw, secretary—5.

Beaver Island, Earl Boyle, chairman—6.

Norwood, Orlon VanDusen, chairman; Mrs. Emma Wells, secretary—8.

Peninsula; Calvin J. Bennett, chairman; Mrs. Amanda Shepard, secretary—(number as yet uncertain).

South Arm, Albert Omland, chairman; Mrs. Kenneth Isman, secretary—5.

Wilson, Ralph Lenoskey, chairman; Charles Shepard, secretary—8.

could mean nothing else but complete ruin for thousands of retail establishments already sorely hurt by restrictions on the sale of commodities they retailed. It would be the last straw. Any government that would become responsible for ruination of Michigan's $400,000,000 resort industry, not to mention the same industry in other resort-catering states, would be very short-sighted, to say the least, unless it could prove that the direst circumstances made such action necessary. And in the instance of nation-wide gasoline rationing, many nationally prominent persons with facts to support their contentions, do not believe present conditions warrant it.

Mayor Robert Bridge is to be highly commended for his persistent and finally successful efforts to bring the Detroit Lions to Charlevoix to establish training quarters this summer. The publicity this city will receive on activities of these professional football players can be compared with that given league baseball clubs in winter training, and this in addition to the material benefit the city will derive. It was a nice bit of promotion, Bob, and herewith our congrats to you!

Why Editors Leave Town—

The newspaper article read: "Both girls riding in the car which overturned were injured. Miss ..... was cut about the face and hands and Miss ..... in the back seat."

Some girls proclaim their beauty from the hose tops.

One of the U. S. Engineering Department officials directing the pier repair project, told me they liked to come to Charlevoix because the residents here were so cooperative and friendly. He spoke particularly in praise of the action of city officials in allowing free parking and facilities of the tourist park to workmen living in trailers while employed on the project. Good will is a valuable asset mighty cheap to attain if gone after in the right manner.

Only recently I was told that men prefer blondes because where there is light there's bound to be heat.

Memorial Day will be the most significant this year in history. For years homage has been reverently paid to those who sacrificed their lives in past wars, but now we are in the midst of another struggle to preserve our democratic ideals. There are many who have and others who will make the supreme sacrifice for those of us at home. Let us not be lacking in our patriotism.

BOARD OF COMMERCE SEEKS DATA ON TOURIST ACCOMMODATIONS

The Charlevoix board of commerce is seeking up-to-date and complete data to supplement its present out-moded list of tourist accommodations.

On page 8 of this edition will be found a questionnaire which all persons with tourists accommodations such as rooms, cabins and hotels are asked to fill out and mail to the bord of commerce. Information requested is number of rooms, cabins or hotels and rates.

It is to the benefit of persons catering to the tourist trade to provide the information requested because during the coming season such data will be used as the basis of directing tourists upon requests for accommodations.

MEMORIAL FUND HAS AIDED MANY CASES

Committee's Report Shows Assistance To Needy Families

During the past winter, the Lenore Goldman Myer Fund has aided approximately 25 needy families in and about Charlevoix, according to report from the local committee which administers the fund.

Cases which do not qualify for county relief, or need assistance other than the help they receive from the county, have been aided. This year, the fund has contributed to furnishing milk to many children in the public school who have no money to purchase milk for their noon luaches.

Established in 1940 by the family of Mrs. Lenore Goldman Myer, the fund carries on the charitable work which Mrs. Myer did during her lifetime. The active work here is in charge of a committee composed of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ranger, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Meyer and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bridge.

The committee wishes to express appreciation to many friends who have contributed generously to the fund, and to those who have shown an interest in this work.

Also ordered to register on June 30 are men who reached their 20th birthday between Dec. 31, 1941, and June 30, 1942. These men would be subject to military service.

Approximately 40,000,000 men have registered in the four previous registrations. The registration next month is expected to add between two and three million persons to the lists.

LAKE CHARLEVOIX FLOODED ROAD OIL

Accident Sunday Caused Heavy Damage to Boats, Beaches

City officials are in a quandry, the public generally, sports fishermen and boat owners particularly are exceedingly wrathy, over the accidental discharge Sunday of approximately 1,000 gallons of tar and oil mixture used for road surfacing into Lake Charlevoix.

Somebody's failure to close an inside valve on a 10,000-gallon tank car from which the heated compound was being transferred to a tank truck at the Charlevoix Co-Ops. Co. rail siding for hauling to the Cook Contracting Co. macadam plant south of Ironton, caused the trouble. When Jim Willis, assisting the man in charge of heating, opened the outside valve to attach a hose, the mixture started escaping and continued to do so until he managed somehow to replace the cap. Flowing northward, the oil entered a manhole with outlet into a ditch emptying into Lake Charlevoix just south of the Ferry avenue bathing beach pier.

Fishing and pleasure boats running unaware into the oil as it spread over the lake's surface became coated with it, fish lines were soon an oily, sticky mess and the amount washed ashore on bathing beaches is unestimable both in quantity and the length of time it will take to remove or destroy it by whatever means such may be accomplished. By Monday evening the oily mess had spread over the entire west portion of Lake Charlevoix and, carried by wind and current was entering Round lake harbor.

Whether responsibility will be determined and an effort made to collect for public and personal property damage is not known.

FORMER MAYOR TAKEN BY DEATH

In 1920 Mr. and Mrs. See went to Warm Springs, Ore., where he had a general merchandise store. On their return to Charlevoix in 1925, he purchased the furniture business known as S. M. See & Sons, founded by his father, and operated that until 1934, when the store space was converted into the present postoffice. Mr. See retired at that time from active business life, serving only as landlord of apartments in the second floor of his building.

Mr. See was mayor of Charlevoix in 1933 and 1934. During his term, he was instrumental in securing the city airport, Lake Michigan bathhouse, and landscaping of tint beach, and city sewage disposal plant. Previous to that, he was alderman for many years.

He was the first president of the Charlevoix Sportsmen's club, founded in 1931. Fraternal affiliations included Masons, in which he held a life membership, Knights of Pythins, and Elks.

Surviving are a daughter, Wilma, at home; two brothers, Will H. See, of Portland, Ore., and Charles E. See, of The Dalles, Ore.; a sister, Mrs. Edward Chaloupka, of Cucamonga, Calif.

Funeral services were held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the See Funeral Home, with Rev. H. C. Ringenoldus officiating. Interment was at Brooksido cemetery.

Decreasa of $989.77 Made By Council; Lowered Valuatien Required Same 15 Mill Tax Rate

Adoption of the annual budget and setting of the tax rate for tbo July, or summer tax roll, constituted one of the major items of business transacted Monday night by tbe city council.

The budget, providing funds for departments and interest and sinking fund to retire bonded indebtedness, was set at $35,525.48. This sum is a reduction of $989.77 from a year ago when the figure was $36,515.25. To provide this amount, the council adopted a tax rate of 12 mills for general purposes and 3 mills for interest and sinking fund, the same ruta as a year ago.

Tbe 15 mill tax rate will be assessed against a real and personal property valuation of $2,368,365 as set by the board of reviaw last week. Tho valuation figure for 1042-43 repreeents a decroase of $66,085 from last year, thus accounting for the same mill tax to produce required revenue from a lower property valuation. The board of review iopped $10,845 off property valoation a year ago, providing a drop of $76,830 in two years.

Robert Emrey, city accountant, etated that unless unforesoen circumstances orise, the tax rote would next year be roduced to 14 mills duc to retirement of bended indebtedness during tha 1942-43 fiscal year.

Following are comparative budget figures for 1941-42 and 1942-43:

Calculation of the budget figure this yeor bas been made more accurate, it was explained, by an accounting system which charges expenditures directly agoinst the department benefitted. Details of the budget aro contained in an erdinance appearing on page 7.

MILKWEED FLOSS FOR WAR EFFORT

NAVY BACKS GINNING PLANT AT PETOSKEY

Look to Northern Michigan Farmers te Gather 1,000,000 Pounds for Use First Year

Northern Michigan farmers are now being convinced that the lowly milkweed need no lenger be looked upen as a farm pest.

When the announcement was first made that milkweed floss was one of the finest materials over discovered for life preservers, and that tha Navy Department had signified its intention of purchasing 1,000,000 pounds of it—nobody believed it.

Now with the location of a ginning plant to be set up in Petoskey in the near futura and with the capital all raised and with engineers inspecting buildings and purchasing the necessary machinery, there is no doubt of the sincerity of the Navy Department and the men behind the movement.

Dr. Boris Kerkman, who has spent nine years of intensive research werk en the milkweed floss, found that there was an abundance of the wild floss in Northern Michigan and spent many weeks each year visiting tha northern counties of this state making experiments. A few days ago an aggressive greup from Petoskey visited Dr. Berkman and his associates in Chicago where final arrangements were made for the establishment of northern Michigan's newest industry.

For the first year or two it will be necessary to pick tha wild peds and estimates are that 10,000,000 pounds of these peds will be needed for this fall's operation.

SHOT AT RANDOM

Canadian government officials accompany a cut in tourist gasoline rationing from 100 gallons to 20 gallons with a warning that vacationists who run out of gasoline while in that country are alone responsible. The 20-gallon supply is all that will be given for one year and if the tourist runs out of coupons he will be given no more and will have to arrange some other mathod of transporting his car back to the United States.

Northern Michigan could use a lot of boosters like Boyne City's John Olson. Whenever there's a chance to promote his home city's interests, John's right on the job. Ray Barnes' "Razzing the Rapids" featured John as one of the attendants at the spring meeting of the West Michigan Tourist & Resort Association last week at Muskegon and now he pops into the limelight with another typical display of community loyalty by shipping 1,000 Lake Charlevoix (or more exactly Smaltania) smelt for Michigan soldiers to eat in celebration of "Michigan Night" May 29th at Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

Wartime rationing has changed a lot of things for us, one of the most important happening to be that relatives dropping in for a visit these days can no longer expect to come empty-handed, because if they don't bring their own bag of sugar tha visit probably won't be very sweet. (And since the foregoing was conceived it was put into practice, because last week end two groups of relatives put in their appearance, both bringing their bags of sugar.) They must have read my thoughts from a distance.

It is kind of funny that ministers usually object to games of chance, when they spend so much time performing marriages.

While we may or may not ever have an air raid here, and you may or may not have bridge work or false food choppers, it might yet be well to remember that

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Back of the transportation tempest on the Michigan home front, centering on the prospect of a July 1 restriction on automobiles, looms this question:

When will the war end?

If we could peer into history and foresee the outcome of the Russian-German struggle on the Leningrad-Moscow-Karkov fronts, we might find the answer.

As it is, Michigan citizens are apprehensive that drastic restrictions on automobile transportation, if instituted July 1, will deprive our tourist industry of $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 income. To us, that is very important.

A high official at Washington remarked the other day that the proposed plan for national gasoline rationing to conserve rubber had been unduely agitated. He termed the general alarm "a lot of newspaper talk."

Newspapers print the news, whether it is good or bad.

And the truth is that newspapers recorded factually the utterances of government officials, some of whom sincerely believe that at the present rate of tire use there will be only 10,000,000 out of 30,000,000 automobiles on the road by the end of 1943—next year! If rubber conservation is achieved, either by volunteer methods such as the "Pontiac Plan" or by coupon rationing of gasoline, together with requisition of tires on old cars and with salvage of other rubber stocks, it would be possible—so the press has been told—to keep more automobiles going by December, 1943.

You probably remember the headlines in late April that Eastern motorists would be given a basic ration of two and one-half to five gallons a week. An OPA official made this announcement, and the press recorded it as news.

Harold Ickes, petroleum administrator, promptly said this amount was too low. Leon Henderson, OPA chief, was quoted as agreeing with Ickes. It was all a bit confusing.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Gladwin Beef Sale, Thursday, June 11th

Joe Leu, East Jordan, becomes the first Charlevoix county breeder to consign animals to the Gladwin beef sale on Thursday, June 11th, at the Gladwin fair grounds. The two animals are wonderfully grown out, of high type, and should be attractive to the buyers of pure-bred Herefords. Both are heifers and approximately two years of age.

This is the twelfth annual event and some 60 head of choice beef, Milking Shorthorns, Herefords, Beef Shorthorns, Aberdeen-Angus and Red Polls are offered for sale. Year by year, the sale attracts a larger attendance of livestock breeders. For anyone desiring good foundation animals, this is an excellent sale to attend. The sale begins at 12:30 p. m., so the entire trip could be made in one day very easily. If you have the opportunity, you will enjoy seeing the animals auctioned. You will be pleased with the quality offered.

Michigan Potato Growers Exchange Sponsoring Meeting

The Michigan Potato Growers Exchange is sponsoring a school of cooperation meeting at the Dilworth hotel, Boyne City, on Wednesday, June 10, at 6:30 p. m. A complimentary dinner is being given to the managers, directors and other individuals interested in the cooperative movement. It is expected that some 50 farm leaders will be in attendance.

C. L. Nash, specialist in economics, Michigan State college, will discuss "The Price Control Order and Cooperatives," as well as conduct a round-table discussion. Fred Hibst, manager, Cadillac Potato Exchange, will speak on "Truck Regulations as it Affects Cooperatives." Jack Yeager, Michigan State Farm Bureau, will discuss "Cooperatives and Labor Relations."

Certainly this meeting gives every promise of being both educational and instructive. Never before has any type of business been called upon to keep records and to furnish information as today. The main objective of these meetings are to convey to the cooperative organizations the restrictions on business. It is expected that the organization from some five counties will be represented in a real bang-up session.

Culling Repays Even In War Time

Culling of poultry flocks repays farmers even in war times and during periods of good prices for eggs, poultrymen at Michigan State college suggest.

In fact, it's considered patriotic to help provide a meat supply for the home folks or for retail sale and in addition conserve feed supplies on the farm.

One of the practical methods suggested at the college is to divide up young birds in a brooder house. If cockerels and pullets are mixed, the division can be made on the basis of sex. The cockerels can be retained in the brooder house to be kept confined and fattened. The pullets can go out on range with suitable shelter.

Pullets six weeks old usually can be put on summer range. With less competition for feed, the pullets will make better progress than if kept confined in an overcrowded brooder house. It is customary to start 300 to 350 chicks in a 10 by 12 brooder house. The cockerels alone can use this space while fattening.

Range conditions often turn cold and rainy. Demonstrations in the past two years at Michigan State college by J. A. Davidson indicate how wind penetration can be reduced in a cool period. Two-ply roofing was stretched around the walls to help keep the pullets comfortable in subnormal temperatures.

Another point in culling is the scientific proof that lazy birds consume nearly twice as much feed to produce a dozen eggs as the efficient pullets bred for high production. Hens laying from 110 to 120 eggs in a year ate more than 69 pounds of feed or more than 7 pounds of feed for a dozen eggs. Topnotch hens laying 260 to 270 eggs a year ate nearly 84 pounds of feed but laid a dozen eggs for every 3.7 pounds of feed.

Farm Truck Restrictions

Michigan's War Board has begun an educational plan to tell farmers details of the new federal restrictions on the use of trucks, according to D. H. Stark, extension specialist in livestock marketing at Michigan State College. A recent conference in Chicago, attended by Mr. Stark, indicated some of the situations which offer exemption to operators of farm trucks, especially in the hauling of produce or commodities from farm to farm.

Soys Need Corn Weather

Prospects for soybean crops in Michigan depend on whether a farm is situated to mature corn thoroughly for grain, explains C. R. Megee, of the Michigan State College farm crops department. A fertile well-drained loam grows the best soy crop. Land should be plowed early and worked carefully to kill weeds. Seed, like corn, ought to be in the ground before June 1 to mature beans before frost.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER I

"Lindy's in!"

Cruger, at his desk, heard that cry from a ground-worker passing the open window. He smiled as he looked up from his time sheet. There was always a note of triumph in the call of the port boys when Lindy came in.

Cruger got up from his chair and crossed to the doorway, where the sunlight fell flat against the river slope and proclaimed that spring had come again to the North Country. He stood there until he caught sight of his long-legged hush pilot swinging up from the landing dock.

Cruger went back in his desk and his figure-stippled time sheets as the long legs strode into what was overgenerously known as the Administration Building of Norland Airways. It was a piece of plain boards and tar paper, with only the two poles of its radio antennae to crown it with any passing sense of dignity.

Slade, when he stepped into the map-hung office, again made Cruger think of a panther, but this time it was a panther in a cage. He seemed too big for the room.

"I'm glad you swung back early," said Cruger. "And I want to tell you, first crack out of the box, that we're going to take the crepe off the door."

"What does that mean?" questioned Slade.

Cruger, instead of answering, took up an official-looking envelope.

"Before we begin," he casually observed, "you'd better give this the once-over." He surrendered the envelope. "You know what it is?"

"I've an idea," said Slade, after inspecting the insignia.

"You're a quick jumper, aren't you?" retorted Cruger, his eye on the weathered young face that held a touch of discontent somewhere.

Slade's smile was wide yet noncommittal.

"They yelp for flyers," he said, "and while they're yelping they turn me down." He got up from the safe and paced the narrow floor. "I must be had."

Cruger's shrug was a condoning one.

"I'd say it's because you're good," he parried. "Good enough to be needed right here on this northern run. And those tin hats happen to know you hold a key position."

Slade turned on him.

"Did anyone in this outfit broadcast that, just in block my enlistment?" was his indignant demand.

Again Cruger shrugged.

"Who are we to interfere with the War Office? It ought to be big enough to make its own decisions."

But Slade didn't seem to hear him.

"They hot-air about wanting men who're hard-trained and resourceful. Well, I ought to ring in on that. I've kept more than one lemon-crate up when every few of aeronautics said it ought to be down."

"You're resourceful, all right," conceded Cruger, "but you'd be in clink with a broken heart after two weeks of army rules."

"I'd learn," said Slade, "along with the other leathernecks."

"But they'd all move too slow for you," contended Cruger.

"That fight doesn't look slow to me. And I ought to be over there while the show's still on."

Cruger smiled the smile of a man with an extra shot in his locker. "There was a time," he observed, "when hush flying seemed in stack pretty high with you."

"But if you can't get a little excitement in your day's work," Slade was saying, "you may as well give up. And you said, two weeks ago, we'd have to."

"Before we go into that," retorted Cruger, "we ought to check up on the all-round dullness of this hush run of ours. I s'pose there was no excitement in that mercy flight of yours to Murray Bay when you picked up those two frozen huskies? Or in finding your Flying Padre when he was stymied on Lac de Gres last winter with a busted propeller and a factor's wife in labor and nerious with flu all at once?"

Slade had his own memories of that event. But his smile remained morose.

"She had her baby in the plane, four feet behind me high-tailing it for the Fort Smith hospital," he acknowledged. "The nose-over on the lake ice gave Doc Morlock a bad arm, so his girl Lynn had to get busy."

The softened note on the name did not escape Cruger. But he let Slade go on.

"She knew what was needed, all right. When we were swinging over Lesser Slava Lake I heard that baby give its first squawk."

"But you saved two lives, didn't you? I suppose there wasn't any excitement in that?"

The shrill of the desk 'phone cut off Slade's impending response. And while Cruger answered the 'phone the man in the flyer's jacket walked to the window and looked out. Beyond the rough-boarded hangar and the landing docks he could see the friendly cluster of planes on the Soye.

But what held his eye the longest was the smaller blue monoplane that looked faded and weathered and sadly the worse for wear. That, he knew, was the plane of the Flying Padre, the mercy-flighter and man of medicine who was sometimes known as the Grenfell of the Outer Gulf. And in it the Padre's daughter had gone along as pilot and helper. But never again, Slade remembered, would the clear-eyed Lynn Morlock take over the controls while her tired father held back the hand of Death two thousand feet above the Iske-spangled Barrens. That, he surmised, was already a thing of the past.

Cruger, as he hung up his receiver, caught the passing look of raptness in the Viking blue eye.

"It's just about as big a game, Lindy, as a man could get into," he said out of the silence. "It's still as good as dog-fighting Messerschmitts. And we're both going to stay in it."

Slade swung about and faced his partner.

"That wasn't the tune you were singing two weeks ago."

Cruger's laugh was slightly defiant.

"They had us backed against the wall two weeks ago. I told you our shoestring was wearing thin and we couldn't buck the big companies another month. But Norland Airways is going to stay on the map."

Slade's face lost its diffidence.

"What's changed the picture?"

Cruger's answer to that was not a direct one.

"We've both got all we own in this one-horse outfit and we can't afford to see it fold up. While you were out fighting head winds I've been in here doing a little fighting of my own. And I've just got my hands on a reconditioned Lockheed that'll give us a second air truck and release Abbott and his Postcraft for Winnipeg and Toronto passengar traffic. You'll like that Lockheed. They've slapped a fresh coat of aluminum paint on her."

"What'll she carry?" asked the flyer.

"A pay load of thirty thousand pounds a trip if she has to."

"Where'll you get your pay loads?" exacted Slade, remembering how war conditions had put a sag in sub-arctic mine work.

"I'm coming to that, stick-jiggler. The traffic's still there, if you're willing to go after it. And I've gone after it. I've under-bid the big outfits and corralled enough business to keep us busy till freeze-up. I've got Fort Norman oil and a new slice of the Yellowknife stuff for you. I've got a renewal of the Coppermine contract. And what's more, I've got a Santa Claus in spectacles who's handing over enough ready dough to keep our cash tank from running dry."

The Viking blue eye became more alert.

"Who's your Santa Claus?"

"He's a passenger," said Cruger, "you're going in fly into territory that'll make London look like a tea-room on a rainy afternoon.

Cruger sat back, apparently waiting for a question. But Slade, with his world to reorganize, merely walked to the window and looked out.

"You're flying," Cruger was saying, "into the Anawotto country."

Slade's turn, at that information, was quick.

"What nut's going into that wilderness?" he demanded.

"They go into some queer places, these days," observed the older man.

"But the Anawotto's as empty as Sahara. Why, the only human beings north of the Kasakana are two frost-bitten old quartz-pounders, two half-demented old derelicts who've been bushed for three years and would hump off if I didn't tote 'em in their flour and sowbelly."

"You're going well past the Kessakene this time," Cruger announced. "Into country you've never seen before."

"For what?" asked Slade.

Cruger took his time about answering.

"For swans' eggs, I understand."

Slade's sun-bleached brows came a little closer together.

"Just what does that mean?"

Again Cruger took his time.

"It means we've got a simple-minded naturalist out there, an ornithologist answering to the name of Frayne, who wants to be flown north so he can find the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. I never saw a trumpeter swan. Did you?"

Slade stood thoughtful a moment.

"Yes, I saw a trumpeter, only last spring. I played tag with him over Lac la Martre. He must have had a wing-stretch of nine or ten feet."

"I'd call that quite a stretch," said the man at the desk.

"You're telling me?"

"They may be impressive," said Cruger, as he opened a desk drawer, "but from what I can gather they're dying off. And this man Frayne wants to sleuth out their nesting quarters before they follow the dodo and disappear for good."

"And he's going in to the Anawotto alone?"

Slade's brow-pucker seemed one of incredulity.

"No, he's taking an over-sized blond named Karnell along with him."

"A blond?" croaked Slade. "You don't mean a skirt?"

"Anything but. This blond is all male. He's square-headed and gorilla-jawed and looks like something that's been worked on by a snarling iron."

Slade found the picture unpalatable.

"But who's your friend Frayne?" he persisted with a shrug of distaste. "Where does he come from? And why does he pick on us?"

"That's neither your problem nor mine. But he's the Norland's friend, all right. He may be a simple-minded crank. But he's so well heeled that money doesn't seem to mean much. And at this stage of the game we're going in handle a Christmas present like that with care."

Slade nodded his understanding.

"But he must have a screw loose somewhere," maintained the younger man, "or he wouldn't be headlog for what he's sure to get in that Anawotto country."

"You needn't lose sleep over that," contended Cruger. "He may be after birds' eggs, but he seems to have a working knowledge of subarctic conditions. I didn't find him much of a talker, but I stumbled on the fact he'd been trophy-hunting in the Himalayas last winter. And the winter before he hunted the snow leopard in Siberia and Tibet."

"Then I suppose he's English," said Slade. "One of those English big-game guys who go around with a monocle and a tin bathtub."

"He's got equipment, all right," conceded Cruger. "And he's paying us quite handsomely for flying it in."

"I'm glad you swung back early," said Cruger, "We're going to take the crepe off the door."

Meat has an advantage over any other food in that it furnishes a wide variety of cuts and at prices for every food budget.

MICHIGAN'S National BEER

RIGHT FROM THE CYPRESS CASKS OF GOEBE

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

WHEN you consider the new products we've seen developed in our time...you'd think that just about everything worth while in the world was invented in the last few years.

It's kind of refreshing, for a change, to find out that some pleasant things in our modern life date way back to ancient days.

• • •

For instance—I read the other day about a piece of pottery some scientists dug up in Mesopotamia. On the pottery was a picture of two brewery workers making beer.

That picture was 6,000 years old!

You know, that's something to think about. Beer...6,000 years ago! I wonder if it tasted anything like the good lager beer I have sent up to the house every now and then.

Somewhere else, I read that beer came over on the Mayflower—In fact, if I remember right, a shortage of beer was one of the reasons why the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock instead of somewhere else.

Interesting, isn't it, the way a simple, everyday beverage like beer can get tangled up with history!

Maybe it's because there's something fundamental and human about beer. It's the beverage of moderate, sensible, well-behaved people in every part of the world, and always has been.

• • •

Personally, I like it because it tastes so good and is so refreshing ... and I know I can trust it. And I get a thrill out of thinking that maybe some writer fellow back in ancient Egypt or ancient Mesopotamia, thousands of years ago, felt the same way about beer as I do.

It's a small world, after all ...

SIGN JUNE 18-19 CANNING SUGAR

The most important requirement to be remembered by registrants is to bring already allotted rationing cards, which provide identification and upon which the amount of sugar allowable per person and date to be released will be stamped. Other requirements include that a person be able to specify number of quarts of fruit canned in previous calendar year; number of quarts now in possession of individual or family; number of quarts to be canned during the period for which application is made; whether sugar is to be used for preserving; excess sugar supply as of the time of registration.

It is pointed out that it is extremely important that every person be registered individually or by a family member on June 18 or 19. Those who fail to do so will be unable to obtain canning sugar for at least two weeks after the registration period.

A questionnaire survey shows that although baked apples and apple pie are perennially popular, the favorite dish of the whole apple family is plain old-fashioned applesauce.

Information as to harvesting and marketing this year's crop will be discussed at a meeting of county agents and members of the AAA committee within the next week.

It is not at all impossible to expect that within a few years many farmers will make a comfortable living raising nothing at all but milkweed. At present time there are several interested men starting experimental plots, trying to learn how deep to plant the seed, what soils are best suited for it, and how much cultivation is necessary.

A feature of the crop which should appeal to any farmer is that once the fields are planted the weed yields for seven years before it dies and new seeds must be planted.

No northern Michigan capital has been put into the new business and when some of the men asked whether or not they could buy stock they were told that plenty of capital was already on hand for the first plant and no more was needed.

The Petoskey Chamber of Commerce has been working hand in hand with Dr. Borkmen for the past six months in an endeavor to bring the early development of the industry to northern Michigan. The floss content is only one of a hundred uses to which the weed can be put, future development after the actual cultivation is underway will bring to light its other uses for which basic patents have been obtained. The establishment of other plants utilizing the stalk, the actual pod and leaves can be established throughout the area.

For the present it is an opportunity for farmers to realize a cash return from what has been looked upon as a farm pest.

Swine production goal for 1942 for the United States has been raised to 83,000,000 head which is 4 per cent above the 79,300,000 which was the 1942 goal as of September 1941, which was 15 per cent above the 71,000,000 head in 1941.

MORE WORKERS IN DEMAND FOR AREA

EMPLOYMENT SERVICE NOW SEEKING REGISTRATIONS

Factory, Resort and Farm Labor Shortage Results from Demands for Military Service

The United States Employment Service office at Petoskey, handling employment for Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet and Otsego counties, is now receiving orders for help of various kinds from many employers and expects a labor shortage by midsummer. Although fewer people are registered at this office than at any previous time, there is a greater demand for labor than ever before.

Due to the fact that several hundred young men from this area have joined the military services, and many hundreds of other persons have left the area for war production employment, there is a shortage of labor on farms, in local factories, in hotels and restaurants, and in domestic employment.

Several farm openings exist and many more are expected. Young people may do agricultural work without working permits. The faculties of most high schools, veterans' auxiliaries and other civic organizations have registered men, women and children who are willing to assist with farm and cannery work during harvest periods.

As many outside students who usually work in hotels are employed this summer in war work, it is expected that some of these local registrants will be offered summer jobs in resort work and that others will be placed with retail stores and in domestic jobs.

Another of the functions of the employment service is the referral of young men between 17 and 24 years of age to NYA training projects for which there are several openings at present.

All persons seeking employment are urged to register at the field office at 215 Howard street, Petoskey, or to contact Harvard Smart, who maintains itinerant service at the city hall, Charlevoix, on every Tuesday, between the hours of 9:00 a. m. and noon.

LEGAL-SIZED BROOK TROUT ARE RELEASED

Shipment Received Friday from Federal Hatchery at Northville

Between 35 and 40 cans of legal-sized Colorado brook trout were released Friday afternoon in Horton creek and the Burns pond on McGeagh creek.

Widmyer, in charge of the Northville hatchery, had personal supervision of the shipment and planting was done by Roy Rangor, Arthur Ranger and Glenn S. See.

The Colorado brook trout are new to local waters, this being the first release. The fish, lighter in color than native trout, are close to the species prevalent here, however.

DELIVERY TRUCKS ON WAR-TIME BASIS NOW

Measure Aimed to Conserve Gasoline, Tires and Trucks

War-time regulations on deliveries went into effect Monday, cutting down the number of trips delivery trucks may make.

Washington newspapers carried department store advertisements announcing that only three deliveries a week would be made in the city and immediate suburban areas, while one delivery a week would be made to outlying communities.

Newspapers throughout the nation had the choice of cutting down the number of deliveries they make each day or curtailing the number of miles each truck is driven.

CHARLEVOIX PAID HOMAGE WAR DEAD

Impressive Memorial Day Services Conducted Saturday

Charlevoix's Memorial Day program, organized by Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226, American Legion, was carried out according to plan, in spite of rain and cold.

The parade, led by Floyd Black as marshal, marched from Park avenue to the top of Bridge street hill, turned west to State street and to the school gymnasium, where the program was held instead of at the cemetery. In the parade were color bearers, coast guards, school band, veterans' organizations, American Legion Auxiliary members, Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts, junior band, and school children in busses.

The program at the gymnasium was opened with playing of "Star Spangled Banner" by the school band; invocation, Rev. Leigh H. Hagle; address by Rev. W. L. Cruthers, chaplain of the state department, American Legion; sounding of taps; "America," by the school band; benediction by Rev. Hagle.

A memorial Mass was conducted by St. Mary's church at the Catholic cemetery at 8:30 a. m., the first such observance ever held here. High Mass was sung by the children's choir; L. W. Nicholson, bugler, sounded taps; "Star-Spangled Bonner" was played on a small organ; and Fr. John W. Collins spoke, urging remembrance of those who gave their lives for their country, not on just one day of the year, but every day.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Service School Vacancies

As mentioned in my column last week, the 11th Congressional District has two vacancies in the Naval Academy at Annapolis to be filled, if possible, before July 1st. One being caused by the resignation of a midshipman early this April and the other being due to the failure of my this year's appointees to pass their examinations for admittance. It is impossible at this late date to take new mental examinations, but I shall welcome applications from young men in our district who believe they can qualify by the submission of college certificates.

When the bill I mentioned last week, authorizing an additional appointment for each congressional district to the Military Academy is finally passed and signed, I shall likewise have another appointment to West Point. I doubt this appointment will be available for the class which enters July 1st, but due to the war conditions, it is probable that some time will be given for taking entrance examinations before the boys enter and it will then probably be necessary for them to catch up with their classmates who will enter July 1st. I will be permitted to appoint either a previously qualified young man or to name a principal and two alternates who would be able to qualify for entrance either by writing the regular entrance examinations or by the submission of the necessary college credits. May I urge interested young men in our district to submit their applications immediately for consideration along with others I already have on file.

Gasoline Rationing and Tire Conservation

Gasoline rationing was adopted in the Eastern states May 15th. This was instituted because of the shortage of gasoline in the East due to a shortage in gasoline transportation facilities. We are given to understand that nationwide rationing may be undertaken before the summer is well underway, as a measure to prevent a severe tire famine. Let me point out to you the need for such rubber conservation.

The United States is the most fortunate of all nations. Our abundant natural resources have made us almost 100 per cent self-sufficient. However, for our supplies of tin, silk, manganese, tungsten and rubber we still depend to a large extent upon foreign sources. The most important of these is rubber. Ninety-seven per cent of our supply, prior to the war, came from the East Indies. In 1940 our country used 648,000 tons and in 1941, even with the use of rubber in manufacturing restricted throughout the last half of the year, we consumed 766,000 tons. Ships, planes, tanks, trucks, trains, every type of mechanized war equipment need rubber vitally. With our import supply cut off, we have to look toward our reserve stock of crude rubber (which totalled 510,000 tons on December 7th), imports from South America (which totalled 7,650 tons in 1941) and synthetic rubber (12,000 tons last year) to supply our ever increasing military and naval forces, our 29,000,000 automobiles, our 5,000,000 trucks, our factories, homes and hospitals. The sources of natural rubber still are available to us, however, are inadequate and will take long years to develop into large-scale production. Synthetic rubber, made from petroleum, natural gas and agricultural products, will need supply the greater proportion of our requirements in the future.

In 1940, when it was foreseen by many military and industrial experts that a war in the Pacific seemed imminent, the advisory commission on national defense, and committees of congress studying this problem, attempted to secure presidential approval of an appropriation sufficiently large to permit the government's financing the construction of plants for large-scale synthetic rubber production. However, the recommended appropriation was cut to the minimum, and it was not until January 12, 1942 that our government announced an increase in the program for large-scale synthetic rubber production. Four hundred million dollars was allocated for plants with a yearly capacity of 400,000 tons. Since then our goal has been increased to 700,000 tons. But it will take time—precious time—to reach that goal. On March 5, 1942, a government estimate determined that with a 25 per cent reduction in previously estimated needs, total stocks of rubber for the United Nations at the beginning of 1943 would be 496,000 tons.

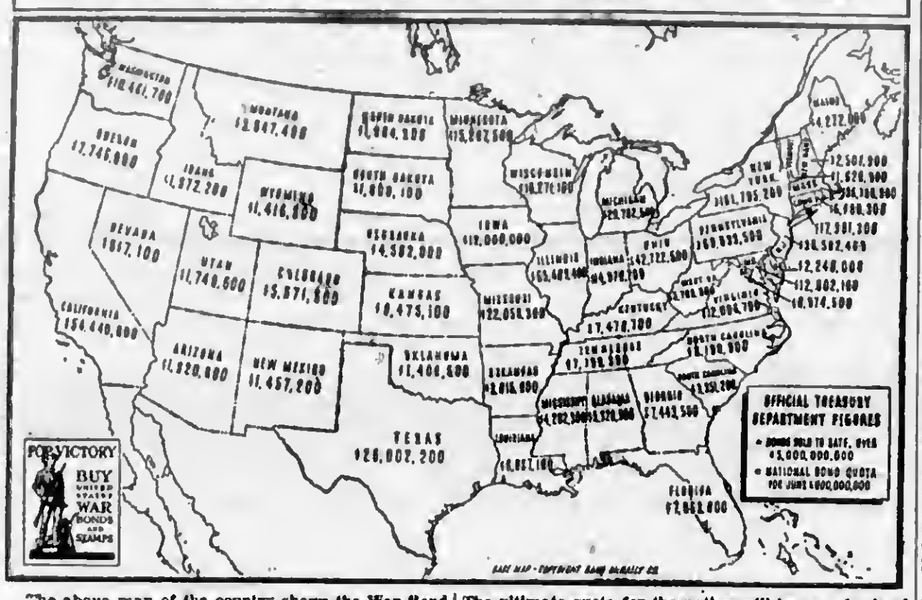
Official U. S. Treasury War Bond Quotas for June



The above map of the country shows the War Bond Quota by states for the month of June totalling $4000,000,000. Everybody every pay day is expected to invest at least ten per cent of his income in War Bonds to aid in financing America's offensive against the Axis powers.

The ultimate quota for the nation will be on a basis of one billion dollars per month effective in July. This sum is necessary to provide for all-out production of planes, guns, ships and munitions adequate to arm our fighting men with the tools necessary to win the war.

Do You Remember?

AT THE MOVIES

"The Courtship of Andy Hardy"

Andy Hardy's modernistic lingo is contagious. It has even spread to Judge Hardy!

In "The Courtship of Andy Hardy," latest picture in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer series opening June 10 at the Palace Theater, many salty slang phrases are used by Lewis Stone, in his role as the Judge.

George B. Seitz directed the new picture, which reunites Cecilia Parker, as sister Marian, with the family, including Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford and Sara Haden. A newcomer is William Lundigan, new leading man discovery. Others in the cast include Frieda Inescort, Harvey Stephens, George Breakston, Tod Karns, Betty Welles and Steve Cornell.

"The Remarkable Andrew"

A delightful and highly original comedy about a group of historical characters who come back out of the past just to save a small-town young man from going to jail unjustly and his romance from going on the rocks, reached the screen of the Palace Theater June 9-10.

It's Paramount's "The Remarkable Andrew," starring Brian Donlevy, William Holden and Ellen Drew, a fresh idea in film stories.

"The Remarkable Andrew" is a completely diverting comedy, told with appeal and charm, entertaining throughout. Special commendation must go to the three stars, Donlevy, Holden and Ellen Drew, for unusually deft performances, and to the rest of the cast, which includes Montagu Love, Porter Hall, Richard Webb, Rod Cameron and Frances Gifford.

"No Hands on the Clock" Is Gay Mystery-Comedy Film

There's a killer-diller of a thriller coming June 11-12 at the Palace Theater. It's Paramount's "No Hands on the Clock." Someone asks, at the beginning of the picture why there are no hands on the clock. Because, one of the cast explains, "death is timeless."

After that little explanation, things get going. They're exciting things, and, in spite of the ominous title, hilarious things. The story tells of the efforts of a private detective to locate a kidnapped man. The detective is played by Chester Morris and aiding and abetting him are Jean Parker, Rose Hobart, Dick Purcell, Astrid Allwyn, Rod Cameron and James Kirkwood.

FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

Early June is generally about the time for planting warm season crops in the north, including melons, squash, peppers and egg plants and so forth. It is also time to make second plantings of some things. For good nutrition, the leafy green vegetables such as lettuce and spinach should be so rotated that they keep coming all the time.

Snap beans can be kept coming all summer with successive plantings of bush varieties or by the use of long yielding pole varieties.

Late May and June are about right for planting late fall cabbage and potatoes.

Watering the Garden

Water is widely used in vegetable gardens and well used, too. To get out with a sprinkler hose, however, and squirt away for a while every evening is a waste of water and time. Better far to leave off the nozzle and use a rotary sprinkler that can be left in one place until the soil is thoroughly wet. Another good method of watering the garden is to let the water run gently between the rows, watering thoroughly each time and doing it about once a week.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

An agricultural force of 12,000,000—

A war factory force of 20,000,000—

A fighting force of at least 8,000,000 soldiers and sailors.

This is the immediate program for mobilization of our manpower, a mobilization which must be complete to win this war.

Michigan must give her share, a share which will be large because of her great industrial plants, her vast farm lands and her wealth of brave young men of military age.

Unity, Sacrifice, Action

We are fighting a four-sided war—war on the field of arms, war under the factory roofs, war on the rolling farms, war on the Home Front. If any one of these armies fails, all may fail.

The War Manpower Commission has taken over the huge job of filling the ranks of these armies—from suspended civilian industries, from the professions, from the temporary unemployed, from the homes.

The cook or clerk with mechanical skill, retired workers, women without children, boys under draft age and girls in their teens will hear the call to arms—to fill a place on farm or in factory, where they better can help win the war.

If you haven't found your place in this program, get in touch with the nearest office of the U. S. Employment Service—there's one in almost every community—and see if they have a war job for which you are fitted.

If you have the aptitude but lack the necessary training, there are many methods which may provide you this training.

The first rule of total war is not to waste manpower.

There's a Job to be Done

America is ready for this complete mobilization. America is ready for whatever action is necessary to bring us victory over enemies who would destroy our nation, our freedom and our way of living.

We're really getting tough these days. We are learning to take it and because we are learning to take it, we will be able to dish it out.

We're dishing out the tanks and planes and ships and guns to lick Hitler and Hirohito. We can dish out the manpower, too, even though it may mean leaving our present jobs, comfort or homes to perform more essential chores.

Home Frontiers today are taking in stride developments which might have thrown many of us off balance a few months ago. We are like the Army recruit, whose training takes off fat, puts on muscle and sinew. The barrack bag, which dragged along the ground at first, now is hoisted shoulder high in one quick, easy movement.

The bag is heavier than before. We are stronger.

We're All at War

America is toughening up..... Two-thirds of the nation already is, or soon will be, under federal rent control.....Saving of tin cans for salvage is restricted to certain areas where reclaiming of the metal is practical.....But now that school soon will be out, millions of boys and girls may join the salvage program and collect rubber, old rags and scrapt metal .....We still can scrap the Jap with scrap.....and Hitler, too..... Goose and duck feathers over a certain length have been released for civilian use in pillows and upholstery.....There are plenty of ways to spend a pleasant weekend without the family car.....If 30 American families pass up their Sunday afternoon auto rides, they will save enough gasoline to keep a bomber in the air a full hour .....and save tires, too.....The need for stenographers in war offices, particularly in Washington, but in other cities, also, is very great.....Apply to your nearest Civil Service Commission.....Your postoffice can tell you where it is.

Help Uncle Sam kick the Jap in the Tokyo!

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

A Triple-A war production check-up meeting was held at the Hotel Dilworth on Thursday, May 28, attended by all county and community AAA committeemen and their wives. The meeting, presided over by the chairman, Walter H. Henley, emphasized the duties of all farmers and farm women in the war production farm program. Of special interest was a letter from Maurice A. Doan, state War-Board chairman, read by Mr. Henley, on the necessity of constant extra effort to meet the goals set earlier in the year. The women's place in the war production program was very interestingly presented by the county farmer fieldwoman, Mrs. Countis Mascho. The President's new seven point program was explained by our county agent, B. C. Mellencamp. A comparison between American farming and soil conservation methods as practiced in Germany were given by Carl Prohaska, Bay township chairman. A similar comparison of Ukranian farming was covered by Peter Dobiniak, chairman of Hudson township. Following dinner served at the hotel, motion pictures consisting of a defense review were shown through the courtesy of Harold S. Lees, REA manager, and were greatly enjoyed. A general discussion of war production check-up problems occupied the balance of the afternoon for the committeemen. Meanwhile the AAA fieldwoman, Mrs. Mascho, held a discussion meeting with the ladies present. Topics relating to the farm women's part in the war program were considered and discussed. Mrs. Leanore Dicken, Farm Security representative, also assisted with the ladies' afternoon meeting.

The results of the AAA letter writing contest, conducted by Mrs. Countis Mascho, farmer fieldwoman, in the rural schools of Charlevoix county were broadcast over WTCM, Wednesday, May 27. The letters chosen to be read on this program were those submitted by the following rural school pupils: Janet Fraley and Silvia Wellcome of Maple Lawn Unit school, Chandler township; Joy Vanzant, Dorothy Nixon and Mary Lou Black of Marion Center school, Marion township. We desire to thank the children who wrote letters and also the teachers for their cooperation in this AAA letter writing contest.

It is expected that similar contest work may be carried on in the schools next fall. In the meantime, we are hoping that each one planning a Victory garden and those helping in the production of "Food for Freedom" will enjoy a successful summer.

The annual banquet usually attended by more than 500, is scheduled for Wednesday evening, June 10. J. C. Cash, vice president of the Kansas City Stock Yards, is to be the banquet speaker. George A. Brown, head of the Michigan State College animal husbandry department, is to be toastmaster.

LANSING LETTER

When rationing did come and motorists were given three gallons a week for "pleasure driving," Congress was besieged with protests. The X-ration cards didn't help any either.

Ten Michigan congressmen asked Henderson to forego proposed nation-wide rationing starting on July 1, terming the plan "unjustified, unwarranted, and unwise."

A quotation: "There is no shortage of gasoline or gasoline delivery equipment in Michigan which is a large producer.....For the purpose of conservation of rubber we suggest rational and consistent request for lower speed limits with, if necessary, on overall mileage limitation for the use of automotive transportation consistent with geographical conditions and public transportation facilities available in each section."

In other words, volunteer conservation of rubber tires and local mileage limitation rather than enforced coupon rationing of the OPA.

Does volunteer conservation really work?

Use of gasoline in the Midwest for civilian purposes during April indicated a 20 per cent reduction of automobile mileage compared with April, 1941. May mileage is expected to decline 25 per cent.

The Pontiac plan for staggering work-shopping hours and sharing transportation reduced Pontiac traffic 10 per cent and increased the load of private automobiles from 1.3 to between 1.8 and 1.9 persons, as compared with a goal of 3.5 persons.

The OPA viewpoint apparently is that voluntary methods cannot accomplish the objective; that enforced rationing of gasoline is the only practical method for effective immediate rubber conservation. President Roosevelt hopes that synthatic tires may be produced in sufficient quantity to save us from transportation paralysis—but it is only a hope.

Since transportation rationing is linked inexorably to the European and Far East military fronts, what are the prospects for an early victory?

Well, what do you mean by "victory"?

If the Russians can defeat the Reich in 1942 with the aid of supplies from the Allied Nations and perhaps a second military front either in the air or land, a German internal collapse is remotely possible next winter or next spring.

Military authorities seem to agree that the war outcome will hinge on what happens in 1942, that Germans are staking everything this year, that we (Americans) must gamble also on an immediate all-out effort to "win" the war, despite our relative unpreparedness at this moment to do it.

In the Far East we have lost Manila, Singapore and Burma. China and Australia are pleading for planes which they probably will not get.

Even if Hitler can be defeated in eight months, the Pacific front is 5,000 to 10,000 miles away. That means three to five round-trips a year for transporting men, equipment and supplies from the United States, even AFTER the European war is all over.

American war production will not be felt in tremendous force until 1943. We in Michigan are not blind. Our armed manpower will approximate 4,200,000 by December, 1942.

These ABC factors prompted Charles F. Kettering, chief of research of the General Motors corporation, to forecast Allied victory by 1944 through an invasion of Europe. Defeat of Japan would be the next objective. And then, with the war won all fronts, the Allied Nations would police the world during the armistice or "cooling off" period prior to the treaty, and then during the peace itself.

Does it not seem logical to conclude that many Michigan boys will not return home for many months to come, that conservation of rubber tires will be, long before final victory is achieved, an accomplished aim on our home front?

If the Germans triumph in Russia, seize the Suez or take over the French fleet, the Michigan transportation problem would be very insignificant, wouldn't it? And so would everything else, for that matter. Never in history has the fate of free peoples hinged on the outcome of events so world-wide in their cataclysmic effect.

VICTORY GARDENS

Michigan Council of Defense

Original estimates of 100,000 Victory gardens in Michigan will have to be revised, it appears. A check-up shows that Upper Peninsula counties alone will have 25,000 gardens registered. Things are sprouting, around Victory garden committees!

Thin 'Em Out

Most vegetables should be thinned out, for better growth, and it's wise to do the thinning in the early stages of their life. If they are not thinned before they have attaind some size the growth of those that remain will be checked, even if you do get around to thinning a little later on.

Carrots and beets are exceptions and may be thinned when they are large enough to use. Bush lima beans will never develop properly if crowded. A foot and a half or two feet should he given each plant for best results. Bush beans, green pod and wax, should have three to four inches. Peas should be thinned so they will have plenty of room to grow.

Radishes and beets are usually thinned by using them. Beet tops with the tiny roots just beginning to form are a highly nutritive delicacy—and that's a trade secret.

Turnips should be thinned before they begin to form. They do not grow well if crowded. Thin 'em out to stand four inches apart.

Salsify, parsnips and chicory, which are to remain in the ground all season, should be thinned early to three or four inches apart.

Leaf lettuce should be thinned when growth begins to about one inch between plants. When the lettuce starts to develop, alternate plants should be pulled—and that is a simple way to thin lettuce.

Garden Calendar—June 1-15

1. Sow beens, lima beans, pole beans, corn, squash, cucumbers, melons, okra and spinach.
2. Harden-off (toughen up to outdoor weather) egg plants and peppers.
3. Transplant tomatoes.
4. Thin out the April-sown vegetables.
5. Continue to sow the short crop vegetables, such as lettuce, carrots, radishes and peas.
6. Plant potatoes.
7. Feed lettuce and leaf crops with nitrate of soda (1 oz. to 2 gal. of water).
8. Cultivate garden.
9. Stake tomatoes.
10. Sow annuals for mid-July flowers.

Easy-to-Grow Annuals

Some flowers are difficult to grow; others practically take care of themselves. Here are some annuals which can be sown in your back yard this month and which will bear flowers by mid-July: Zinnias, ageratum, alyssum, candytuft, centaureas, clerkia, cynoglossum, annual sunflowers, morning glories, annual pinks, leptosyne, linaria, marigolds, and poppies. We might name several more but some of 'em might give the amateur gardener a bit of difficulty.

Annuals grow much faster in warm weather and their flowers are finest in the last half of the season, usually improving until frost arrives.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

The township AAA war boards have completed a canvass of their respective territories in taking pledges or the purchase of war savings bonds and stamps. The response met by most of those doing the work was very encouraging. The farmers realize the gravity of the war situation and are patriotically willing to help share the financial cost.

A war production AAA check-up meeting will be held at the Dilworth Hotel on May 28, for all committeemen and their wives. The morning session will be for a general discussion of the war production program. A feature of the morning program will be addresses by Secretary of Agriculture, Claudo Wickard and Director of the North Central Region, Harry Schooler that will be broadcast over a nation-wide hookup at 12:30 E.S.T. These addresses are directed to committeemen in all states of the North Central Region where similar meetings are being held in every county. Following the dinner at the hotel, motion pictures will be shown through the courtesy of Harold S. Lees, REA manager. The ladies will reassemble in the afternoon under the leadership of Mrs. Countis Mascho, county farmer fieldwoman, for a general discussion on the farm woman's share in the war production program. The committeemen headed by Walter H. Heniey, chairman, will hold a separate session concerning their duties on a war production check-up.

The state AAA committee has established the final date for considering requests for new wheat allotments as June 5, 1942.

Michigan dentists caution that either should be removed when the bombs start falling. They say small removable bridges might be swallowed because of vacuum created by a bomb explosion and that large ones might hop you if you're hit on the head.

I confess that I heard the high school glee club for the first time at the baccalaureate exercises last Sunday night and to say "They were swell," sums up my appreciation in a few words.

Missionary: "Poor man! So you know nothing about religion."
Cannibal: "Oh, yes. We got a taste of it when the last missionary was here."

There's no place left on this earth at this time where a man can go and get away from it all.

If anyone is considering taking an early swim they might ask Mayor Bob Bridge how the water is, for he should know following Sunday's unexpected ducking in Round lake harbor when his sailboat overturned.

Despite the opinion of old-timers that a few days of warm weather would bring more steelhead to the surface and thus improve fishing, these fighting "fresh water tarpon" are being taken consistently from Lake Charlevoix. While tourist patronage was lighter than past years and adverse weather kept many inside, most parties venturing out over the Memorial day week end took fish. Numerous fine catches of perch were reported and, strange as it may seem for this season of year, smelt were caught in large numbers from Round lake by perch fishermen. Rainy and cold weather put the damper on ambitions of most brook trout fishermen, however.

We are living in times that will be exciting history for a thousand years. Almost daily maps are changed, rulers fall, and liberty is threatened or destroyed. No man can say what tomorrow will bring. "Nothing is permanent but change" has today, more than ever, a tremendous significance. Even the past seems to have no security.

And in closing—Nobody's so old and cynical but that he wants to live to see how this current unpleasantness turns out.

RECLASSIFY FIRST TWO REGISTRATIONS

Increased Demand for Men and Lowered Requirements, Reasons

Review of all classifications under the first and second registrations for selective military service will be started at once by the county draft board on orders from the federal government.

As a result of this order, together with call for a second draft quota of 10 men for June 10, and tentative quota of 74 men for July, heavy drawing from men deferred in the first and second registrations for reasons of minor physical ailments and dependencies, is anticipated.

Physical requirements have been lowered and requirements for dependency have been tightened greatly since war was declared, with the result many men deferred for these two reasons will be called into service in subsequent months. At the present time, practically 75% of men registered are listed in the classifications to be reviewed.

It is also believed many men deferred because of dependencies will be reclassified and drawn for non-military service in defense industries as a means of releasing from these industries for military service men without dependents.

KIWANIS NOTES

Tuesday, June 2

Dr. J. T. Jerome, of Traverse City, gave an inspiring and instructive address on the kind of treatment available for those stricken with infantile paralysis. The splendid, humane work of the modern physician and surgeon performs miracles.

Pictures based on actual cases amplified Dr. Jerome's remarks in considerable detail.

Kiwanis Lieut.-Governor Charley Bye, of Sault Ste. Marie, presented four service men of Fort Brady. The quartet was introduced as the "Singing Strings." Songs such as "Madelaine," "Play Fiddle Play," and "A Sailboat in the Moonlight" hit the musical high pots. Special instrumental arrangements interspersed the songs.

Among the guests were Messdsmes Jerome, Loomis, Meyer, McMillan, Ranger, Block, North, Bingham, Miss Ellen Koskela, Lieutenant Charles Levinson, Glen Loomis, Arthur Ranger and Ray Burr.

Names of the four service men were: Sergeant Norman Frohman, Bernie Campbell, Roy Kanold and Johnny Krecher. Roy Kanold had sung with the Chicago Grand Opera, Johnny Krecher had been in vaudeville, Bernie Campbell's piano playing showed much experience, and Sgt. Norman Frohman was talented in the playing of several musical instruments.

POST-WAR JEEPS MAY BE PUT TO FARM USE

Experiments Reveal They Are Practically to Supplant Tractor

Michigan farms may soak up some of the flood of United States army jeeps after the war is over and before tractor production gains volume.

Federal engineers recently borrowed two of the quarter-ton cars and tested them out on some farm jobs such as plowing and harrowing. Bottom land was plowed seven inches deep at nearly four miles an hour. One 16-inch plow was attached. The army car burned 2.3 gallons of gasoline in plowing an acre of land.

The jeeps probably could perform farm jobs as capably as Michigan's famed doodlebugs which were converted from discarded autos, says O. E. Robey, agricultural engineer at Michigan State College. The jeeps are made for tough service and likely wouldn't have as many breakdowns as many of these converted doodlebugs.

Too low and too narrow for cultivating row crops, the engineers decided after making tests with the army jeeps.

Another complication indicated the military machine would work better on the farm if a slightly lower gear ratio could be installed and a lower hitch put on for plowing.

In comparison with the usual one or two-plow small farm tractors, the jeeps developed from one to three horsepower less on the drawbar, pulled about two-thirds as much and turned out about a third less horsepower hours for fuel used.

The 60 horsepower engine on the jeep can be made to drive through all four wheels and will exert as much as a 1,300 pound pull with almost no wheel slippage. The car equipped for army use has six speeds forward and two reverse.

LOAN ASSN. MEETING HERE JUNE 11

Election of Director and Annual Reports of County Farm Loan Asso. Will Be Given

On Thursday, June 11th, at 8 o'clock p. m., members of the Charlevoix County National Farm Loan Association will hold their annual stockholders' meeting at the city hall in Charlevoix.

This association was granted its charter on August 8, 1917, authorizing it to provide long term credit to farmers of the western part of Charlevoix county through the facilities of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul. It has grown to the extent that at the present time 100 farmers in his area have availed themselves of this service.

Each year the attendance at the annual meeting increases and it is expected that this year will be no exception.

The secretary-treasurer, H. C. Bedell, will present a report on the income and financial position of the association. This year, a copy of the report will be distributed to all members.

A director will be chosen at this meeting to succeed Clinton S. Blanchard, of Charlevoix, whose term expires this year.

Lee Sneathen, president of the association, will present a report on behalf of the board of directors, giving the number of meetings attended by each director, a picture of the matters presented and considered at board meetings and the general expense to the association.

In addition to the regular business meeting, the evening's program will include a discussion by B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent, on the timely subject, "President Roosevelt's Seven Point Policy for Farmers." Walter Henley, county chairman of the Agricultural Conservation Association, will discuss new developments in the AAA program for 1942.

BAR MINORS UNDER 17 FROM LIQUOR PLACES

New Ruling Made by Atty. General Herbert J. Rushton

Minors under 17 cannot be permitted in places where intoxicating liquors are sold even though they may be accompanied by their parents, Attorney General Herbert J. Rushton has ruled.

Writing the opinion for Kenneth W. Huggett, prosecuting attorney of Hillsdale county, Rushton said that persons under 17 "cannot be permitted to remain in saloons, barrooms or similar places where intoxicating liquors are sold, whether such minors are or are not accompanied by their parents."

In another opinion Rushton held that liquor licenses must be approved by the township board where the board is the local legislative body.

"The township board has the discretionary power to act officially according to what appears to be just and proper under the circumstances and such action is not subject to review by a court," Rushton held.

CANCEL STATE FAIR BECAUSE WAR NEEDS

Cooperation With County Fairs Is Planned This Year, However

With definite cancellation of the Michigan State fair because the army needs the use of the extensive grounds in Detroit, arrangements are rapidly going forward for staging the state fair livestock exhibits at 17 Michigan county fairs, while the annual state 4-H show is to be held at Michigan State college in East Lansing.

Approximately $28,500 in premium money is to be offered the state fair exhibits at the county fairs and an additional $05,000 will go to the 4-H show, the total of $35,000 representing an appropriation made by the legislature and administered by the state fair board of managers. The amount is 60 per cent of the premiums offered at the state fair in the livestock classes, the remaining 40 per cent having been made up from fair revenues, which will not be available this year.

The plan to distribute the state fair money at the county fairs was suggested by Leo V. Card, state commissioner of agriculture, when it became definite there would be no state exposition. So far as was possible, the livestock exhibits were allocated to the county fairs in accordance with the predominant breeds in their respective areas. The law provides that premium money be awarded to Michigan exhibits only.

Fairs participating in the melon include Northville, Charlotte, Jackson, Traverse City, Ionia, Ann Arbor, Marshall, Adrian, Ithaca, Mason, Caro, Hastings, Hartford, Centerville, Marne, Corunna and Hillsdale. It will be the first time in history that state fair exhibits will be seen at county fairs and state fair premium money distributed at the county shows.

DRAFT DELINQUENT TAKEN AT CADILLAC

Albert Allen, of Bay Shore, Apprehended by F.B.I. Agents

County draft board officials stated today that Federal Bureau of Investigation agents have apprehended Albert Allen, of Bay Shore, recently reported for draft delinquency since January, 1941.

Allen was found at Cadillac. He will be taken before a United States prosecutor in Grand Rapids for determination of guilt as charged.

MENDING SPREES AID FARM MORALE

Keeping up morale at home is a strict "must" in war time. Home economics extension workers at Michigan State College are showing the value of training in rural home projects.

Fixing up worn furniture, either by a complete job of reupholstering or occasionally just a tying of springs is the tonic needed to make cushions ride an even keel once more. Slip covers add beauty and interest to a room and when well made may transform a drab victorian into a glamorous furniture piece with 1942 written all over it.

Under the direction of specialists Ruth Peck and Jessie Marion at the college, home agents are helping extension members to put new beauty in their homes—and being patriotic too since the repairs cost little.

"Make good use of what you have," says Miss Peck. "There is too much furniture rather than too little in many homes, both for comfortable living and convenience in cleaning or moving about."

A series of meetings were held recently in Wayne county rural homes called, "Bring Your Home Up-to-Date." In some homes all the living room furniture was placed in the center of the room before the group arrived. The radio was placed with a convenient chair nearby, there was a place for the children's toys, books and games, mother's sewing box was placed near a good light. A "junk pile" or the discards cause much good natured merriment as the pile of knick-knacks, dust catchers, souvenirs and other relics were banished from the new arrangements.

As a test of their knowledge of what is good design in a real home, these women declared it taught them much they never knew before.

Slip covers trimly tailored from cotton—preshrunk of course—cost as low as $2.72 for a chair or an average of $8.00 each according to thrifty members in Washtenaw county. At least 25 homes have completed slip covers with more yet to be done.

Induction Procedura Changes Jene 15 to Previde Automatic Two-Week Furloegh

Those certified are: Kenneth Dyer, Theodore Kotowich and Francis Nachazel, of East Jordan; Hugh Kurtz, of Boyne City; Newton Coon, of Clarion. The three volunteers are Edward Jubenville and Charles Duley, of Boyne City; Clark Jenkins, of Boyne Falls.

Under a new Selective Service Boerd revision of procedure of induction, effective June 15, a plan providing more convenience for inductees and thoee participating in patriotic "send-offs" has been edopted.

ANNUAL ACHIEVEMENT EVENT SET

PROGRAM AT EAST JORDAN CITY PARK JUNE 18

Completion of Extension Projects by 200 Women to Be Marked by Evening of Activity

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

Over 200 Charlevoix county women, who last winter participated in extension projects, are making plans for their big Achievement Day program to be held at the East Jordan tourist park beginning promptly at 7:00 o'clock Thursday evening, June 18. A big community pot-luck supper will open the event. Due to the world conditions it was decided that an evening program would be most desirable so the entire family could attend.

The activity will start in the neighborhood of 8:30 with recreational features. At 9:00 a program will be given inside the new building and will include special numbers, talks, and moving pictures. Miss Ruth Peck, who has led the groups in their extension projects, will give a report on the results and accomplishments in the last project on "Home Furnishing." Miss Roberta Hershey, specialist in nutrition, will present a short talk on nutrition. Miss Hershey at one time was the leader in this county and she is well known to a large number of extension folks.

Following this a moving picture program will be presented which will feature the film "London Air Raids." While a few people have seen this film, fully 95% of the folks in the county have not had the opportunity. This film is loaned by the state police and will do more than anything else to show us what air-raids might mean. In other words any person seeing this film will be more than anxious to cooperate with all defense efforts that are being carried on in the county.

Kindly remember that this program is for the entire public and the extension ladies who have completed this project in home furnishing will be delighted to have you as their guests. The tourist park has wonderful facilities. Don't come alone; make plans with your neighbors to eat together. Bring the entire family as we have purposely eliminated the day program so that all members of the family can be there at 7:00 p. m.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

If you like your home town, say so to everybody, friend and stranger. Thus you spread faith in your home community and give people confidence in its future.

At the moment I can't think of a classification of humanity low enough in which to include the culprits who stole flags placed on veterans' graves in Southern and Bay View cemeteries near Central Lake.

These are critical times. The fundamental pattern of our social, political and economic lives hangs in the balance. That balance centers at Washington, D. C., our national capitol, and rests upon the legislators we, as voters, send there. The need for able and honest and forthright public officials never was greater for our collective security than today. Thus it is up to us to retain the good and weed out the bad. It is a time when recognition of ability should overshadow political belief and, despite the fact this publication has been traditionally Republican and the official we are putting in a plug for is a Democrat, we urge support of Prentiss M. Brown for re-election to the United States Senate. We will confess, too, that this stand is not original with us, for many Michigan publishers who for most of their editorial careers have supported the Republican party in national affairs, this year propose to hurdle the barrier and support the man instead of the party.

Inasmuch as Father's Day isn't quite so old an institution as Mother's Day (and also the fact that I'm a father) am dropping this reminder to give the Old Man a break.

The January 23, 1938, issue of the Sunday School Guide contained the following article: "What a Howl We'd Put Up—If our automobiles were confiscated and we had to hitch old Dobbin to the buggy; if we were deprived of the radio and couldn't hear the scores, our favorite music, the funny fel-

"Mining" rubber tires in Michigan!

Thanks to ingenuity of Dow Chemical company scientists at Midland, this accomplishment may be a partial solution to today's war transportation problem.

An "unofficial" news story, published by the Midland Daily News from sources said to be very reliable, resulted in a hurried visit to Midland by Akron rubber company officials. Willard Dow, president of the big chemical works, was called to Washington. The exclusive news break held promise of being one of the big newspaper stories of 1942, for public interest has been at fever pitch over the prospect of nation-wide rationing and a gradual withdrawal of millions of motor vehicles from roads as rubber tires wore out.

A combination of petroleum, sulphur and salt brine—all obtained from the ground—is employed by the Midland chemists to make a synthetic rubber product known to the trade as "Thiokol."

Using a patented process developed by the Thiokol Corporation, the Michigan chemists collaborated in experiments for application of "thiokol" rubber for tire retreading purpose. Tires were retreaded with the new synthetic rubber, and after 5,000 miles of highway travel they showed little evidence of wear. Furthermore, the new rubber can be applied in a simplified method that reduces cost and time.

Petroleum and salt brine are both produced in Michigan. Sulphur comes chiefly from the southwest.

By utilizing the industrial equipment already available, together with additional facilities, the Dow company believes it would be possible to produce enough of the synthetic rubber by the end of 1942 to retread 1,000,000 automobile tires a month.

It sounds almost too good to be true.

Capt. Clare Webster with his gas boat Hawk, made two trips here last week with gasoline, one for Tom Gatliff and one for county road.

The mail boat Mary Margaret, Capt. Leroy Allerr, moved the Herman Popp family to Manistique last Tuesday. The Popp family expect to make their home in Gladstone.

The graduation exercises of St. James high school were held last Tuesday in Holy Cross church. The sermon was delivered by Fr. Polinski, of Boyne City. Fr. Branigan gave out the diplomas. In the class were Mae Gallagher, Mary Ruth Gatliff, Robert Malloy, Roland McCann and Erwin Beify.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

The modern soldier stands at the apex of a pyramid—a human pyramid.

He is placed there by the arms, hands, backs and shoulders of many who stand beneath him, the many—including Michiganders—who supply him with food, clothing, weapons and ammunition.

Sometimes soldiers scale high walls by forming human pyramids, and it is in this manner—but on a vastly greater scale—that we shall top the wall of victory. Because we must maintain this human pyramid of total war to support our fighting men on far-flung fronts with all we have, we have inaugurated the Manpower Mobilization program.

If we are to have more and better weapons for more and better soldiers and sailors (that's what it takes to win), then we must see that everyone in Michigan and the nation does a job of some sort.

Just the other day Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt said a big step in this direction was the growing army of physically handicapped men and women now taking its place in war production industries.

Because this state and all others in the nation are pouring everything we have into the war effort, we are faced with shortages in vital materials—shortages which, according to the War Production Board's Division of Materials, will grow more serious as the war progresses.

This has meant and will continue to mean less and less for civilian use, widespread substitution, and an increasing necessity for getting scrap metals and other materials back to the processing plants.

Scrap salvage, more than ever before, indicates a spare-time job for each of us. Only by scraping the bottom of the barrel for old metals and rubber can we have enough for victory.

This state, and the rest of the nation, is going to have less melody, so that our aviators may sing a song of destruction over Germany and Japan. A recent WPB order stops manufacture of almost all musical instruments. The saving of 15,000 tons of war materials that went into these instruments in 1940 would have supplied iron, steel, brass, copper and aluminum for 11,500 six-ton army trucks, or 83 medium tanks, or 49,000,000 rounds of .30 calibre ammunition or 500 155mm field pieces, or 40,000 aircraft flares.

We're going to get along without new carving sets, pocket knives and manicuring scissors. WPB has decided they aren't necessary in wartime and ordered manufacture on them stopped after June 30. Making of tableware and other cutlery also has been reduced sharply. It all means a lot to the critical materials situation.

A special WPB committee is studying possibilities of cargo planes for swift, long-range transportation....the OPA reminds you that if you're still looking for a war ration book or a sugar purchase certificate the place to apply is your local war price and rationing board, not the schoolhouse where original registration took place....cannod citrus fruits and citrus juices have been taken out from beneath the price ceiling, and cat and dog food have been placed under it....typewriter production will end early next autumn....rubber is in the news again—a plastic hose has been developed for use with air raid stirrup pumps, and the sale of rubber life-saving suits has been restricted to cargo ships and tankers....zippers salvaged from worn-out clothing have a new value by a ruling which permits reconditioning and sale of used slide fasteners....denim probably won't be as available to you as it has been; it will be helping to outfit the nation's war workers.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

Two additional cars of AAA fertilizer will be received very shortly in Charlevoix county for use in the 1942 "Food for Freedom" program. Notice of shipment was received last week. One car of 20% phosphate will be distributed at East Jordan and one car of 0-20-20 mixed fertilizer at the Charlevoix Co-ops. Farmers who have signed for fertilizer but have not as yet received their full quota will be notified from the county office as soon as the shipments arrive. To date, 330 tons of fertilizer has been spread on hay and pasture lands under the provisions of the 1942 AAA program, in this county.

This week, AAA farm reporters are beginning the 1942 War Production Check-up on Charlevoix county farms. Data will be gathered from farmers regarding the efforts they are making to increase production this year over past years. This data will serve as a report to the nation on the status of the agricultural war production effort in this area and will be the basis for future planning on agricultural outputs for war.

Our county AAA office is now settled in their new quarters in the former Chamber of Commerce building at the corner of Lake and Water streets, Boyne City. We cordially invite you to visit our office which is newly located for your convenience.

CUSTOMER: Both these cars appeal to me, but...

SALESMAN: You won't find a better second-hand car anywhere than either of these. Wonderful buys!

CUSTOMER: If I only knew how the engines had been treated...what oil the ex-owners used.

SALESMAN: This one, I don't know. But this red job I happen to know had nothing but Conoco Nth motor oil from its first mile!

CUSTOMER: Well, why didn't you say so! Conoco Nth! I'll take the red job, of course! First of all, whoever owned that car knew what was best for a car when they used Conoco Nth. With Conoco Nth in the crankcase, I'm sure the cylinders and moving parts were protected by OIL-PLATING—lubricant that doesn't all drain down at every chance, but stays on the job.

SALESMAN: Well, that'd sell me the red one.

CUSTOMER: Why, man, Conoco Nth can help keep an engine so clean of sludge and carbon that it easily ought to mean good long life. I'm going to cash in on this car's value—and keep on using Conoco Nth.

You can cash in, too. Cash in by getting all the engine life and good oil mileage that are winning sensational sales success for Conoco Nth oil. See Your Conoco Mileage Merchant today! Continental Oil Company

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Just when it looks as though Norland Airways is through, Cruger finds a "scientist" named Frayne, who offers to pay well to be flown to the Anawotto, a river in Canada's barren North Country, where he hopes to find the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. This good news helps to soften the blow when Cruger has to tell his partner and ace flyer, Alan Slade, that his application for overseas service with the army air corps has been turned down. Slade explains that he signed up because he thought they would lose the business. Cruger says he has bought a new Lockheed that will keep them going for a while. He and Alan are discussing their new client, who is apparently not inexperienced, having recently returned from an expedition to the Himalayas.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER II

"What was this man Frayne after in the Himalayas?" Slade asked.

"The Great Tibetan Sheep. Karnell, he explained, was his shikari on both occasions. But Karnell doesn't count. All he does, apparently, is supply the brawn. It's our man of science who supplies the brain in that outfit."

"Wasn't your nature-lover shooting wide of the mark when he went looking for sheep in winter? It's in spring and summer sheep come down, anywhere. Every hunter knows that."

Cruger's chair-shift was one of impatience.

"Don't worry about your passengers. Your business, Lindy, is flying. And if you feel that dreamy-eyed ornithologist is after gold, like all the rest of them, you'll think along another line when you've seen him. He's different. And before summer's over, you may be sure, he'll be calling for supplies."

"Should he go in there to starve?" questioned Slade.

"He won't starve," retorted the other. "He's well heeled, his papers are in order, and the Royal Mounted have okayed his excursion. He's carrying a lot of equipment." Cruger's glance went to the window. "They'll be bringing over their stuff from the terminal any time now."

"Buyin' diamonds for your girl friend down the Basin?"

"Themselves?"

Cruger nodded.

"It's too precious, apparently, for our port boys to handle. Before sundown they'll be stowing it aboard your ship, and when they do you'd better stand by and check up on their kit."

"Why?"

Cruger shrugged.

"Well, let's say it's to make sure he doesn't give you an over-load."

Slade buttoned his flyer's coat.

"I'll be back from McMurray in two hours," he proclaimed. "And I'll check and double-check on that swan-stalker."

Cruger glanced up at the route map on the wall.

"An early start tomorrow should give you light for landing. It won't be easy flying, remember."

"I'll fly behy elephants to the Pole," Slade announced, "if it's going to keep this outfit on its feet."

Cruger's quiet smile was that of a man with a trump card still in his hand.

"But the important point," he pursued, "is that you're not the only one who didn't get to the Front this throw." He paused for a moment as though to give timing to a message too important to be lightly uttered. "I thought you'd like to know that Doctor Morlock's daughter didn't swing in with that Red Cross unit.

Slade turned away and looked at the wall map. It was taking time, apparently, for information so unexpected to be absorbed.

"How do you know that?" Slade demanded with just a trace of a tremor in his voice.

The older man's half-smile was quickly smothered.

"It came from Morlock himself. He'd the offer of a chair in medicine at the University of Manitoba and that girl of his was set on him getting out of frontier-life flying. I guess she felt he'd weaken if she stepped out and went over-seas. But the old boy stuck to his guns. He said he was needed in the North and would die with his boots on. And that meant only one thing for a girl like that. It meant she had to stick to her dad."

Even Cruger could smile a little at the newer light that crept into the Viking eyes.

"So she's not going to England," Slade repeated.

"No, she's flying to Coronation with her father tomorrow," Cruger said, as he picked up the envelope.

Slade's glance remained preoccupied. He had the look of a tired swimmer who had unexpectedly found solid ground under his feet. Even the sunlight outside, when he swung open the door, seemed a little brighter. For there wasn't, after all, to be a wide Atlantic between him and Lynn Morlock.

He drew a deep breath and turned back to Cruger.

"You're right about this outfit," he said. "We're going to keep her going."

He swung the door shut on Cruger's smile.

Alan Slade, jolting over the three-mile trail between McMurray and Waterways, sat back in Cassie Olin's taxi and let the road and Cassie do their worst. But Cassie, he saw, knew how to handle her dust-covered old jallopy, probably the most northerly taxicab, omitting Alaska, on the continent. For Cassie, who had driven an Arctic dog team in her time, was both stalwart of body and resolute of spirit.

"Where'll I ha droppin' you?" asked Cassie, as they rolled into the town's wooden-fronted main street.

"At Dillon, the jeweler's," Slade told her.

"Buyin' diamonds for your girl friend down the Basin?"

Slade laughed.

"There's no such animal," he said, as he waved her good-by. But he was wondering, at the moment, if Lynn Morlock would be paying her customary visit to St. Gabriel's. She'd be wanting supplies, before heading north. For the North was empty of much that was needed there. His present mission was evidence enough of that. It involved, he remembered, a wedding ring for a love-lorn mine-worker at El Doredo, a mine-worker impatient to travel in double-harness with a full-bosomed Swede waitress who answered to the name of Atlin Olga.

For five years now, Slade also remembered, he had been an unattached shopping agent for the exiles along the new frontier. He had taken in Christmas turkeys and radio sets, dancing slippers and tobacco, compasses and clock-keys. He had swapped their beaver and muskrat pelts for layettes and cotton-flannel, and exchanged white foxskins for baby food and safety pins. He had matched yarn and learned how to spot service-weight silk stockings and select slips of the right tea-rose tint. He had sleuthed out needed machine parts and bought cough medicine and kidney pills.

So the purchase of a wedding ring, and even a wedding ring of the massiveness and diameter designated by the impatient groom, seemed merely an incident in the day's work. He laughed a little as he inspected the big ring in its velvet box.

His smile faded as he looked at his watch. His plane, he remembered, was awaiting his attention. He turned and looked about for Cassie's taxi. He was still diffidently searching the dusty street ends when he heard his name called. "Alan!"

It quickened his pulse. For he knew that calling voice belonged to Lynn Morlock, even before he caught sight of her between the loungers fringing the shop fronts.

She was, he saw, almost running along the none too even sidewalk. Her hair, close-clipped and boy-like, shone mahogany-brown in the sunlight and she carried her familiar first-aid bag. There was neither alarm nor excitement on her face. But there was resolution in her stride.

"Alan, come with me, quick," she called over her shoulder, without slackening her pace.

"What's happened?" Alan asked as he swung in beside her.

"There's been a fight," she said, between breaths. "There's a man bleeding to death. At least that's the word they sent."

"Where is he?" asked Slade.

They turned up a side street, where the idlers, both Indian and white, could no longer gape after them.

"At the Blue Goose," was Lynn's answer. "It sounds like a severed artery."

Slade knew enough of frontier-town gambling joints and gin mills disguised as dance halls to realize what they might have to face.

"That's no place for a girl," he contended.

"I've been in worse," was Lynn's quick reply. "And you may have to help me."

"Why isn't the Padre attending to this?" he asked as he hurried on beside her.

A shadow crossed the girl's face.

"You know how Father feels about drinking."

"But even a drunken man can die," protested Slade.

"I'm afraid Father would let him," was the girl's answer to that. "He's no longer a doctor, where alcoholics are concerned. He's washed his hands of them. And nothing will ever change him."

Slade remembered something about that. It tied up, he recalled, with the hazy story of the Flying Padre's abrupt migration from a once-opulent city practice to the outposts of the Mackenzie Basin. Lawrence Morlock, he remembered, had his reasons for hating drunkenness. For as Slade was able to piece the story together, Lynn's father had been one of New York's most successful surgeons. He had flown high and flown fast, until the tragic death of his wife brought him up short. The enemy he was fighting on a wall-fortified front line dropped like a parachutist in his own home. Bewildered and stunned, but refusing to give ground, he had sought relief in over-work and alcohol. But one night when called from a night club for an emergency operation his hand had failed him and his patient, a pillar of Wall Street, had died on the table. That death, the surgeon always felt, was due to his own drunkenness. It rang the curtain down on all his earlier feverish scramble for wealth. He cabled his daughter Lynn, then in Switzerland, that he was giving up his practice and selling his city home. He quietly dropped out of his old life and, a year later, reappeared as a relief-worker when a flu epidemic was decimating the northern camps of Canada. His field broadened as he learned the need for medical service along the outer fringes of the New Frontier, and he equipped himself with a plane which was used in many a mercy flight.

His daughter Lynn was proving herself a chip of the old block. For when she realized her father was soberly happy in that work and definitely committed to what she accepted as a life of expiation, she quietly went in training as a nurse, equipped herself as a co-worker with the Padre, and joined him in his silent yet stole campaign of redemption. She had stuck to him with a tender loyalty.

"If this is going to be a murder case," he contended, "why not notify the police?"

"It mustn't be murder," cried Lynn. To the men following her she looked reassuringly fearless in the slanting northern sunlight.

They must have been waiting for her in the Blue Goose. The door opened, expectantly, even before she reached it.

"Where is he?" the girl asked of the pock-marked man in his shirt sleeves. He closed and locked the door before answering.

"In here," he said with a side glance of hostility as Slade pushed in after the girl. The sound of a phonograph blaring out dance music in some outer room suddenly came to a stop. A bold-eyed woman, heavily rouged, backed away at the peremptory hand wave of the proprietor, who opened a second door and pointed inside, without advancing.

His first impression of the room, as he entered, was one of blood. There was blood on the cover of an overturned table, on the floor and on the summer parka worn by a figure half-lying and half-crouching along a stained wicker couch splashed with red.

Slade couldn't tell whether the man in the parka was being held up or held down by an aproned and yellow-faced bartender who set with one arm about the wounded man and looked up at them with the round eyes of a bewildered rabbit as the girl with the bag ran to his side. It wasn't until she pushed the aproned man away that Slade recognized the face above the parka.

It was the parka that he recognized first. He promptly identified it as the garment that had been given to Slim Tumstead by Air-Commander Rollins-Benson on the occasion of a bush-fire flight in which Slim had proved both his flying ability and his fearlessness.

It was Slim Tumstead looking up at him with a one-sided and slightly sardonic smile.

"I'm all right," he stubbornly protested. But his voice was thin with weakness.

"Let's see," challenged Lynn, with her bag already open. Each movement was quick and decisive as she examined her patient. "Get me water," she commanded, without turning her head, "water that's been boiled."

CLEAN GRAIN BIN AIDS WAR EFFORT

Another war job that is allied with sensible farming practice is to clean out grain bins and avoid weevil infestation before the 1942 crop is harvested.

Transportation has become an emergency, Great Lakes grain boats are to be restricted mostly to hauling ore, central elevators are full and can't hold much of this year's crop.

Those are factors cited by Ray Hutson, head of the Michigan State College entomology department, as reasons for taking better care of grain this year and not losing any of the crop to weevils. Farmers likely will face difficulty in obtaining fumigants, so the prevention is doubly better than the fumigating cure.

"Clean out the grain bin corners. Wield the broom and burn the rubbish," says Hutson.

"Cover holes and scrub out the cleaned bin with hot water and lye. Use of red rosin building paper for lining a bin is recommended to help keep the bin clean of insects."

Principal "don't" stressed by Hutson is not to put new grain in a bin with old grain. That is one of the easiest ways to promote the happy home life of the grain weevil, in Hutson's opinion.

Michigan wines are made from Michigan grapes, an important industry.

TOO TOUGH A JOB

It is to be hoped that the REAL friends of former Gov. Luren Dickinson will dissuade him from becoming a candidate for Lieutenant Governor. The estimable old gentleman, now 83, has been in very poor health for a long time. He has lived beyond the years allotted to most men and should be allowed the leisure of his twilight with honors sufficient for any man and in the happy knowledge that he has led a useful life.

For his own sake he should be discouraged rather than encouraged to seek office again, but, even more important, for the welfare of the State.

We are at war and will be at war next year. If he should happen to be elected and anything should happen to him who is elected governor, Mr. Dickinson would be forced to take his place. He lacks the youth and the strength to meet the crushing burdens of responsibility that will befall the office.

Mr. Dickinson would be performing a patriotic service by refusing to indulge in his desires.—Detroit Free Press.

NEWSPAPER BUSINESS

(Editorial in the Alpena News)

Newspaper business hasn't been too good lately and the chances are that it may be worse before this war is through with. We're selling more papers than ever in our history, but advertising volume has decreased, and that is generally true. Some newspapers may pass out of the picture before the emergency is past. That will be bad for their owners and it will be bad for their readers, and for the businessmen of their communities too. A city or town which has lost its newspapers by the end of this war will be in a poor position to recapture and hold its pre-war trading territory in the years to follow. This is pointed out by George V. Sheridan, director of the Ohio Council of Retail Merchants, warning his membership against cutting too sharply 1942 advertising appropriations.

"Scrutinize more carefully than ever before the temporary and fly-by-night advertising promotions that fritter away money which should be sluiced into advertising media upon which you must depend for the healthy growth of your store after this war is over," says Mr. Sheridan.

"Support and help your publisher interest other local businesses deeply concerned in the maintenance of your community and your retail trade area. (For example: If you are a lessee, your landlord has about as great a stake in the continuance of your retail district as you have.)

"Join the growing movement to induce your government to use practical methods in its selling jobs, through regular use at paid rates of newspaper space as the greatest selling media. Canada, for example, is finding it increasingly more profitable to sell government securities and to enlist manpower through newspaper space than through some of the more spectacular but more costly and less effective methods which our government is following.

"I haven't mentioned the desirability of contributing to the continuance of a free press. If we come out of this war with a string of closed or bankrupt newspaper properties, we will have lost one of the greatest principles for which we are fighting.

"I suggest, seriously, that local retail secretaries present this problem for discussion to their boards or their membership. This isn't a silly blurb issued to curry favor with the newspapers. For many years the newspapers have given the merchants collectively the finest kind of support in every worthwhile activity, because the newspaper publisher today realizes that his problem and the problems of the stores in his community are identical."

Spend less. Make your old clothes do. Put 10% of your income into War Bonds. Help your country meet its Bond quota.

Every American fighting man going overseas gets a brand new kit bag from the American Red Cross, packed full of articles guaranteed to cure a lot of troubles.

They are filled with buttons, extra shoelaces, sewing kits, soap, smoking tobacco and cigarette papers, stationary, pencils, playing cards, chewing gum, waterproof matchboxes and razor blades.

A little, old man walked into the Red Cross chapter house at Minneapolis, Minn., and hollowed, "I want to go to Pearl Harbor, and I want to go right away." When asked if he was willing to wait a few minutes he replied, "Yes, if it ain't too long. I'm sick and tired of living on a pension. I want to fight for my country."

Although there are approximately 7,000 Red Cross First Reserve nurses on duty with the Army and 170 with the Navy, up to 12,000 more will be needed for the military alone. Only nurses under 40 years of age, unmarried and physically fit acording to military standards, are eligible. The first call for reserves was for one year of service, but enlistments now must be for the duration. An estimated total of 50,000 students are being recruited to fill up the depleted ranks of graduate registered nurses who are in great demand on all fronts.

Dr. Mark Gifforde addressed his fellow Kiwanians on the subject of "X-ray" at a meeting of the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club held Tuesday evening at Mont's Cafe.

Through X-ray, discovered in 1895, the interior of the human body was first visible to man without the use of surgery. Since its discovery, the field of its use has been continually widened and its help to the doctor in diagnosing physical ailments has been incalculable. The speaker, by the use of X-ray films, demonstrated to the assembly how this great discovery locates skull fractures, disease of the lungs, gall stones, broken bones, pins, coins and other objects swallowed by children and sometimes by adults, and a host of other uses. He discussed its growing use in the treatment of certain stages of cancer.

Dr. Giffords will receive a commission as a lieutenant in the Medical Corps of the United States Army on June 17th, and ordered to report for duty shortly thereafter. Mrs. Giffords will accompany her husband.

Devere R. Bird was a guest of the meeting.

WAR MAY RESTRICT TELEPHONE SERVICE

Installations for Many Persons May Not Be Available

While the Michigan Bell Telephone Company expects to be able to meet most requests for service at its summer resort exchanges this year, many persons still will be unable to get service because of war restrictions, officials of the company stated today.

Company officials also pointed out that new residential extension telephones will not be available at any point except when essential to the "public health, welfare, and security."

Telephone installations may be curtailed, officials said, if they involve considerable line construction. Only party-line service can be provided in some localities. Service also will be difficult to obtain if traffic over telephone lines at an exchange already is approaching switchboard capacity. That will mean that, at some points at least, some summer homes that have had service in past years may be unable to get it this year.

Every application for service, the company said, will be decided on its individual merits and the available facilities, including lines and central office apparatus and capacity. In some cases, field investigation will be required to determine whether service can be made available.

Restrictions to date affect mostly those exchanges where service demands are greatly increased as a result of military or industrial activities arising from the war effort. Officials said the situation may become more severe should the War Production Board find it necessary to expand its restrictions in order to save even more materials than under present restrictions for the war effort.

Antrim lands will be sold July 8 at Bellaire, Kalkaska and Crawford lands will be sold July 9 at Kalkaska, and Missaukee and Roscommon properties will be sold July 10 at Lake City.

School Goes On As Bombs Drop

Many Children Barefoot, Underfed, but Readin', Writin' Continue.

NEW YORK.—They're back at their tattered books in this third school year of Great War II: Ian and Mery of England, Karl and Gretchen of Germany, Jean and Mario of France and Luigi and Angelina of Italy, in the strange school rooms fashioned by Mars.

That is, they're at school if there is any school, as almost always there is, and if they have any shoes to wear, which sometimes they haven't.

In England, 4,500,000 boys and girls, gas masks slung over shoulders, trudge daily to classes; in many cases in "safe" areas far from home; in at least one case, in the path of the shells that Germany's Big Berthas fire across those fearful 20-odd miles of English channel.

In France, refugees choke the schools, yet numbers of children learn their lessons at home, by radio, because their shoes are worn out. In Italy, there are new school shelters, now that there are more British air raids. In Germany, the "lehrer," with close-cropped hair and ruler, daily doles out vitamin pills to his smallest students.

Jews Are Barred.

The children of neutral Switzerland have air-raid drills between classes. The schools of the Nazi-overrun Balkans have fewer to teach this year, for in increasing measure new laws have barred the sons and daughters of Jews.

But almost everywhere else, enrollments are close to normal.

The children of Hell's Corner, England, which rightly is known as Dover, went back to their regular buildings this month for the first time since Dunkerque.

Since September, 1933, the movement of hundreds of thousands of children from British cities to countryside and back again has provided a mass phenomenon without parallel in history or social science.

Then France fell, the children went back to the country and those who had been sent to "safety" on the south and east coasts were trundled inland.

In the ensuing months bombs and fires destroyed hundreds of school buildings (London alone lost 600, or two-thirds of the capital's total); others were commandeered for rest centers and fire-fighting services. Yet today, school facilities are available—somewhere—for 90.5 per cent of the United Kingdom's maximum school population.

In a few places there are special schools, manned by psychologists, to heal child minds upset by bombings. But these are few.

Schoolmasters who went to great lengths to provide group singing and other distractions for pupils during air raids found, as one said: "The boys were rubbing their hands with glee in expectation of the bomb splinters and other souvenirs they would be able to collect"—even while the bombs were crunching down and the ack-ack was roaring.

Sleep Through Raids.

For a time, schools kept open at night to let children sleep at their desks because they were frightened in their beds when the sirens screamed. Now, one heard reports, most youngsters can sleep through the noisiest barrage.

Even counting out the shoeless absentees, schools in so-called unoccupied France opened this fall with still-homeless refugees adding 30 per cent to the normal attendance. The schools broadcast courses to the children at home and the government is trying to get them back into class by issuing emergency shoe ration coupons.

Berlin's schools began with a normal attendance and increased health supervision, including the distribution of the vitamin tablets for the youngest boys and girls.

Six million Italian children went back to school 10 days later than usual, to find new bomb shelters in the larger cities.

There are big books and bulletins on the control of insects and diseases of vegetables. The United States Department of Agriculture gets out Farmers Bulletin No. 1371, entitled "Diseases and Insects of Garden Vegetables."

No instructions can fit perfectly, country-wide, but two little 75c or one dollar dusters will meet most needs. Keep Bordeaux dust in one and apply to leaf diseases of potato, tomato and celery plants. Keep rotenone or pyrethrum dust in the other and it will take care of many of the insects. Timeliness is of major importance and a thorough light dusting is better than big gobs of dust here and there. Better know a bit about the pest or disease and then get the treatment to the right place at the right time. Not much use dusting the tops of the leaves when the fungus attacks beneath. Nor should one neglect resistant varieties for some diseases and seed treatments for others.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
11th District, Michigan
Fred Bradley

Communism (U.S.A.) versus Americanism is apt to be a real issue in the fall campaign. By Communism (U.S.A.) I mean no insult to our allies in Russia, fighting a gallant battle, but the Communism of the Russia of today is as totally unlike the Communism of Russia of 10 years ago as the Communists in the United States are unlike true Americans. In his order of May 28th to deport Harry Bridges, famous West Coast Communist, Attorney General Biddle had this to say:

"The Communist party of the U.S.A. from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time, is an organization that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States."

That is the organization to which Americans in congress on both sides of the aisle have repeatedly referred to as subversive organization, and against whose influence in our govsrnment and in our economy, many of us have waged a constant vigilant campaign.

In passing let us distinctly remember that the Communist party U.S.A. not only vigorously opposed our entrance into this war, but was notoriously obstructionist to our war preparation effort prior to the actual entrance of Russia into the war against Hitler and his allies. Prior to that time in Communist publications all over the land and through their spokesman on the floor of the congress, the war was frequently denounced as a "War to preserve the Wall Street-Downing Street Axis." Communists were frequently involved in the leadership of strikes and sabotage aimed at the obstruction of our war effort. This did not become a "War for Freedom" until Russia's entry. Not until then did the Communists U.S.A. actively support our war effort.

Early this spring an organization was formed for the specific purpose of conducting smear campaigns throughout the country against every member of congress, who prior to December 7th dared to oppose the foreign policy of the administration. The initial step was taken by an organization which calls itself the "Union for Democratic Action." The Washington representative of this Union is Thomas R. Amlie, formerly of Elkhorn, Wis., who served as a Progressive member of the House three terms and who twice was repudiated by Wisconsin voters after his true colors became known. In 1935 he was chairman of the American Commonwealth Federation in Chicago, a movement to coordinate the so-called liberal groups of the nation. In 1939 after his defeat at the polls, he was nominated by the administration for membership on the Interstate Commerce Commission but his name was withdrawn after his Communistic leanings were exposed. At that time true Americans were alarmed at the spread of Communism (U.S.A.) in our government and throughout the country.

The State Department files describe the "Union for Democratic Action" thus:

"The Union for Democratic Action, despite its name, is an aggregation of persons whose chief claim to public attention is their long record of affiliation with the front organizations of the Communist party. Even more sinister than the past record of the Union's members is the objective of the group. That objective may be summarized briefly as the utilization of America's war crisis for the purpose of effecting what the Union believes to be a program of social gains. Translated into stark realism, the Union's idea of social gains is the entrenchment of the proponents of class struggle even more deeply into American life. The case against the Union for Democratic Action may be stated in brief by calling attention to the fact that its outstanding leaders have long records of affiliation with the Communist front organizations of the Communist party."

This is the organization which launched its smear campaign recently through a supplement issued by the Communist magazine "New Republic" in which a large number of members of congress, including myself, were violently attacked. The vicious attack follows the program laid down at a dinner held here in Washington last March, sponsored by the above magazine's promoters and which was called the 'Overseas Correspondents' Dinner.' It has been reliably stated that at this dinner it was openly remarked that men who opposed our entrance into the war before Pearl Harbor must be destroyed; this if need be by "hooking" them for subversive activities, if possible, or by some frame-up on their income tax, by violation of the Mann Act or such. Their purge list, in the above mentioned supplement, contains the names of a number of prominent Democratic members of congress who have supported the president's foreign policy 100 percent and many Republican members who took a non-interventionist position before the war; but all of whom have one thing in common—they have been active in fighting all subversive activities in this country—including the Communist party U.S.A. Their line of attack will be to discredit congress as a whole and then members one by one. We have already seen such attempts hurled at a member from our own State, whose patriotism indeed has never been questioned, and also in the recent malicious attempt to accuse one of our most distinguished senators of conspiring secretly with alien enemies against his country. In the latter case, the F.B.I. made a thorough and complete investigation which exonorated the senator completely and clearly indicated the existence of a conspiracy to defame a member of the senate and destroy him politically. Why? Not because of his non-interventionist position prior to Pearl Harbor, but more because of his opposition to Communism (U.S.A.) You can expect many more blasts from this group such as the previous outbursts at the congressional franking privilege, the stationery and mileage accounts, so-called pensions for congressmen, "X" gasoline cards, etc. When they have destroyed the public's trust in congress, they will then step in and take over just like they did in Russia.

In passing it might be well to look at the record of some of these individuals who have been conducting this smear campaign recently. In addition to Amlie, we find that the publisher of the "New Republic" is one Bruce Bliven, Sr., whose son, Bruce Bliven, Jr., is the editor of the New York Post, which attempted to smear the Massachusetts senator. Both of the Blivens are listed as foreign agents by the State Department under the Act of June 8, 1938, as amended, requiring the registration of all foreign agents in this country. Also on the editorial staff of the "New Republic" we find one Malcolm Cowley, who was driven off the government payroll by an act of congress when his communistic affiliations had become known and after all other methods failed. Another gentleman who has been quite critical of congress recently is Raymond Clapper, likewise listed in the most recent release of the State Department as a foreign agent.

The movement is going to be amply financed. The candidates who have its blessings will have every means at their disposal. We will witness the unfolding of the plan to take over American as the campaign progresses. It is timely, therefore, that Americans study and analyze the background and intent of those who will be busily engaged in attempting to destroy honest, sincere Americans who may be candidates for public office in the fall elections. We can look for representatives of organizations such as the "Union for Democratic Action" to be operating in most every State in the Union.

There is no though in the minds of any of us in Washington that the 77th congress cannot be accused of having made mistakes, and I do not for one moment want to intimate to you that I have not made mistakes, but I do say that I take pride in the fact that I have been one of those singled out in the "New Republic" for their attacks. If there is any doubt in their minds and in the minds of anyone else that I am not going to be a candidate for re-election this fall, let me state that my nominating petition blanks are in my office and will be distributed in the very near future.

West Point Appointment

As soon as the bill passed by congress, increasing the number of cadets at the Military Academy is signed by the president, we will be formally notified to make an additional appointment to West Point. Unquestionably we will be asked to name a principal and two alternate candidates, who will be, in all probability, mentally and physically examined at West Point July 1st next. Young men having the required qualifications are urged to send in their applications immediately.

Home Canning Demonstration on June 16 to Reach Entire County

How to fill the pantry and basement with the best from the garden is to be demonstrated in a series of four meetings planned for Charlevoix county on Tuesday, June 16. These meetings will be held both forenoon and afternoon and will be in charge of Miss Roberta Hershey and Miss Ruth Peck, assistant State Home Demonstration leaders.

The two forenoon meetings scheduled will each start at 10:00 and will be held in the Marion Center and Maple Grove Grange halls. The two afternoon meetings will each start at 2:00 promptly at the Boyne River and Peninsula Granges. With two leaders in the county, two meetings can be held at the same time, so please select the one that is most convenient for you to attend.

A variety of methods are to be shown when a specialist from Michigan State College will meet with volunteers from extension groups and also other organizations.

These "volunteers" are pledged to be contact persons in their own neighborhoods. They will in turn hold neighborhood meetings in schools, community halls and in their own kitchens, to show the latest and easiest ways to preserve fruits and vegetables.

Food preservation includes up-to-date ideas on canning, drying, freezer locker and of storing methods.

By using volunteers, the number of leaders is expected to include several thousand women, who acting as local contact persons in their own communities will hold meetings and pass out bulletins or help other women right in their own kitchens.

Nutrition leaders of the extension groups are taking the lead in contacting others. Any woman willing to be a volunteer planner is asked to get in touch with the county extension office in Boyne City for full particulars, or to come to the demonstration held nearest to her own home.

Good food canned or stored at home will provide good eating next winter. Thrifty women all over Michigan are making plans to insure a bountiful supply for their families and also are helping teach others the easiest way to have plenty in the home food supply.

Cut-Worms and Insects Causing Considerable Damage

The cool, moist spring from all indications is favorable for the increase in numbers of many insects and worms. A few brief comments might be of help, in controlling these ailments that affect the hundreds of Victory gardens in this county.

Cut Worms: These seem to be causing a lot of damage in many locations. The cheapest and easiest way to control these is the application of poison bait. The mixture is made up of five pounds of bran, about four ounces of paris green, one half pint of cheap molasses, about three pints of water and one ground orange, lemon or apple to give the mixture a slight flavor. This mixture will make about ten pounds of moist poison bait and this quantity will take care of one-half acre to good advantage. This poison bran should be scattered thinly and evenly on a warm evening soon after the plants appear above the ground. During the evening the cut worms usually come to the surface and will get enough of this poison material to cause their death.

Maggots: The three maggots, namely, bean, cabbage, an onion are closely related and are controlled in the same way. Ordinarily, it is well to plant your seed shallow so that the plant grows rapidly and gets above the ground in as short a time as possible. The most practical way of controlling the maggots is to use corrosive sublimate (biebloride of mercury). This material is a violent poison and must be handled with care. As it corrodes metals, it must be handled in wood, pottery, glass or resistent containers. One ounce of this material is diluted with 8 gallons of water and applied on either side of the row on the ground. It seems that the moist soil having this solution turns the trick.

Caterpillars, Beetles, Plant Lice and Others: The most convenient treatment for these bugs and insects are bordeaux mixtures to which is added calcium arsenate, or derris mixtures. Your dealer has a copper-lime dust instead of the spray. For small acreages this dust is very effective. Calcium arsenate may be added to this copper-lime dust at the rate of one pound to 20 pounds of dust. This will do a very good job on practically all of your garden crops.

Derris: The toxic principle in derris is rotenone. A good rotenone dust may be made by mixing a pound of derris of 4% rotenone content with from four to six pounds of flour or lime. Derris dusts have the added advantage in that they are not poisonous to animals and human beings. It is also possible now to buy from most dealers a complete spray which has added nicotine sulphate to control sucking insects such as plant lice. This is practical because then you have a spray that will control 95% of all difficulties in one combination.

Plant Lice: These lice are very prevalent and are usually on the under side of the leaf in large numbers. They cause the leaf to curl up and finally die. The control for these is nicotine sulphate. One tablespoon of 40% nicotine sulphate in one quart of strong soap suds is very effective.

Hon. Chase S. Osborne, former governor of Michigan, will deliver the address at commencement exercises Thursday evening at the opera house when fifteen young people of the class of '17, Charlevoix high school, will enter life's struggle. Following is the program for class day exercises Wednesday night, also at the opera house: class march, Margaret Saunders; invocation, Rev. C. E. Taggart; selection by the orchestra; salutatory, King Saunders; president's address, John Walker; class history, Robyn Merriam; class prophecy by the class; class will, Harold Cartier; valedictory, Allen Arnold; class song by the class; benediction, Rev. Taggart.

Registration for military draft was fittingly celebrated in Charlevoix yesterday, when 170 men stepped up to the registration booth to offer their services in a holy war for the principles of democracy. An automobile parade of 06 cars, headed by a "home-grown" band, made a tour of the city. At the public library were gathered the speakers of the dny, Dr. R. B. Armstrong, Rev. C. E. Taggart, H. A. Craig, W. E. Hampton; 117 school children of the lower grades wearing red, white and blue tassel caps and grouped so as to represent a huge, living American fing; a quintette composed of Messrs. Glenn Kirby, Loren Hart, Ney Smith, Tom LaLonde and Charles Hamlin, who rendered "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "Star-Spangled Banner," in which latter song the school children and audience joined. It was remarked that few of the audience knew the words of the national anthem.

The Argo Milling company gives a recipe for Canada's war cake—eggless, butterless, milkless. Also cakeless, in our opinion.

Four winners of Academy Awards, a record number for a single picture, contributed their outstanding artistic talents to the filming of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Woman of the Year," coming to the Palace Theater screen Saturday and Sunday, June 13-14.

First is Spencer Tracy, two-time Academy Award winner for his performances of Father Flanagan in "Boys Town" and Manusl in "Captains Courageous." His co-star, Katharine Hepburn, won her Oscar for "Morning Glory," and was a candidate for the award in 1940 for "The Philadelphia Story."

"Jezebel" Winner

Fay Bainter, who heads the snpporting east, was an award winner for her featured player performance in "Jezebel." The picture was photographed by Joseph Ruttenberg, whose photograpby of "The Great Waltz" brought him an Oscar, and who has been praised for his camera technique by such stars as Lana Turner, Hedy Lamarr, Claudette Colbert, Vivien Leigh, Ingrid Bergman and many others.

IT'S BERRY TIME FOR SUGAR SAVERS

Strawberry days are coming into Michigan areas to offer the first real test for housewives beat on conserving the household sugar supplies.

Ideas offered by home economics extension authorities at Michigan State College indicate the ways in which the use of fresh fruits can aid health, provide variety for the table and still not tax the sugar bowl.

When the berries are eaten fresh, they can be served with just enough sugar and not too much. The ideal combination for flavor and sugar saving involves selection of ripe berries. Consumption of fresh produce relieves some of the nation's transportation problems and still provides plenty of food for the average family.

Then there are the problems of conserving the surplus fruit by canning.

In some kitchens the oldtime standard is to use a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit. Wartime strawberry canning can be satisfactory, the college specialists point out, if berries get far less sugar, even reducing to half a pound of sugar to a pound of berries. In cupfuls, that means one cup of sugar to three cups of berries.

If the product is to be strawberry preserves, then the cook had best use u pto one-half of the necessary increased sweetening from supplies of honey or corn syrup.

Strawberry juice, brought to a boil and put up in green bottles to retain vitamin C in the product, is another sugar saver. A cup of sugar to a gallon of juice is considered sufficient. The juice goes well for drinks or ices.

LANSING LETTER

try, has had a national exponent in Dr. William Hale, Dow scientist at Midland.

Dr. Hale has foreseen the day when over-production of the farm will be a historical reference to the pro-World War II era. A few weeks ago Vice President Wallace made a speech in which he spoke of "the people's revolution" in this reversal of traditional thinking.

Alcohol, distilled from grain, can be utilized for production of butadiene. Petroleum can also be used to make butadiene. And butadiene is the important base for manufacture of the synthetic rubber known as Buns S and Buna N.

Converting grain or petroleum into rubber tires is verily a "revolution" in an economic sense.

Impressed with the potentialities, the RFC has expanded the official production program of synthetic rubber to an even 1,000,000 tons. But here is the "catch" to what would be otherwise a very rosy and optimistic tale. First, it will take 18 months to put the program into operation. Second, all of the 1,000,000 tons of artificial ruhber are needed for military and lend-lease requiromsnts, leaving NONE for civilian use such as buses, trucks, and automobiles.

That is why the Dow retreading process may help to keep defense workers' automobiles on the roads and otherwise assist in averting serious transportation paralysis by 1943 and 1944.

The senate committee investigating the national defense program, headed by Senator Truman, Democrat of Missouri, recently filed a lengthy report at Washington about the national rubber shortage.

While we stew over the proposed inconvenience of greatly reduced rations for gasoline and fret about what may happen to our 1942 tourist business in Michigan, we read the following from the Truman committee report with no great satisfaction:

"The fact that today—two years after the fall of France—not one of those (synthetic rubber) plants is in operation is incapable evidence not only of the admittedly difficult technical problems but also of the failure on the part of the officials in government to provide in time for one of the most fundamental needs of this country."

If private industry, such as the Dow company, comes to the rescue of the American people in a situation where government itself has failed miserably to get results, another bright page will be recorded in the war history of the Michigan home front.

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and Hudson are other Michigan concerns which are performing the "impossible" in production of bombers, tanks, guns and shells.

It is evidence that Yankee ingenuity still exists....of the will of the American people to defeat the axis at whatever cost.

Luren Dickinson, 84-year-old ex-governor, has had another "call" to public service, as his friends intimate.

Announcement of his candidacy for the office of lieutenant governor is expected to be made very soon. Dickinson, of course, never runs for office. He is just elected to office.

So far his candidacy has been sponsored chiefly by Dickinson. Because of his advanced age and the war, he has not been encouraged to run by Republican party leaders but it is a 10-to-1 bet that his hat will be in the ring once again. Dickinson has a habit of deciding matters himself, and it is likely that his mind was made up and set months ago. One Dickinson trait, familiar to his friends, is a stubbornness that used to be known as "grit" and sometimes is glorified as "will-power."

Whether it would require more will power not to run than to run at the age of 84 is another matter.

We'll know of his decision soon.

lows, new ways to try to fish, or the daily quotation on hogs; if there was no hot wster in the house and we had to shave with ice water from the pump; if we couldn't get a train or trolley car going any place at any time of day or night; if we couldn't grab the telephone and order a paper of pins or pound nf mush to be delivered to the house immediately; if we had to pay spot cash for everything we bought like we do for Uncle Sam's postage stamps; if our taxes were raised to the level of England's or those of other European countries; if electric refrigerators were to be banned and we had to hunt an ice box and call back the ice man; if public record were made of all Gentlemen's Agreements and they had to be fulfilled; if we caught our sons doing some of the things we did as boys; if safety razors were prohibited and we had to go back to grandfather's antiquated face scraper—Boy, oh boy, what a bowl we'd put up!' Well, some of those things which then sounded so improbable have come true and others nre apparently in the offing, but with the commonplace complacency of Americans, the howls are missing and everything is taken as a matter of fact.

The "good old days" when we used to take mackinaw trout off South Point in Lake Michigan on light tackle in shallow water were brought bnck last Sunday at least in part by the taking of two fish in such u manner. They were the first reported caught in the big lake since last fall and we hope the incident marks the beginning of a better thau average trolling season and a return to the former method of angling.

The opening of summer stores—Polly-Kay, Adams' and Bob Withers' places—takes from the main drag that vacont look that nobody likes to see.

All one has to do to find nut huw automobile pleasure travel has been voluntarily curtailed in Michigan is to some Sunday visit any one of the many rivers in this territory frequented by trout fishermen. In past years river banks were dotted with the tents and trailers of vacationists and fishermen were plentiful. That is not the case this season, however. Except for a few natives who live nearby and whose presence does not require driving any distance, these previously popular rivers and streams are now practically deserted over week ends.

And that reminds me, the press says President Roosevelt will explain proposed national gasoline rationing as a means of conserving rubber through a fireside chat—when he gets the facts. The situation, especially as affecting the midwest, where no shortage exists, certainly needs explaining. In fact, the clumsy federal threats of gasoline rationing should never have been made until "someone had the facts," because the effects of those constant and conflicting reports has been to create useless confusion and place a damper on a resort season which promised to be one of the greatest in years until people were scared into staying at home.

CIVIL WAR FLAG ON DISPLAY THIS WEEK

Bnnner Shown as Feature of Flng Week Observance in City

An interesting feature of Charlevoix's Flag Week observance this week is the battle-torn and blood-stained flag of Co. C, 23rd Michigan Infantry of the Civil War, on display in the north window of Earl A. Young's office bullding.

The flag has been in possession of Mr. Young's family since Civil War times. In the second battle of Bull Run, August 29 and 30, 1862, the flag was borne in turn by five men, who fell in battle one by one. Mr. Young's grandfather, Andrew Clark, took up the flag and not only carried it through the rest of the battle, but saved it from being captured by the Confederate forces. In recognition of his deed, the flag was presented to him by Gen. Ulysses Grant after the war. The Young family has preserved it carefully for more than 75 years.

Thirty-four stars are on the blue field of the flag, for although the southern states had declared their independence of the unlon, their secession was never recognized by the north, and their stars remained nn the flag.

VICTORY GARDENS

Michigan Council of Defense

Insects are present in every garden. In many instances tbey do not appear to cause damage to plants, but other times they multiply rapidly and even destroy the plants. Now, insects are not difficult to control if certain fundamental practises are followed.

Exnmine Frequently

First, examine the vegetables in the garden frequently, both the under surface of the leaves and the upper. If a portion of the leaf surface is missing, you may be sure that an insect produced the injury. Some insects work underneath the ground on the roots or feed within the stems of plants. This causes the leaves to wilt. Such plants should be dug up and examined thoroughly for cut worms, stalk borers working into the roots, maggots in the stem, nemstodes or even aphis feeding on the roots.

Dust or Spray

Secnnd, npply recommended insecticides as often as necessary to control the Insects. Expensive equipment is not necessary for control purposes; the type and size will depend lsrgely on the size of garden area to he covered. Insects which feed on the underside of leaves may be combatted hy a duster or a liquid sprayer. Dusting is more popular than liquid spraying becsuse the dusts are easier to apply and more thorough application may be accomplished by the amateur. Many types of dusters are avsilable from your local garden stores.

Insects which eat the entire leaf—the potato bug, the cucumber beetle, and tomato worms—may be easily controlled by the uso of the dusting bng. Fill two thicknesses of cheesecloth with dusting powder, bring the four corners together, and with a twist of the wrist (or hand) shske the dust over the plant leaves.

For npplication of liquids on leaf-eating bugs, a whiskbroom may be used. Dissolve or mix the insecticide in a bucket and dip the whiskbroom into the liquid and swish it in n circular motion over the plants so the material will fly off.

Combnting Lenf Enters

Flea Beetles — Orange-colored eggs, vurying in number from a dozen to 50, found on the underside of tomnto, potnto, or vegetable leaves; hatch within a week into a small, elongated, oval dark-colored beetles which have a habit of jumping when disturbed.

Control—Dust or spray as often ns necessary to keep the plants free from the insects; uso sny of the following: Paris green or variants, arsenate of lead, or calcium nrsenate.

Lenf Hoppers—Small, wedge-shaped insects about one-eighth of an inch long; found on underside of plant leaves; very common; can he seen when jumping from plant to plant us they are yellowish-green in color. Attack tomatoes, potatoes, beans, eggplants, lettuce, celery, dandelions and practically all garden crops.

Control—Dusting should begin as soon us the leaf hoppers nre observed in the gnrden and should bo continued at seven-day intervals, applying the material on both surfnces of the leaves. Either rotenone or pyrethrum sprays may bo used for control.

Potnto Beetles—The most common garden beetle attacking potatoes, tomatoes, eggplants and peppers. Tho eggs are laid on the underside of the leaf and the young or larvao have the appenrance of being humpback. They are reddish in color with soft bodies; are ravenous eaters, attacking the tissues of tender leavos.

Control—Dust or spray as often as necessary to keep the plants free from insects, using any of the following: Paris green or variants, arsenate of lead, or calcium arsenate.

Cnbbnge Worms—Small, soft-bodied insects, velvety green, usually found on underside of leaves or on the stem of the plant on which they feed by sucking its juices. Attacks cabbage, cauliflower, kale, radish, turnips and plants of the mustard family.

Control—Dusting should begin immedlately after observations show foliage is being eaten. Pyrethrum, rotenone and derris dust is recommended. Arsenicals are not recommended unless the product is thoroughly washed before being eaten.

Other plant insects will be discussed next week.)

LOCAL GIRLS HAVE CHANCE TO TRAIN FOR WARTIME JOBS

Local girls who want to train for mechanical jobs in bomber plants and other war industries now have that opportuolty, NYA officials report.

A new war production and training project, opened by the National Youth Administration at Traverse City, Monday, June 6, provides girls from western Michigan and the northern part of the state with the opportunity to get training snd production experience in machine operation, forging sheet metal work and welding.

Forty girls, drawn from all sections of western and northern Michigan started training on opening day, filling one of tbe project's two dormitories. Applications are now being received to fill the other "dorm" which also has accommodations for forty.

The fact that resident facilities are provided makes it possible for girls from this locality to take advantage of the training opportunities. They live in modern quarters during their period of training (which usually lasts three months) and they are paid $30 a month for productive work in the project's shops. Deductions for board, room, medicsl and dental care and nther incidental expenses leaves about $10 for personsl use.

The Traverse City project is the second resident center in a period of a month that has been opened to girls. The other was opened May 1 at Saginaw. Both, formerly were providing training for young men, but to help meet the increasing demand for experienced women machine operators, welders, and nther mechanical workers, the NYA is opening its projects to girls on a rapidly increasing scsle.

Girls, 17 to 24 years of age, who ere citizens of the United States can apply for soch work at the nearest office of the United States Employment Service, or the nearest NYA office, or by writing to the yuuth personnel director of the particular project.

The decline in the number of camp permits is proportional, smounting roughly to two camps for each three in 1941.

DRIVE FOR SCRAP RUBBER STARTED

NATION-WIDE CAMPAIGN ON JUNE 15 THRU 30TH

Public Contribution of Sufficieot Rubber to Meet Shortage May Halt Gasoline Rationing

Charlevoix county's partlcipation in a nation-wide scrap rubber salvage campaign which opened Monday, June 15, and continues through June 30th, was outlined at a meeting held Monday morning st Lukeview Inn.

Glenn Logan, War Production Board representative, who has established headquarters here to direct the campaign in Charlevoix, Emmet, Aipena, Montmorency, Otsego, Presque Isie, Cheboygan, Kslkaska and Antrim counties, instructed local city officials and members nf the Charlevoix County Defense Council on detalls regarding tbe drive.

With nation-wide gasoline rationing temporarily forestalled pending results of this gigantic campaign aimed to determine whether or not sufficient scrap rubber can be produced to meet a seriouaiy threntening national shortage of this vltally needed commodity, the responsibility for gas rationing has been thrown, in a manner of spenking, into the public'a lap.

Under present plans, rubber will be collected by the nation's 400,000 gasoline filling stations through n cooperative effort bncked by the National Petroleum Industry Association. In Charlevoix all filling stations are purchasing agents, paying one cent per pound for scrap rubber turned in. The only things of rubber not acceptnble, it is understood, nre battery boxes nnd pnrts thereof and tire beads. Persons turning in articles mode partially of rubber are requested to remove metal, wood and lenther. Every piece of rubber a person has no use for is wanted. It is requested, however, the public refrain from turning in rubber articles which would have to be replaced in tho home.

MILKWEED SURVEY STARTS IN NORTH

SEEK SUPPLY OF FLOSS FOR U. S. NAVY CONTRACT

Questionnaires Seeking Cooperation Mailed to Farmers In Six Northern Counties

County agricultural agents and chairmen of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration committees of this area met in Petoskey two weeks ago and learned from engineers from Chicago as well as others interested in the proposed milkweed processing plant, details as to the operation plans of those in charge of executing the contract on behalf of the Navy relative to milkweed floss.

Engineers were taken on an inspection tour throughout the six-county area and are assured that sufficient raw material is at hand to execute the Navy contract for 1,000,000 lbs. of floss.

Persons living on farms in the six county area in northern Michigan are being interviewed with regard to available milkweed growing wild in their immediate vicinity. Information asked concerns number acres of milkweed on their own farms, as well as that growing on state or abandoned farm land near them, from which they or their families could harvest the pods.

The survey will also inquire as to the number of specially constructed bags each farmer will need to store the crop. Bags will be supplied to harvesters by the operating company on a memo charge basis. Some idea as to the extent of the harvest will be gathered from the fact that approximately 1,600,000 bags will be needed.

The information desired is not compulsory, but purely voluntary on the part of the farmer toward the development of milkweed as a commercial crop in this area. "The basic price, still in its formative stage, will range from $40.00 to $55.00 per ton at the processing plant," stated L. J. Lyons, a member of the proposed operating corporation.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

If worry turned hair gray, the whole world would be white by now.

Ever since reading a nawspaper article last week and stating Vice President Wallace was worrying over a national surplus of hogs and corn, I've been trying to figure out the reason for 40c-a-pound pork chops.

We're still being taught the three R's—Regulations, rules and restrictions.

Looks like there won't be any gas rationing until fall, at least, and in the meantime President Roosevelt has sort of dumped the responsibility for such restriction, if it comes, into the public's lap by telling them to produce enough scrap rubber to forestall a critical shortage—or else. So there's a nation-wide campaign to collect old rubber under way from June 15 to 30, inclusive, and if folks want to continue to have gas with which to run their cars and wear out the tires they now have and probably can't replace until the war's over, it's up to them. FDR was always clever at wiggling out of a bad situation and this is no exception to the rule.

Conspicuous waste, once the symbol of personal wealth and prosperity, is now the mark of an unpatriotic wanton.

This region missed a frost by a very few degrees Sunday evening when the temperature dropped to 36 degrees in some lowland localities. Fact that the thermometer began rising shortly after midnight probably forestalled a freeze. And as perhaps many of you were aware, a furnace fire felt mighty good Saturday night, too.

On the subject of difficulties, Henry Van Dyke wrote: "No doubt a world in which matter never got out of place and became dirt, in which iron had no flaws and wood no cracks, in which gardens had no weeds, and food grew

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

The biggest problem today on the Michigan home front, according to a high ranking army official in an "off the record" talk in Detroit last week, is a widespread over-optimism by the public that the war will be over in six months.

"Two out of five persons we interviewed recently are convinced that victory is in sight," he explained.

"Yet, the truth is this: In six months' time we have taken the worst beating in our nation's history. We're not ready yet to do any major fighting. Our war plants will not be in full production for many months to come.

"The public is being deluded if it expects anything but a long, long war with great sacrifices. We should face the facts: The situation is very serious."

Nor is this over-optimism restricted in Michigan, we might add.

A newspaperman who recently visited relatives in Ohio encountered the same attitude of mind: "Victory is in sight."

CBS correspondent Cecil Brown reports: "Out here in Indiana, the war in the Pacific seems not 8,000 miles away but 80,000. Incredible as it may sound, they are betting 9 to 2 that the war will be over by Christmas, 1942."

Army recruits at Mid-West camps are saying, "The war will be over in six months" and quote Wall Street betting odds for authority.

A soldier in Times Square, New York City, is heard telling to his girl, "See you at Christmas time when the war will be over."

An intelligence officer at a New York dinner party confides to his friends the enemy can't hold out for six months—he has just come from Washington!

Wishful thinking of this kind has been encouraged, unfortunately, by circumstances under which war news is released by the government for publication.

It is also irrceable, according to authorities at Washington, to planted stories by Axis agents who

Producing Michigan's One-Third

This typical Michigan oil well is one of 3,200 now producing a total of more than 60,000 barrels of oil a day. Consumption by Michigan motorists and industry, however, amounts to about 180,000 barrels a day—without rationing. Operators are now searching for oil on more than 380,000 acres of state-owned land, the most the conservation department ever has had under lease, and exploration on private land is being pushed intensively also.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Conservation of Farm Transportation Becoming Serious to Farmers

All conflicting and optimistic statements to the contrary, the fact remains, that the inevitable transportation shortage is on the way and will likely be acute by this fall. Because it will intensify the shortage of many other commodities, the transportation shortage is regarded as one of the most serious of all our war time problems.

The rubber shortage, the limited supply of new vehicles, the increasing scarcity of repair parts and the possibility of gasoline rationing all combine to make the transportation shortage inevitable. What we have now is all we are going to get.

This one thing stands out above all else: The "food for freedom" program and the attainment of agricultural production goals will be meaningless if we do not have the transportation available to take these vital farm products off the farm to processing, storage and consumption centers. For this reason the conservation of farm transportation facilities is a matter of utmost importance to our entire war effort.

Kindly study the following facts and see if you do not come to the same conclusion.

Rubber: In the past we have used half the world's total output of rubber every year. Ninety-eight percent of that quantity comes from Malaya, Dutch East Indies and Ceylon. Thus one can see how dependent we are on the development of synthetic rubber or else—

New Cars and Trucks: Before the war the nation was driving 34,000,000 passenger cars and 4,000,000 trucks. Now, production for civilian use has stopped entirely. When in 1941 a total of 650,000 new trucks were placed in operation, today the nation has but 130,000 new trucks on hand and they must last the duration. This small number must take care of army requisitions, lend-lease exports and essential civilian requirements. Few farmers will be able to get them.

Repairs: Manufacturers who make repair parts have shifted production to military essentials. The present stock will have to last for the duration. This is indeed a serious problem.

Immediate Action Must Be Taken: It is very evident that if agricultural production is maintained it must be supported by adequate transportation. Perhaps the first step in this conservation that can be suggested would be "pooling" of transportation. This can be worked out most conveniently and simply by the 68 neighborhood war clubs now organized throughout every community. "Pooling" merely means that farmers from now on must think in terms of sharing their cars and trucks. Instead of two cars making a trip to town, perhaps, they can alternate. Instead of having a truck bring the products from one farm they can just as well have a full load and pick up products from the neighbors. Perhaps, many cars will have only three tires left and the "pooling" of tires may result in one or two usable sets. Do everything possible to preserve all machinery connected with the farm as for several years to come, perhaps, it cannot be replaced. And don't forget we may still be happy to use the horse-and-wagon equipment.

The county USDA War Board has already received instructions to be responsible for carrying out this program. This article has been written in the hope that farmers will voluntarily carry out this program. Farmers must keep this thought in mind that already the office of defense transportation is making it compulsory for common carriers of property, contract carriers of property, private carriers of property, and local delivery carriers to carry out these suggestions. Thus far farm trucks have been specifically exempted, however, unless farm trucks will be loaded both ways they are very apt to be included in the compulsory list instead of the voluntary.

The county USDA War Board is taking this means of asking for the cooperation of all farmers having trucks and even passenger cars toward the end that they will be conserved and that insofar as possible the neighbors will pool their interest together. From now on let's all realize the seriousness of the situation and take immediate steps to carry out the above named suggestions.

Hay Crop Needs Wise Handling

Michigan farmers will cut for hay an estimated 1,300,000 acres of alfalfa and alfalfa-grass mixtures, the greatest acreage of improved hay crops ever cut in the state. In addition there is to be an estimated 1,300,000 acres of clover-timothy mixed hays cut in 1942 for curing.

Windrow curing is the best answer to labor-saving and quality, asserts H. C. Rather, head of the Michigan State College farm crops department. The windrow system permits use of the fast-working side delivery rake, hay loaders and sweep rakes or field balers.

Even better hay can be cured in hay cocks, but this process requires 24 hours longer to be safe for storage and also demands extra hand labor.

Swath curing 24 hours or longer effects no saving in labor and makes only a slight shortening of the curing period. At the college it was found swath curing was but three hours quicker than the windrow system.

Too many farmers use the swath curing system. Tests show they lose from 15 to 30 per cent of the hay through shattering of the leaves, as compared to windrow curing. The swath method also is accompanied by a marked decrease in the protein content of the hay and in the feeding value.

Hay, one of Michigan's oldest crops, is gaining new importance in war times. Even before the war the college staff stressed the economy of feeding greater quantities of better quality homegrown roughages to Michigan livestock, lessening production costs by smaller feed purchases of grains and protein supplements.

NATION-WIDE Scrap Rubber Drive ★ JUNE 15-30

Your country needs it...and it may avert gas rationing

You will be paid 1¢ a pound by any Standard Oil Dealer or Agent! Bring your old rubber in today... Urgent!

MILLIONS OF TONS of discarded and worn out rubber articles are gathering dust in the garages, basements, and attics of American homes . . articles useless to you, but all-important to the American war effort.

That rubber can be reclaimed—IF YOU'LL TURN IT IN TO THE GOVERNMENT. Here's a real opportunity for you to help speed the day of victory. And there's another side to it—the shadow of nation-wide gasoline rationing is upon us. Its necessity in the Midwest is based not on a shortage of gasoline but on a need to save tires for possible future war use. If enough scrap rubber is provided by this drive, nation-wide rationing of gasoline may be avoided.

When you bring your scrap rubber to your Standard Oil Dealer, or to any other service station, the rubber will be weighed and you'll get your money at that time. No oil company will receive one penny profit. The difference between the amount we pay and the amount Uncle Sam pays us goes to the USO, Navy Relief, Army Relief and the American Red Cross.

BRING IN all your reclaimable rubber, such as: tires, tubes, boots, rubbers, hot water bottles, garden hose—anything made of rubber.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: To save Norland Airways from bankruptcy, Cruger has agreed to have his partner, Alan Slade, fly a so-called scientist named Frayne to the Anawotto in search of the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. Slade's application for overseas service with the army air corps has been rejected, but he is less disappointed when he learns that the company can stay in business, thanks to their client, who has paid enough to enable Cruger to buy a new plane, a Lockheed. And he is pleased when Cruger tells him that Lynn Morlock, daughter of the "flying Padre" is not going abroad with her Red Cross unit. Slade meets Lynn in town and goes with her to help a man who has been wounded in a fight. The wounded man turns out to be Slim Tumstead, a flyer who has lost his license for drinking and who is little better than an outlaw.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER III

Slade pressed closer as the yellow-faced men, wiping his hands on his apron, hurried out.

The pock-marked man righted the table and chairs as Lynn busied herself loading a hypodermic.

"How is he?" asked Slade.

"He's all right," was the cool-voiced response. "But there's a three-inch skull cut we'll have to close up. How did you get it?"

Slim's lips twitched. But he remained silent.

"How about a drink first?" he suggested, as Lynn turned back to him.

"You've had enough already," she said, quietly impersonal.

"Who gave you that jab?" persisted Slade. The look of the room clearly proclaimed that the fight had been a regal one.

Slim still declined to speak. It was the pock-marked man in the doorway who broke the silence.

"He got it from Wolf Winston," croaked the indignant landlord. "And it's another free-for-all chalked up against this place o' mine."

"Quiet, please," was Lynn's cool-noted admonition.

Wolf Winston, Slade remembered, was a whisky-runner who'd repeatedly braved his adroitness at evading the outstretched arm of the law. He also recalled that Slim, once the crack flyer for Colonial, had been twice grounded for drinking on duty.

"You've had enough already," she said, quietly impersonal.

Still later he had been linked up with Edmonton Scotty's activities as a high-grader. And there'd been a rumor or two that of late he'd been running contraband liquor in from the coast ports.

Slade felt sorry for Tumstead, just as he would feel sorry for any man of promise who threw away his chances. Among flyers, he knew, there was a free-masonry that made you forget a confrere's passing faults. But for a year now Slim had seemed stubbornly headed for trouble.

"This is going to hurt a little," Lynn was saying as she sterilized a bullet-probe, "but we've got to make sure there's no glass in that cut before we close it up."

"A drink would help a little," Slim once more suggested.

"You can have a cigarette," she conceded, "when I put the stitches in."

Slade produced the cigarette and held out his lighter.

Slim looked up at him with an eye that was still indifferently derisive.

"So the big boys took it away from you," he observed.

"Took what away?" asked Slade, resenting the note of mockery.

"That little tin-horn outfit of yours. I hear you're folding up."

"Not on your life," countered Slade. "We've got a new ship and we're going stronger than ever."

The indifferency went out of Tumstead's eye.

"So you've got a new ship. That's certainly worth remembering."

"Why?" challenged Slade.

Tumstead shrugged.

"Oh, I kind of thought the big fight had brought a famine to ships over here. Does that mean you're going to keep on flying the ice routes?"

"I am," proclaimed Slade.

"You'll change your tune," Slim said, "when you get the same dirty deal I got from Colonial."

Slade backed away a little. He had the natural pride of the flyer in flying. And he thought that one of the best in the service could swing so far off-center gave him a sinking feeling.

"I thought it was the other way round," he observed.

Slim's eye-flash of hostility did not escape the younger pilot.

"Oh, I go my own way," the man on the couch announced with a laugh that was not without bitterness. But a note of desolation in the voice brought a surge of pity through Slade.

It was Lynn who spoke next.

"You ought to have a week of rest," she observed as she encircled her patient's head with a white gauze bandage that gave him the air of wearing a crown, slightly tilted.

"Rest?" echoed Tumstead. His laugh was thin yet scornful. "I can't afford to rest, lady. I've got things to do."

Lynn glanced about at the blood-stained furniture.

"You've lost a good deal of blood, remember. And you'll need a new dressing in a day or two. What you'd better do is see Sister Nadeau over at St. Gabriel's."

"When?" asked the man with the bandaged head.

"Tomorrow or next day," said Lynn as she closed her bag and stood up.

"I won't be—"

But Tumstead, for some reason, left that sentence unfinished. He shrugged and glanced at Slade. Then his half-mocking gaze went back to Lynn.

"I'd rather have you do my dressing tomorrow," he said as he reached for her hand. Slade was nettled at the open insolence in that gesture.

"Hasn't she done enough for you?" he demanded.

Tumstead lifted a languid eye to his fellow-flyer.

"Is she letting you make her decisions?" he inquired. The derisive note in that inquiry brought Slade's gaze about to the girl's face. But in that face he found nothing to help him frame an answer.

"Let's go," Lynn said with her first sign of impatience.

Tumstead, stretched out full-length on his couch, looked after them as they moved toward the door.

"Since you're going," he said, still casually insolent, "which way are you heading? I mean you, Slade."

The younger flyer swung about and studied the blanched face under its swathing bandages.

"I'm flying into the Anawotto country tomorrow," he announced.

Tumstead's lips made a whistling sound.

"So they hooked you for that flight!"

Slade, looking down, could see the older pilot smiling up at the ceiling.

"What do you know about it?" he demanded.

Tumstead continued to blink up at the ceiling.

"Not a thing, son, not a thing," he answered with a listless sort of indifference. His movement as he turned to the wall was plainly one of dismissal.

Slade felt happier when he found himself in the open sunlight, the balsam-scented open sunlight of spring, with Lynn walking along at his side. She was close beside him, yet he nursed an impression of her remoteness. And that impression took on an edging of pain as some inner voice told him she was the one thing in all the wide world he wanted.

"So you're not going overseas?" he ventured as he noticed how the sunlight gave glints of gold to her mahogany-brown hair.

"No, I'm going to meet Father at St. Gabriel's," she answered casually, having discerned a light in his eyes which she found a little disturbing.

She was, he knew, evading the real issue.

"And after that?" he prompted.

"I'm flying north with Father in the morning," she announced. She found the courage, as she said it, to meet his gaze.

"What made you change your mind?" asked Slade, puzzled by her loyalty to a life that was giving her so little of what other women cherished for.

"Father isn't young any more. He can't keep on forever. I was hoping he'd give up a sort of work that's too hard for him."

"And too hard for you," proclaimed Slade. He was remembering, at the moment, how she and the Flying Padre had been grounded by a blizzard, the winter before, and had kept life in their bodies by dining on their own mukluks of untanned sealskin, well boiled.

That, Slade told himself, was no life for a girl. She was of too fine a fiber for such frontier roughness. It impressed him as too much like trying to grow a flower in a stamping mill.

"Did your father ask you to stay on?" Slade questioned.

"He'd never do that," was her prompt reply. "He's too big and fine to let his own interests come first."

"Of course," said Slade, wondering if there was a hidden reproof in that reply.

"But I was hoping," Lynn continued, "that Father would give up flying and settle down."

Slade's smile was brief and slightly bitter.

"That," he affirmed, "is something not easy to get out of your system."

"You'll have to, some day," she reminded him.

He seemed to catch a faint glimmer of hope from that.

"There's only one thing," he said, "could ever turn me into a chair-warmer."

"What?" she asked.

"You," he answered with unexpected grimness.

She did not look up at him. But she quickened her stride a little.

"I thought we weren't going into that again."

He knew it was useless to argue the point. But that newer look of firmness in her face brought an answering firmness to his own slightly rebellious lips. For at the back of his mind lurked a suspicion that more and more refused to stay down.

"Were you going to the front because Barrett Walden was there?" he asked. It was his effort to keep all trace of bitterness out of his voice, apparently, that brought a small and womanly smile to Lynn's lips.

"Barrett Walden's not at the front," she said. "He's in an instruction camp at Aldershot."

"But he wanted you to go overseas?" pursued her none too happy companion.

"Barrett's been a very good friend to Father. He's never forgotten that Dad saved his life, and—"

"And you were his nurse at Fort St. John for four weeks," cut in the unhappy Slade.

"Father," Lynn was saying, "is very fond of Barrett. And Barrett feels the same way about the Padre." She walked on in silence for a moment. "He's been trying to get him a berth in the Department of Mines at Ottawa."

"Where he'd mope like a caged eagle," was Slade's slightly embittered comment.

"He's not the moping kind," protested the girl.

Slade made no comment on that. He remembered the flash of fire from those same eyes when he had once spoken of the Flying Padre's occupation as quixotic.

"A flyer never wants to give up," he observed.

Lynn came to a stop. The face she turned to her companion was a clouded one.

"That's what frightens me, Alan," she quietly acknowledged. "They don't always stop in time."

"The Padre knows the ropes all right," Slade protested.

"But something happened last month," the girl was saying, "when we were flying in to Coronation. It was good weather and everything was going nicely, with Father at the controls. Then I saw that something was wrong. I had to jump in and straighten out the ship. Father, all of a sudden, didn't know where he was. Everything went blank, for a moment or two. He said, later, it was like a switch turned off and then turned on again. But things like that mustn't happen to a flyer."

Slade shrugged and smiled, mercifully intent on easing the concern out of her eyes.

"There's many a bush flyer gets over-tired," he casually affirmed.

"That's what Father said. He claimed he'd been careless about his eating and had been going too hard. But when I saw him with those empty eyes and that cold sweat on his face, I knew it went deeper than he pretended."

Slade forced a laugh.

"He's clipped many a cloud since then. And he'll keep going until they ground him for old age."

The clouded hazel eyes searched his face.

"But can't you see, Alan, what I'm fighting for? Can't you understand how we all want security? How, when we love someone, we have to think of his future?"

Slade looked down into the hazel eyes. Their loveliness sent a wave of recklessness through him.

"It's your future I'd rather think of," he asserted.

But the girl with the clouded eyes didn't seem to hear him.

"I'm all Father has now."

"Ship Ahoy"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer reflects America's jive jitters by starring Tommy Dorsey and his band with Eleanor Powell and Red Skelton in "Ship Ahoy," musical comedy opening at the Palace Theatre on June 20 for a two-day engagement.

"Ship Ahoy" provides the band with six numbers, among them "I'll Take Tallulah," "Poor You," "Last Call for Love," and "Moonlight Bay," in which both Frank Sinatra, soloist, and the Piped Pipers are featured.

Miss Powell is seen in four elaborate production numbers, assisted by twenty-seven of Hollywood's most glamorous showgirls. Red Skelton, in the role of a hypochondriac mystery writer, plays the male romantic lead. More fun-making is contributed by Bert Lahr and Virginia O'Brien, with William Post, Jr., following his screen debut in "Mr. and Mrs. North," as the G-Man.

PERHAPS WE WILL GET A BREAK

It appears that the threatened gas rationing for the middle west may be postponed until Labor Day or even indefinitely. If this is true the Grand Traverse Region will have a normal tourist and resort season.

This is the year people want to and must take vacations. In defense areas men, and women too, are putting in longer hours than usual, turning out the munitions of war necessary to defeat the axis. If ever they needed vacations they need them this year. Unless they get away from the strain of war work their work suffers and they can do more work in 50 weeks with two weeks vacation, than in 52 weeks with no vacation.

The only thing which has been holding these people back is the fear that gas rationing might hit them before they start or while they are on their vacations. With this fear removed, we should see a lot of them up here this summer. —Traverse City Record-Eagle.

Some thought is being given the matter of the establishment of pick-up stations in various sections as well as the possibility of a collection system similar to that used by creameries in various parts of the state. This is being done in lieu of any transportation problems which might result during the late fall months.

Three more Michigan counties, Delta, Luce and Schoolcraft, are among the 76 in the United States recently accredited by the USDA as practically free of Bang's disease or brucellosis. Cooperative testing of cattle in the United States is being conducted in 181 additional counties in 25 states. DRIVE FOR SCRAP RUBBER STARTED

Any person desiring to do so may contribute rubber to the USO, Red Cross and Army and Navy Relief, jointly. All that is required is that they inform the oil station operator of their desire to make such a contribution. Records will be kept so that proper credit will be given and, as an added convenience, the city will place barrels at various downtown locations in which such contributions may be placed.

The campaign in rural areas, it is understood, will be organized by H. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent, cooperating with the defense council.

It is urged by city and county officials that every man, woman and child do their part by assisting in the campaign.

WILL SEEK RECOGNITION FOR EDIBLE "ROUGH FISH"

Fertilizer Use Expands

Michigan's use of commercial fertilizers continues to expand. In contrast to the 144,500 tons used by farmers in 1937, the sales in the state in 1941, including government distribution, had climbed to 190,025 tons. A national survey of fertilizer demands indicates the center of fertilizer consumption has been moving slowly north and west in the United States.

"GET IN SCRAP" RUBBER CAMPAIGN IN FULL SWING

Acting under the plan announced by President Roosevelt June 12, local oil men are now engaged in a whirlwind campaign to "get in the scrap rubber."

The campaign started June 15 and will last until June 30. In that time it is expected that all the available old rubber in the nation will be assembled at service stations and oil industry outlets.

Stations and collectors are paying a cent a pound for the scrap. The oil companies will sell their collections to the federal government at $25.00 per ton of 2,000 pounds. The difference between that amount and the cost of the scrap is to be donated to the USO, Red Cross, and Army and Navy Relief. No one will make any profit from the drive.

According to information which has been received by Clair S. Webster, local representative of Standard Oil, the necessity for gasoline rationing in this part of the country may be averted if the scrap drive proves successful.

Standard Oil dealers operating receiving stations are Bert Beaudoin, Clenroy Ikens and E. E. Cross.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The 155-millimeter gun is the modern version of the old "GPF" of World War I days. It has a range fifty percent greater than the old gun, heaving a 95-pound projectile approximately 15 miles. It is capable of high road speed and each one costs $50,000.

Arsenals of America are working at terrific speed turning out this long range, effective weapon for our armed forces. You and your neighbor working hand-in-hand in unity can make possible the purchase of an adequate number of these guns by buying War Bonds. Put 10 percent of your income in War Bonds to help reach your county quota, every pay day.

ATTACK! ATTACK! ATTACK!

America's attacking on both the fighting front and the home front today!

We're giving the Axis a bitter taste of what's to come.

We're fighting the inflationary 5th column that blows prices sky high here at home, too.

And every one of us who saves at least 10% of his pay in War Bonds is an important soldier in the attack!

Join the attack yourself!

OVER THE TOP FOR VICTORY with UNITED STATES WAR BONDS-STAMPS

When the National Tuberculosis Association gathers for its 38th annual meeting in Philadelphia May 0, the chief speaker will be Dr. Bruce H. Dugias, of Detroit, who is president of the organization. The meeting will study ways to combat the increase of tuberculosis which has always accompanied war. England already reports an increase in tuberculosis and several American cities show a rise in the disease.

The production of flaxseed in Michigan is confined largely to two counties, Chippawa and Mackinac.

ELLSWORTH CANNERY PLANS BIGGEST YEAR

Reid Murdoch Will Make Largest Cherry Pack In History

The Reid Murdoch canning factory, Ellsworth's leading industry, is getting ready for the biggest cherry pack in the history of the concern, according to Elmer H. Rood, manager.

The frost of early May did very little damage to the cherry crop, only about 25 per cent being lost, it is believed.

Mr. Rood states that he expects to can two million pounds more than any year since the cannery started operation. Three million pounds is the most that this cannery has packed.

The pack of asparagus was finished last week.

 THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN ***

Donald Nelson, America's production chief, paid a flying visit to Michigan last week end saw for himself the flow of war goods from giant industrial plants.

He was pleased. So was Oliver Lyttelton, British Minister of Production, who accompanied him.

Looking back over the road we have traveled in the last six months, we may find proof of great accomplishments. Today, with our civilian economy reorganized, our warships and our soldiers poised for action in every quarter of the globe, our war industries reaching out toward the President's goal of tanks and planes and guns and ships, we can be forgiven pride in what we have done.

But our pride in past achievement must not tempt us to relax.

Unity, Sacrifice, Action

Continued far-reaching changes in the lives of every citizen on the Home Front—Iowa or Michigan—are certain during the next few months.

Food, clothing, transportation and housing are the four principal fields in which changes have been wrought and in which even greater changes may be expected.

Specialists in the Division of Civilian Supply have been working to determine the needs of the civilian population and to correlate these needs with the exigencies of a war economy.

Save and Sacrifice

The food picture can be comforting or discomforting, depending on how we look at it. From the comforting side, it may be said categorically that there is no danger that this country will lack a sufficient supply of staples or that the American diet will lack its vital elements.

On the other hand, while we can be sure of a balanced, nourishing diet, it also is clear that some of our eating habits may have to be revised.

Sugar is being rationed. That cuts down our supply of sweets. Coffee, tea and bananas are not as freely available as they used to be—because of the shipping situation. Other things which must be imported may be lacking from our customary menus.

Some of our fishing areas are being closed by the war, or are concentrating on Army, Navy and Lend-Lease requirements. The job of sending our allies food, such as pork, imposes an increasing demand on the supply.

We Must Feed Our Friends

Home Fronters can help in many ways. Don't hoard. Don't overbuy. Don't waste food. Eat fresh fruits and vegetables to diminish the requirements for tin cans. Try to get locally-grown vegetables to diminish requirements for food transportation. Eat substitutes for fish and pork.

This country has plenty of food. Changing food habits doesn't necessarily mean changing them for the worse.

Share and Share Alike

It appears now that rationing of clothing can be avoided this year. There will be additional style modifications. The public will have to wear more cotton, less wool. Military demands for wool are very heavy. Cloth manufacturers will have to blend wool with other materials in order to conserve.

Garments likely will not be as glamorous as formerly.

Leather presents another problem. Demands of our armed forces for shoes increases heavily. There are plenty of shoes in the stores, so there is nothing to get excited about now.

We are all going to be warmly and adequately clothed but "dressing as usual" no longer will be possible.

We All Are at War

Transportation difficulties will have broad effect upon our daily lives. There'll be fewer bridge parties, unless the ladies have only short distances to go to the home of the hostess. There will be less social life in the evening, unless confined to the neighborhood. Mr. and Mrs. America will have to get acquainted with the neighbors, trade at closeby stores, attend neighborhood movies, accept a greatly curtailed variety of goods and dispense with the customary desire for a change in scenery.

Also, we should lay in our supplies of coal now in order to take some of the strain off our transportation facilities this fall.

One Aim: Victory

All available housing space in critical defense areas will have to be utilized. Demands of the war program for steel is going to limit new construction to absolutely essential needs of war workers.

Compulsory billeting of war workers has been resorted to in England; also unoccupied houses have been commandeered. These measures haven't become necessary in this country yet.

BUY WAR STAMPS and BONDS AT THIS THEATRE

"...a vital force for Victory"

A NEWSPAPER editorial recently stated: "In this war banks are doing more than provide financial services . . . they are a vital force for Victory." The nation's banks are doing much to help win the war. They aid in financing, in war production, in keeping the economic machine running and other ways. Banks ask for no praise or special credit. We are proud to be of help, and anxious to be still more helpful in the future.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
11th District, Michigan
Fred Bradley

The principal headacho in Washington last week was the proposal to ration gasoline in the Middle West; the only possible justification for which is the conservation of rubber tires. The storm of protest which descended on congress from all sections of the country reach such proportions that it is said the President even called the cabinet into session to discuss the matter, and on Friday called in the "unofficial cabinet" consisting of all the chiefs of his war-making agencies. The latter, realizing what a hot potato they had on their hands, dumped it squarely into the personal lap of the President, and it is expected that he may even have to deliver a fireside chat to sell the idea to the American people.

Meanwhile congress has not been idle in the matter. Numerous personal appeals to Henderson for relief from, or to say the least a justification for, this order were sent out of practically every congressional and senatorial office in Washington. More than a hundred of us held a mass meeting in protest on Friday, June 5, following which a house joint resolution was introduced by Representative Johnson of Oklahoma demanding a congressional inquiry into the entire rubber and gasoline situation and prohibiting putting any such drastic regulation into effect until a committee had submitted its findings to congress. In short, the sentiment was to the effect that the powers which congress has given away, the congress can take back, if these powers are unjustly or unwisely administered.

Back of the whole picture, however, the possibility of employment of political strategy in an election year—to the detriment of the entire war effort, through the destruction of much of our nation economy and certainly our national morale—rears its ugly head. Last week it became known that Mr. Henderson wanted to employ an army of 100,000 agents, characterized by Representative Johnson as his personal "Gestapo," to enforce his various rationing and price ceiling orders, including, of course, the proposed gasoline rationing program. And we are also reminded of the fact when Mr. Morgenthau proposed the imposition of a payroll withholding tax, he neglected to tell the Ways and Means Committee, as did the Collector of Internal Revenue later, that this would require the employment of some 12,500 pseudo auditors to check the payrolls of the nation to be certain that the tax was being withheld.

After all, we are at war—at war for our very existence—and is it not strange that anyone should think that the American people will not patriotically and voluntarily respond to any demand which is put upon them if the necessity for that demand has been made clear to the people? Have we reached the stage in this country when we in Washington have lost faith in the honesty, the integrity and the patriotism of the American people? Or, must we have politics as usual—war or no war?

I am very much disturbed by another matter which has come to light recently, because I do not know how far-reaching it may be in its ultimate consequences. I want to quote a speech delivered on the floor of the house by the Honorable John E. Rankin of Mississippi on May 28:

"Mr. Speaker, one of the most vicious movements that has yet been instituted by the crackpots, the Communists, and parlor pinks of this country is that of trying to browbeat the American Red Cross into taking the labels off the blood bank they are building up for our wounded boys in the service so that it will not show whether it is Negro blood or white blood.

"That seems to be one of the schemes of these fellow travelers to try to mongrelize this nation.

"They are not so much interested in its effect upon our wounded boys as they are in carrying out their Communist program.

"Thank God, the Red Cross has stood its ground and refused to permit this outfit to have Negro blood pumped into the veins of our wounded white men on the various fronts.

"That is no discrimination against the Negroes. I am not sure that it would not be as detrimental to a Negro to pump the blood of some other race into his veins as it would be to pump Negro blood or Japanese blood into the veins of white men.

"Being unable to browbeat the Red Cross into submission, they are now bringing pressure to bear upon the OCD to try to get them to take the labels off the blood they are storing for the civilians of this country when a disaster occurs. They seem to have some crackpot alien doctors advising them that it makes no difference what race this blood comes from. I suppose that these doctors and their fellow travelers would contend that it would be all right to fill our soldiers full of Japanese blood.

"They had better remember that there is still a congress of the United States, and that congress represents the American people, and that the American people through their congress are not going to permit such outrages against our wounded boys at the front, or against our men, women and children who are injured in local disasters.

"One of the papers that has been urging or advocating taking these labels off this blood is a New York tabloid known as "PM." In its edition of Friday, May 22, it quotes one of these doctors as saying that "Whether the blood comes from Negro or white makes no difference whatsoever."

"I am calling this to the attention of congress now, so that each and every one of you may know what is going on. I am going to demand that the OCD label this blood it is storing up to be used on the men, women and children of this country just as the Red Cross is doing that to be used in treating our injured men in the armed forces."

Frankly, as my readers well know, I am not a doctor and have had no medical training whatsoever. I have inquired of several doctors who are members of congress as to what possible effects of this proposal might be, if carried out, and they seem to be in doubt about it. To me the program doesn't sound like it is justified in any sense of the word. I will welcome an expression of opinion or an expression of fact from any of the doctors in our district, who might read this communication. If it is not going to be detrimental, then it seems to me that our soldier boys—who after all are the ones most vitally interest in this matter—should know no harm would come from a program of this kind, if put into effect. On the other hand, if it is going to be detrimental in any sense of the word, then it must be stopped—and stopped right now.

MILKING A COW BECOMES AN ART

There's more to this job of milking a cow than meets the eye.

All jokes about faucets forgotten, take the word of a man who has studied cow psychology and the chemistry and other mysteries of why a cow gives milk. Milking is a combination of habit, regularity, speed and wise management, claims C. F. Huffman, dairy nutrition authority at Michigan State College.

A hormone produced by a little gland at the base of the brain puts a product into the blood which travels to the udder and stimulates the muscles surrounding the little sacklike glands to contract and squeeze out the milk. The effect of this chemical passenger, Dr. Huffman points out, is of short duration. If the milker does not get the milk while it is under pressure, he does not get it.

No need then to bang a milk stool over a cow's hips if she doesn't "let down" her milk. According to Dr. Huffman, it's the dairyman's fault for not milking her at the proper time or within proper time limits. Milking, likewise, is no time for nodding or day-dreaming.

Cows often get into the habit of giving down milk at a regular signal, like the rattling of a feed cart, starting of the milking machine or when she is eating grain.

The whole study aids a dairyman in contributing to war production without adding extra animals or feeding much extra feed.

Other tips suggested by Huffman include:

If milking twice daily, space the periods 12 hours apart.

If a cow's teats begin to leak before she is milked, give her a little more priority in the milking order.

Presence of a strange dog in the barns at milking time may keep a cow from giving down her milk. It's an involuntary reaction and no cause for swinging the milk stool or aiming a boot at the cow.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

During these times of sugar shortage and rationing, it may be of general interest to people to know that under the AAA food drive, an increase of 25 percent in sugar beets and sugar cane acreage has been assured for 1942. This assures us of a greater domestic supply during the coming year, but this will not entirely make up the shortage caused by the loss of the Philippine Islands. It must be remembered, however, that the United States is supplying all allies with the food necessary for successfully carrying on the war so there will be no home surplus.

The farm check-up by AAA committeemen is in full swing throughout the county. Considering the delays in farming operations caused by heavy rains, the farmers are to be congratulated on being up to par and even exceeding their promised increases. Full food production is assured in Charlevoix county.

If your scrap iron and rubber has not been called for, notify the AAA office in Boyne City and it will be reported to the county War Board. The scrap is greatly needed—both rubber and iron. So get on the job.

* FROM THE GARDEN CLUB *

* * * * * * * * * * *

Vegetable gardens ought not to be planted where drainage is bad and everywhere else drouth soon becomes a problem. Even on wet land, soil oxygen is likely to be low, with the result that roots grow poorly and plants soon thirst when even moderate drying out occurs.

We cannot argue Jupiter Pluvius into doing his bit, but we have many other resources to combat drouth.

First it pays to keep the soil full of organic matter. A big dressing of stable manure each year helps greatly. Or the garden patch may be doubled in size and the halves alternated, planting them in vegetables one year and green crops the next.

Another scheme is to lay down a mulch of either manure, composted leaves, half-rotted hay or straw between the rows. This curbs evaporation and keeps the weeds down. It is good practice for tomatoes and the vine crops, which run over the ground. Such a mulch also helps keep the fruit clean and attractive.

Remember, too, the fact that weeds are among the worst water wasters. Don't give them a chance.

These measures help greatly in fighting drouth, but in many cases they are not enough. Even though drouth may not be conquered, it need not be too discouraging. Planting the right things at the right seasons, using good methods in sowing seeds, and exercising a full measure of patience and persistence will bring vegetables when moisture conditions are not favorable.

You could build a four-engine bombing plane with the aluminum in 20,000 1-pound skillets.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Station Hospital,
Medical Detachment,
Camp Gruber, Okla.
June 12-42

Dear Ken:

I have moved again for the third time and I hope it will be the last. Fort Sill was a good camp and the boys there were fine but being in a new camp and being sent down with the first bunch of boys to open up a hospital makes you think that you are doing better than some of the other boys that didn't come.

The camp is in Cookson Hills and the hospital is on the side of the hill and you can't see it from the air. I think that this is to be the fourth largest camp in the United States. The hospital isn't ready for us to move into yet so we are staying in the Quartermasters' barracks and we don't have very much to do. We left Fort Sill Friday afternoon at one-thirty and we didn't get to Camp Gruber till nine Saturday morning. All we did Saturday was to get our beds and mattresses and when it came time to go to bed we didn't have any sheets or blankets, so we had to use our overcoats to keep warm.

Sunday I had to help unload a truck load of medical things and that is all the work I have done till today they put me on the trash truck. I guess that I will be on it till we move into the hospital, then I don't know what I will be doing.

I received the paper today and it is sure nice to get the paper because you can always read what is going on at home. If I hadn't read in the paper about F. W. Myers moving I wouldn't know the old town whenever I came home.

I can't think of anything else to say so will close for now.

Yours truly,
Lyle W. Ross.

Razorblade steel saved by a WPB order - 1,550 tons - is enough to provide 40-pound tail assemblies for 77,500 2,000-pound aerial bombs for use, perhaps, against the city of Tokyo.

are under instruction to pave the way for a peace offensive. A warning of such an Axis move was sounded in May by Archibald MacLeish, director of the Office of Facts and Figures, Washington, D. C.

As it has been explained to us, here lies the reasoning for the peace offensive. Recent speeches by Hitler, Goering and Tojo have emphasized the idea of a hard struggle ahead. Yet stories of shortages of manpower, shortages of food, were permitted to get out, although such news could have been suppressed.

Field Marshall Goering, in a speach on May 23, 1942, made this astonishing admission: "I know that despair is easy when, after having planted in the fall season, you now find in spring that the greater part of the seed has not come up. We must plow and sow again, and in spite of all, we must harvest."

Goering closed with an admonition: "I should only like to beg a hardening to a greater extent of each individual at home that he will say to himself, 'We must hold out in this war irrespective of how long it may last.' "

For many weeks we have read in our favorite newspaper, and probably heard on radio broadcasts, a long series of favorable news events.

For the first time United Nations air forces are strong enough to strike in four-figure plane raids over Cologne and the Ruhr district, seat of great munitions factories.

The Russian news has been generally favorable. The American raid on Tokyo was a spectacular exploit, popularized by the dramatically planned scene whereby President Roosevelt awarded the Congressional medal to General Jimmy Doolittle at the White House.

We had favorable news from the Coral Sea battle, while our losses were suppressed temporarily in order not to aid the enemy. Naval news from Midway and Dutch Harbor have been likewise optimistic, and our losses are being similarly withheld from the Axis—but also from the American public.

This false one-sidedness of the war news parallels the grim reality that the Japanese, whom one radio commentator said on Dec. 7 we could defeat any "Wednesday afternoon," have conquered the Philippines, Dutch East Indies, Singapore, and Burma, and now stand at the gates of India and Australia—all of this being accomplished in six months' time!

Although Russia has maintained a reasonably effective offensive, she has not yet succeeded in seizing the major key bases on which Germany's defense depends.

And Germany, although engaged in heavy fighting on the Russian front and therefore pressed for manpower, nevertheless mustered enough strength to start her own "second front," the offensive under General Rommel in Libya.

While there are many signs of unrest in the occupied countries, no signs can be found that German troops in the occupied countries have lost control.

And in spite of the bombings and the superiority of the Allied air forces in the west, a second front by invasion is still a long way off. American troops in northern Ireland, while armed to the teeth with the best of armored equipment, number only few divisions compared with German strength in France as estimated by foreign correspondents.

A most difficult situation confronts us in the matter of ocean-going transport, with ships being sunk faster than we can build them.

As of June 2, according to published reports, the toll taken by Axis submarines in American waters since Pearl Harbor had mounted to 234 ships. Assemble these vessels together and you would have a sizeable fleet—a disastrous loss! And yet, like automobile accidents, the sinking of boats off the Atlantic coast have been so commonplace they seldom occupy page one position in the day's news.

According to all facts which can be assembled, we can reasonably anticipate that the war will continue for 18 to 24 months. Even if Germany collapses by 1943, a minimum of a year would be expected to transport troops and supplies to the Orient for a decisive showdown with the Japanese.

And, when the war is won and a long armistice is proclaimed, we cannot expect that millions of American men must be maintained at fighting fronts on land and sea scattered over the globe to police conquered nations and to maintain world order?

An American army of 7,000,000 men is now in the making. Congress has just authorized another tremendous increase in our naval strength.

Instead of repeating whispered rumors about "victory in 1942" whether inspired by favorable news together with suppression of our military losses or by a "peace offensive" by Axis agents, the Michigan home front must maintain 24-hour production in its arms plants, must shun temptations to minimize sacrifice, and must continue its "all-out" spirit of determination to win—as Goering himself declared—"irrespective of how long it (the war) may last."

A Busted Hot Water Bottle May Help Win The War!

REMEMBER the old time ballad which says, "For the want of a rider a battle was lost?" Well, we are not going to lose this war, but a leaky hot water bottle may supply the extra ounce of scrap rubber that will more quickly give the Axis the axe.

Uncle Sam wants that old rubber right now!

Yes, the government wants every disused or worn out article made of rubber that can be sent to the nation's stock pile, and wants you to help get it there in a hurry.

Oil Industry is collecting it!

Starting June 15th, and continuing through June 30th, gasoline stations from coast to coast will help collect scrap rubber and will pay . . .

A penny a pound spot cash for every pound!

contributed by you . . . so take all the old rubber you can collect to the nearest gas station today.

None of the oil companies will receive one penny of profit for this service to the nation. Through the cooperation and efforts of thousands of dealers and gasoline company employees, the scrap rubber will be turned over to the government and will be paid for by Uncle Sam on the basis of $25 per ton (2000 pounds). The difference between the amount paid by the oil companies and the amount paid by the government has been pledged to the USO, Navy Relief, Army Relief and American Red Cross.

May help avert gasoline rationing in Central West

Since a shortage of rubber is considered the main reason for the threatened rationing of gasoline in the central states, this is one important way to do your part, and it may help to ward off the need for curtailment of this vital commodity.

ready cooked, in which clothes never wore out and washing was as easy as the soap-makers' advertisements described it, in which roles had no exceptions and things never went wrong, would be a much easier place to live in. But for purposes of training and development it would be worth nothing at all. It is the resistance that puts us on our mettle: it is the conquest of the reluctant stuff that educates the worker. I wish you enough difficulties to keep you well and make you strong and skilful."

Two men laboriously collected American slang expressions, grouped them for ready reference, and put them in a book of 1,175 pages, recently published and selling at five-dollars. The title is Thesaurus of Slang. The authors are Lester V. Berry and Melvin Van Den Bark. An unusual feature of the monumental volume is that it contains the naughty words used by little boys and big men to describe physical parts and functions. Louise Pound, famous word-student of the University of Nebraska who writes the foreword says that the largest group of slang in America consists of words that have been invented to express personal disparagement, especially words reflecting on someone's mentality. Another group consists of derisive terms for women and girls, while the descriptive terms for intoxication are so numerous that they appear in fourteen divisions and occupy five solid pages. This is a book that can't be reviewed except by being quoted. You have to read it to realize how complete it is. Just a few of the 250 words listed under nonsense will give you the flavor. Here are 23: Applesauce, asparagus, baloney, banana oil, bilge, birdseed, b.s., bull, boncombe, bunk, bushwah, crap, eye-wash, fertilizer, flooey, goulash, hogwash, hooey, horse-feathers, meadow dressing, nerts, piffle, tripe. Of all books to give to people who "don't read books," this one, I think, would be surest to make a hit.

Occasionally you run across a man who wishes he were young enough to fight, but not often.

Steelhead fishing was good Tuesday evening for some fellows. Saw a party out with Don Clothier catch three, another group on the cruiser Katie B. got two and J. C. Marshall a single. It all happened within an hour or a little better and that isn't bad angling. As for myself, I came in empty-handed as usual. Brook trout fishing, by the way, is the best in years. There's two reasons for it, I believe. One is lack of fishermen and the other plentiful rain. In past years it was almost necessary to give a whistle signal before casting on the Jordan river. This season you practically have the whole place to yourself. So don't let anyone kid you into believing people haven't certained pleasure driving, for when fishin' "bugs" stay at home, it's a sure sign.

One thing I've observed is that most of us never even approach the perfection we demand from our children.

OPEN OPA OFFICE AT TRAVERSE CITY SOON

L. P. Kalahar Will Be Manager of 22 Counties In District

An Office of Price Administration headquarters serving 22 Northern Michigan counties will be established immediately at Traverse City with Leo P. Kalahar as district manager.

Mr. Kalahar will have an executive staff of four, including an attorney and investigators, to assist him and, for the present, will employ an additional clerical staff of eight or nine stenographers and clerks.

"Chief function of our district office will be educational," Mr. Kalahar stated this morning. "While we also have enforcement powers, our aim is to familiarize every consumer and every retailer in this district with the operation of the Office of Price Administration. There is certain to be confusion when as sweeping an order as the price ceiling rule becomes effective. Retailer and consumer alike are not yet certain of its operations and their rights under it. Our office is to serve both the buyer and seller, protecting and educating both. We will interpret the OPA rulings and pass them on to merchant and customer."

The counties in this district are: Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Clare, Crawford, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kaikaska, Lake, Leelanau, Manistee, Mason, Missaukee, Montmorency, Ogemaw, Osceola, Oscoda, Otsego, Presque Isle, Roscommon and Wexford.

RETAILERS REQUIRED TO FILE BY JULY 1ST

Report on Commodity Ceilings Required by OPA Office

Michigan retailers must file a list of their "cost of living" commodities and their price ceilings by July 1, with their local price and rationing boards, according to Arthur H. Sarvis, State director of the Office of Price Administration.

The original filing date of June 1, set by the general maximum price regulations which became effective for retailers May 18, has been extended to July 1, Sarvis said, to enable the retailer to acquaint himself better with the regulations and requirements.

Sarvis asked retailers to make certain their lists are filed locally, and not sent to the state OPA headquarters in Detroit, where several hundred have already been received. Each county has its own board, Sarvis pointed out, with the county clerk as administrator in most cases.

ARCHERY RANGE TO BE NEW SPORTS FEATURE

Location of Target Near Charlevoix Golf Club Planned

Among numerous features planned by the board of commerce for entertainment of summer visitors will be an archery range, according to Stewart E. Crieman, activities director.

The target, now being prepared, will be located on the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Club property adjacent to the clubhouse. Competition in this sport will be arranged providing interest warrants.

HIGH, INSTEAD OF LOW WATER BRINGS COMPLAINT

Accustomed for years to investigating complaints of low water levels in lakes, the conservation department's geological survey this season has experienced a change of pace and now is advising lakeshore cottage owners what can or cannot be done about high water levels caused by war conditions and unusual May rains.

VICTORY GARDENS

Michigan Council of Defense

Things to remember about insecticides:

1. Rotenone or pyrethrum are the safest materials for the amateur to use in the home garden, as they are not poisonous to humans and are safe to have around, especially where children may have access to them.

2. Arsenate of lead, Paris Green or Hellebore are arsenical materials which will secure good results, BUT arsenicals when taken in excess are deadly. And care must be taken to store them where they will not be consumed by animals or by children.

Insects which feed within the stems of plants:

1. Cutworms: Will cut off young plants just above, beneath or at the surface of the soil. May be controlled by a poison bran mash made by mixing pounds of wheat bran and two tablespoonsful of Paris Green or white arsenic. Another way to wrap a piece of manila paper around the plant stem, extending an inch or two below and above the soil.

2. Cabbage-root Maggot: A small fly which lays eggs hatching into maggots which favor cabbage, cauliflower, early radish, turnips and mustard. May be controlled by placing tar-paper squares about three inches square (with a small hole slit from side to the center) around the plant. The odor of tar will keep the flies from laying their eggs near the plant.

3. Onion maggot: Attack onions and turn infected plants yellow or sickly. If the onions have been infested they should be pulled and destroyed. Effective control is by treating the seed with calomel.

4. Squash bug: Commonly known as the stink bug, because of its offensive odor. Attacks squash, pumpkins and sometimes melons and cucumbers. There is no satisfactory control for this insect, other than to trap the adult bugs under pieces of board laid on the ground around the vine and then killing the bugs. The young insects may be killed with a nicotine sulphate spray.

5. Squash vine borer: which burrows into the stem. After the borer once gets inside the stem, there is no treatment or material to protect the plant, except by splitting the stems lengthwise with a sharp knife and destroying the borer. Then the soil should be drawn about the base of the plant so that new roots may be formed above the point of contact. The adult moths, which are often mistaken for wasps, may be caught in the evening as they rest on the leaves of the vine. Rotenone may be applied before the young worms gain entrance to the stem.

6. Corn-ear worms: Large, brownish-looking worms found in the tips of ears of sweet corn, may be controlled by squeezing the tip of each ear between the thumb and finger from five to seven days after the silk appears or when the silk starts to turn a brownish color and begins to dry. Or you can take shears and cut off a half inch of the tip of the husk after the silks taper.

7. European Corn-borer: Rather a difficult insect to control. Its first appearance may be noted by the breaking over of the tassels, and upon close examination on the inside of the stalk the borer may be found. The most practical form of control is to destroy all of the plants in the fall, which will kill the over-wintering larvae. As a practical control, both the nicotine bentonite dust and a rotenone dust containing at least ¾ per cent rotenone are recommended. They should be used at least four times at weekly intervals.

All this talk of bugs and sprays may sound sinister and discouraging, but don't let that stop you from having the fun of a Victory Garden. After all, most bugs can be controlled through rather simple means.

AMERICAN PRISONERS OF WAR MAY BE AIDED

Four Red Cross Societies Plan Shipment to Far East

American prisoners held by Japan may soon receive food and other supplies through the Australian Red Cross, if arrangements made by the British, Canadian, American and Australian Red Cross societies are agreed upon by the Japanese government.

Shipment will be made from Australia as soon as the Japanese have consented to distribution of supplies under supervision of the recently appointed delegate of the International Red Cross Committee to Japan.

This plan for getting supplies to prisoners of war of the allied nations in the Far East follows the method which has been used by the Australian Red Cross since the beginning of the present conflict. In an effort to get relief supplies to Anzac prisoners of war as efficiently as possible, funds have been provided to the Canadian Red Cross for preparation of standard food packages to be shipped to Australian fighters held prisoner in the Middle East and other distant battle fronts, thus making a shorter ocean voyage between prisoners and supplies.

MICHIGAN CROPS ARE IN EXCELLENT SHAPE

Record Production Expected for Wheat, Rye and Corn

The condition of general field crops in Michigan was reported "several points" above average June 1, V. H. Church, senior statistician for the Michigan Cooperative Crop Reporting Service, said today.

Church said the winter wheat crop headed earlier than usual; that the growth of straw generally was shorter than average; but the condition was uniformly good except in a few counties along the Michigan-Indiana line where May rainfall was deficient.

The Michigan rye crop was expected, according to report, to reach 1,078,000 bushels compared to 783,000 bushels last year. The estimated yield was 14 bushels per acre.

Corn planted in Michigan was expected to produce 49,500,000 bushels or 8 per cent more than last year.

The condition of tame hay in Michigan was reported at 83 per cent of normal compared with a ten year average of 77 per cent.

BOARDS MAKE READY NEXT REGISTRATION

Youth Class Between 18 and 20 Years Will Be Registered

Local draft boards have been instructed by state selective service headquarters to prepare for the fifth selective service registration set by President Roosevelt for June 30.

An estimated 150,000 youths between the ages of 18 and 20 were expected to register. Under present law they cannot be drafted.

Lt.-Col. E. M. Rosecrans, state selective service director, said that more than 1,700,000 Michigan men already had been registered for the draft and that completion of the June 30 registration would result in the listing of all men in the state born prior to June 30, 1922, who are under 65 years of age.

For the benefit of youths who are already working in war factories, special registrations will be held at local boards on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday preceding registration day, Rosecrans said.

COAST GUARD INSPECTION SET UP

ANCHORAGE OFFICE FOR DISTRICT LOCATED HERE

Boatswain Louis Mosier In Charge of Office and Patrol Boat for Inspection, Convoy Duty

A Coast Guard Anchorage Office, providing inspection service for the area embraced by the Charlevoix Coast Guard district, has been established in Charlevoix.

Louis Mosier, Boatswain, 1st class, located at the Charlevoix station until recent transfer to Chicago, is the commanding officer. Coast Guard Patrol C. G. R. 1608, a 50-foot twin-screw converted yacht which was brought here last Thursday, will be used for patrol work. The boat has a crew of five in addition to the commander.

Mr. Mosier explained that the duties of the patrol will be to render any possible assistance to navigation in an area from the Manitou Island passage to and including entrance to the Straits of Mackinaw, convoy cargo vessels in this territory to unloading points and provide guard during discharge of such cargoes as gasoline, coal, etc., at Traverse City, Boyne City, East Jordan, Charlevoix and other lake ports. Inspection service will include identification of operators and crews, inspection of ship's papers, numbers, equipment, etc.

Shore duties of the Anchorage office will include issuance of Coast Guard identification cards required to be held by boat operators and regular crew members. Mr. Mosier has established headquarters in the office at Hamailton & Soo Boat Yard with hours between 4 and 7 p. m. each day when in port with exception of Sunday. Persons desiring identification cards may apply at the place and time designated.

Establishment of the Anchorage office here conforms with wartime measures instituted throughout the Great Lakes.

MODEL SAILBOAT COMPETITION IS PLANNED

Board of Commerce Invited Boys and Girls to Enter Boats

Model sailboat owners will have an opportunity this summer to test the qualities of their craft.

Plans are now under way by the board of commerce for a series of model sailboat races across Round Lake harbor. All boys and girls desirous of entering boats in the competition, are requested to register at the information booth.

Prizes will be awarded owners of the first three boats to finish. Dates of races and regulations governing competition will be announced later.

MARY MARGARET STARTS SUNDAY TRIPS JUNE 28

A regular schedule of Sunday excursion trips to St. James during the summer season will be inaugurated Sunday, June 28, by Capt. Leroy Allers of the motorship Mary Margaret. The boat will leave Charlevoix at 8:45 a. m. and St. James on the return trip at 3 p. m.

After this date, June 24, I will not be responsible for bills contracted by anyone but myself. Martha Bolser.—Adv. 25t1pd.

TRAVERSE AREA NEEDS MANY CHERRY PICKERS

Labor Shortage Seen As Threat to Bumper Cherry Crop

Opportunity to make money picking cherries will be greater in the Grand Traverse region orchards this year than ever before with the price of picking raised to 30 cents a lug and the heaviest crop in history hanging on the trees.

The Grand Traverse region is seriously worried about its supply of orchard help this season. Grand Traverse county alone will need 11,000 pickers and the rest of the region will absorb another 10,000.

Fruit growers are making elaborate plans to house whole families in their orchards. They particularly want farm families seeking a short vacation from their own tasks.

The sweet season will start about July 4 and the red tart season will begin between July 10 and 15. The picking will last until the first of August.

BIG RESPONSE IN RUBBER CAMPAIGN

CHARLEVOIX COLLECTORS TAKE IN OVER 14 TONS

Urge Everyone to Cooperate In Final Clean-Up Before Drive Close on June 30th

Tonnage of scrap rubber continues to pile up at local gasoline stations at a satisfactory rate as President Roosevelt's campaign to discover if rubber is so scarce gasoline rationing is necessary, passed the half-way mark of its second week.

With six days remaining before the drive is concluded on June 30th, a general appeal to the public has been made to turn in every ounce of rubber material available before the campaign ends.

It is estimated that in the neighborhood of 14 ton of scrap has been collected at local oil stations since the drive opened June 15. The Cross, Benudoin and Ikens stations estimated purchases up to last Monday at around three ton each, while W. H. Wallace, who purchased collections of at least three stations in addition to that brought in to his own station, figured his total in excess of six tons.

While a considerable portion of the rubber is in the form of old tires, there is being a big amount of better grade turned in at collection centers. This better type of rubber includes inner tubes, hot water bottles, gum rubber items, discarded rubber aprons, etc. Rubber balls and dolls, the sacrifice of kiddies, are not lacking, either.

Beaver Island residents set a fine record. As early as last Thursday, fourth day of the campaign, 4,020 pounds was brought to the mainland free of freight charge by Capt. Leroy Allers of the Motorship Mary Margaret. The pile represented a contribution of 160 pounds per island resident.

ORE CARRIER RUN ON BOULDER REEF

CREW OF 42 TAKEN OFF STR. EUGENE J. BUFFINGTON

Salvage of Vessel, One of Largest on Great Lakes, Attempted; Investigation Expected

Operations are under way today to attempt salvage of the ore freighter Eugene J. Buffington, which crashed onto Boulder Reef, 18 miles west of Beaver Island, at 7:10 Sunday evening.

The 5,728-ton vessel, struck the reef, according to reports, in clear daylight, in a calm sea and within 1,000 feet of one of the largest buoys in Lake Michigan. She carried a cargo of 13,000 tons of iron ore. The vessel, it is claimed, was five miles off course after a 15-mile run from off Lansing Shoals. She was enroute from Lake Superior to Gary, Ind.

The ship's skipper, Captain George Chambers, would not comment on the accident.

The crew of 42 men were taken off the ship Monday. Nine, brought to Charlevoix by Capt. Charles Allers on Michigan Patrol Boat No. 1, were taken Tuesday morning to Beaver Island, where other crew members, including the captain and officers, had been landed Monday. All were transferred Wednesday by train to Cleveland, O., for investigation of the accident.

It was reported Monday afternoon that the 580-foot ship, which had gone on the reef for over half its length, was breaking in half. Her forward deck was awash and the stern then hung in the air.

WOMEN REQUESTED TO SAVE COOKING FATS

War In Pacific Has Seriously Affected Oil, Fat Imports

The war production board has appealed to housewives to save and sell waste fats from home cooking as a war conservation measure.

Lessing J. Rosenwald, chief of the WPB industrial conservation bureau, said a program to recover and use the estimated 2,000,000,000 pounds of cooking fats wasted each year would be started early in July.

"War in the Pacific," he said, "has seriously reduced imports of fats and oils from the far east."

The transfer is in effect an exchange of positions by Mr. Walker and Mr. Rood following Mr. Rood's request to Michigan State College for assignment to a smaller territory.

Mr. Rood's background of 14 years successful club leadership in the upper peninsula makes him well qualified for the position. "I have great admiration for the fine 4-H program in this district," Mr. Rood said yesterday, "and solicit the continued support of 4-H friends, local leaders, parents and young people in maintaining a 4-H program that will render its greatest community service.

The office of district club agent is being transferred from Boyne City to Petoskey and Mr. Rood will have his office in the court house in connection with R. S. Lincoln, county agricultural agent.

Arrives in Australia

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Jackson, of Ironton, received word Wednesday morning from their son, Albert, U. S. Army, that he had arrived safely at his destination in Australia.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

What became of the woman who gave up reducing? She lived hippily ever after.

That sure was a beautiful German brown trout that Ironton fellow, Edward Goft, caught last Thursday from the south arm of Lake Charlevoix. It weighed an even 13 pounds and was the largest of the species I've ever seen. Also thought the perch run was over until I saw young Bernie Ward with 13 that weighed seven pounds. He caught them off the Charlevoix Lumber Co. dock Thursday morning.

Public indifference—even when personal welfare is involved—is sometimes hard to understand. Behind this remark is the fact that a recent board of commerce questionnaire, published for the purpose of obtaining an up-to-date list of tourist accommodations in Charlevoix, was practically ignored. All that persons having tourist rooms had to do was fill out the questionnaire and mail or hand it in at the board of commerce office. I had always felt that such a list of information would be invaluable in providing complete distribution of vacationists in time of overflow patronage like we've experienced many times in the past, but if the persons directly benefitted by such a service aren't interested, then I guess it would be better to forget the whole thing.

"Johnnie, did you want to leave the room?"

"Yes, teacher, you don't think I'm standing here hitch-hiking, do you?"

Whether sugar rationing is needed or not as a matter of national wartime emergency, one thing you'll have to admit, providing, of course, that you happen to be observant, is that the present method of distribution is democratic to the extreme. The registration held at the city hall last week for canning sugar allowed no discrimination. Regardless of position, race or creed, people got

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

"The tire shortage is bringing new opportunities to small towns," states the U. S. Department of Commerce in a 1942 manual.

Therein lies a timely story of one sector of the Michigan home front. Every cloud has its silver lining, and the current problem of automobile transportation is no exception.

Whether gasoline rationing will be ordered July 15 or Sept. 15 is pure speculation. Announcement of federal and state officials, as well as members of congress, have been openly contradictory and utterly confusing, and it is not known yet—to the public at least—whether Michigan is to curtail automobile transportation through gasoline rationing or to solve the problem through other devices.

Winning the War is the primary concern of every Michigan citizen.

It is the A-1 activity of every Michigan town—those communities whose populations do not exceed 10,000.

Believing that a "community guide book" for war work would be a valuable contribution to victory, the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the U. S. Department of Commerce recently undertook the compilation of what is now known officially as a "Small Town Manual." It is a Main Street Bible of war work, and as such it contains a wealth of timely and valuable suggestions.

"Talk it over" is the first suggestion. Call a meeting of town and farm leaders to consider a full-fledged war program for your town. A Sunday afternoon or a holiday would be convenient. Get a band to furnish lively and patriotic music. Ask one of your ministers to deliver a short invocation.

A time limit should be set, and enforced, on all speakers. Care should be used to include farm leaders who can discuss from the rural viewpoint what farmers might do in a cooperative effort.

Problems are numerous, it goes without emphasizing, and here are some of them:

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Need Less Sugar In Grass Silage

How to match rationed sugar against the needs of carbohydrates to ensile grasses of legumes has been simplified by two men at Michigan State College.

No sweetening is needed for legume silage which is to be fed out within two months after making, say C. P. Huffman and S. T. Dexter. Butyric, the smelly acid, doesn't develop in newmade silage, they explain.

For winter feeding, alfalfa silage can be made to keep by adding 150 pounds of cornmeal or 200 pounds of corn and cob meal to the fresh cut ton of alfalfa. Any corn not used in fermentation remains in the silage as sound ground feed.

Molasses, if it is available at $40 a ton, which is about the present ceiling price, is not too high priced to use. The amount can be reduced to 30 pounds of molasses to each ton of fresh cut alfalfa.

Scanty depths of silage lead to mold, says Huffman. When a silo is filled only up to the second or third door, there is not sufficient weight. At least 15 feet in depth is necessary to create pressure, keep out air and prevent mold. The top part, Huffman points out, must be tramped down thoroughly during the filling. If preserving material is shy, then a little extra molasses or cornmeal in the top third of the silage will help keep the feed.

Fine cutting is encouraged, preferable in quarter-inch lengths to encourage packing. Extra juicy alfalfa makes vile smelling silage. Extra dry alfalfa means molds. Cutting is best when one-tenth of the plants are in bloom. Fresh cut alfalfa should be windrowed and loaded immediately for the cutter without field drying.

First Spray for Cherry Fruit Fly Announced by June 26

Word has just been received that for Charlevoix county the first spray to control cherry fruit flies should be made by June 26. Certainly with a profitable price in prospect for cherries and with a fair yield it is good judgment to do a thorough job of spraying. Not alone this, but constant observation should be made and at all times from now until harvest the leaves should be covered with a good fungicide.

It is further recommended that a second spray be applied within two weeks after the first spray. If rains wash off the poison an additional application may be necessary. Four sour canning cherries, two pounds of lead arsenate should be added to 100 gallons of spray. No matter what type of fungicide spray used be sure that not less than two pounds of lead arsenate be added to each 100 gallons. These recommendations are only for use on cherries that are to be thoroughly washed before canning.

In this connection please ha reminded that the cherry harvest will need all the help possible. We are hopeful that any person who is not employed will help in picking cherries. Fruit men will need your help. Our nation needs the food. The prices paid for picking cherries will be such that you can earn good money. Get in touch with one of your nearby fruit men nnd tell him you will be glad to help.

250 Attend the Ladies' Achievement Day

The members and friends of the Home Economics extension groups really enjoyed themselves at the East Jordan tourist park last week Thursday night. It is estimated that around 175 folks from all communities in the county enjoyed a real potluck supper. All of the facilities available at this beautiful park were turned over to the guests. Plenty of table room was made available and the weather conditions were such that is was a most enjoyable affair. The program was given in the big pavilion, which certainly is an asset to the city of East Jordan. The crowd of at least 250 folks had no difficulty in making themselves comfortable. First on the program was community singing led by Clare Rood, newly appointed district 4-H club leader. This was Mr. Rood's first opportunity to meet the many friends of 4-H club work. Following this Mrs. Sophia Withers, last year's secretary, reported on the activities of the last fiscal year. Miss Farmer, of East Jordan, read her essay on "A Modern Challenge to Youth." This essay won a high award in the contest recently developed by the Eastern Star ladies.

Miss Ruth Peck, specialist from Michigan State College, who has been the leader in charge, next appeared on the program and gave the results of the last project completed on home furnishing. Just as a little summary of the splendid program being carried on by the members of the various groups, it was reported that there were 157 members in the 13 extension groups that completed the project. There were 26 leaders who have efficiently received the lessons from Miss Peck and then carried them back to their own communities. Ninety-four families rearranged furniture, 56 improved colors, 49 made new arrangement of accessories, 39 families made 46 rugs, 81 finished furniture, 13 reseated 26 chairs, 18 reconditioned 43 spring unit cushions and 15 families made 18 slip covers. In addition Mrs. Florence Williams, of Marion Center, exhibited a chair with its new slip cover. A very wonderful piece of work which received much praise from the visitors.

The main talk of the evening was given by Miss Roberta Hershey, specialist in nutrition, Michigan State College. In her talk she revealed the necessity of a better understanding of nutrition needs. She nicely showed the relationship of different foods. Miss Hershey, some six years ago, directed a study of nutrition. Her talk was filled with humor and interesting illustrations. The concluding feature was movies made possible through the cooperation of REA. They have recently purchased a very fine sound moving picture machine which gives the audience the same sound effects as the theatre. Two films were shown, one emphasizing "Food for Freedom" and the other "Air Raid Defense Protection." The entire evening's program was carried out in a highly informal way. The audience was in good humor throughout. The night was perfect until the completion of activities.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Alan Slade has agreed to fly a "scientist" named Frayne to the Anawotto river to look for the breeding ground of the trumpeter swans. It is bleak country, and Alan suspects Frayne of having something up his sleeve, but Norland Airways needs the job. Slade and his partner, Cruger, have been having trouble competing with the larger companies, and Frayne has paid enough to enable Cruger to buy the plane they need. When he thought Norland was going to have to quit, Slade applied for overseas service with the army air corps. His application was rejected, but his disappointment has been lessened considerably by the brighter outlook for the business and by the fact that Lynn Morlock, the local doctor's daughter, has decided not to go to England with her Red Cross unit. Now he has gone with Lynn while she gives first aid treatment to an outcast flyer named Alim Tumstead, who has been hurt in a fight. They learn that Tumstead knows about Frayne and about the new Lockheed. It is a few minutes later, and they are talking about their plans for the future. Lynn feels that she must think first of her father's happiness.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER IV

"But you mustn't forget," Slade contended, "that you have your own life to live."

"That's what I'm trying to remember," was Lynn's vibrant-voiced reply.

They came to a stop in front of the hospital steps.

"Some day," he said with a wave of recklessness, "I'll make you see it my way."

If it sounded like a threat it brought no touch of concern to the hazel eyes searching his face. A smile even hovered about her lips ends.

"You've got a harder job than that," she retorted, "if you're flying in to the Anawoito tomorrow." Then the smile disappeared. "By the way, I saw that ornithologist who's flying in with you. He was asking me what I knew about the country north of the Kasakana."

"Is he as screwy as he sounds?" asked Slade.

"He's far from screwy," was Lynn's slightly retarded answer. "He struck me as being cold and hard and shrewd. And I can't figure out what he's after. It rather makes me wish someone else were piloting him into that wilderness."

Slade was able to laugh, as they shook hands.

"Don't lose sleep over that," he proclaimed. Then he laughed again. "I've flown some queer nuts into the North."

Slede, hurrying down to the air harbor, could see his moored plane being warped in to the landing dock. On the dock itself he could make out Cassidy, of the Norland staff, and two strange figures, one more massive than the other. But what held his eye was the amount of duffel piled along the dock's edge.

As Cruger had told him, they were giving him a load all right. Evan Cassidy's broad face broke into a smile as he handed him the scalassiip. For Slade's glance, at the moment, was directed toward the two men already interested in getting their equipment aboard. He resented the offhand way in which the bigger of the two strangers was clambering about his ship. The worn wolfskin coat that covered the wide shoulders of this stranger made him look shabby and subordinate.

When the pilot turned to his second passenger he experienced a sense of disappointment touched with shame. For there seemed nothing sinister about the straitened and scholarly figure confronting him. That figure even failed to look foolish. Slade saw a man considerably less aged than he had expected, a man with sloping and narrow shoulders and an abstracted gaze that looked out on the world from behind bifocal glasses.

Slade stepped closer.

"Quite a load you're giving me," he ventured as the man in the bifocal glasses continued to divide his attention between the duffel pile and a checklist in his hand.

The abstracted eyes lifted and regarded him for a moment of silence. It was the glasses more than anything else, Slade decided, that gave the stranger his look of deliberation.

"Why does that interest you?" the stranger inquired. His tone was mild and without hostility. But the voice, low-toned and remote, seemed marked by an exotic precision of intonation. It persuaded Slade that he was neither an Englishman nor an American.

"This happens to be my ship," the pilot explained as he rested a fraternal hand on the sun-faded fuselage.

"Ah, then we shall see much of each other," said the other. His smile was friendly but abstracted. "I am Doctor Frayne. And this is my camp-mate, my good man Friday, Caspar Karnell."

No responsive word came from the big-bodied man in the wolfskin coat. He merely stood above the cabin hatch, his eyes expressionless.

"Caspar is not—shall I say?—voluble," observed the Doctor. A mild and forebearing smile wrinkled the scholarly face behind the glasses. "And that, I might also explain, is why we travel together."

Slade, after an inspection of the bland emptiness of Karnell's face, nodded his understanding.

"They tell me I'm to take you in to the Anawotto," prompted the bush pilot.

"That is my desire," answered Dr. Frayne. "It may so happen that we shall winter up north."

"Down north," Slade corrected. "We speak of it here as downnorth."

"Quite an arsenal you're taking in," he observed.

The man with the abstracted eyes ventured a shrug.

"With time," he said, "I shall become better acquainted with your country." His movement, as he swung a bag of what had every aspect of mining tools up to his companion, was almost a dismissive one.

"Prospecting?" questioned Slade.

"I am not interested in prospecting," was the deliberated answer. "I am a naturalist."

As though in confirmation of that statement he lifted a case of mounted bird bodies up to his waiting companion. Then again the forced smile showed itself.

"It may impress you as a foolish profession. But for many years now I have given my time to the study of bird life."

Slade glanced down at the Mannlicher-Schoenauer, the two holstered Lugers, the pair of shotguns of different gauges and weight that rested between a scattering of cartridge cases.

"Quite an arsenal you're taking in," he observed.

For just a moment the opaque eyes regarded him.

"I am not unfamiliar with the North," Frayne announced with a patience that seemed coerced. "It is well, in case of the unexpected, to be able to live off the land."

"Of course," agreed Slade as he watched the firearms being stowed aboard. They were followed by a tent bale and sleeping bags, by condensed foods with foreign labels, by camp equipment and a box of signal flares and cased instruments and even two carrier pigeons in a hooded cage.

"You're filling me pretty full," observed Slade.

Frayne's face remained expressionless.

"Any inconvenience that I may cause," he said, "I profoundly regret. I had hoped, on arriving here, to purchase a plane. But they are not to be bought, I find."

"There's use for 'em just now," observed the pilot. "We're in the war, you know."

The eyes behind the bifocals became less opaque.

"But here at least," observed the man of science, "I shall not see it come between me and my research."

"The office tells me you're after trumpeter swans," said Slade.

"I am seeking the nesting ground of that noble bird," acknowledged the ornithologist. "They are extremely shy and hard to find in the brooding season. That is why I go into an empty country like the Anawotto."

Slade, not unconscious of the pedagogic note, felt the need of proving that his interests extended beyond gas engines.

"Ever try for them around the Red Rock Lakes in Yellowstone?" he asked. "They started a refuge for trumpeters there not so far back."

"A refuge which will be a failure," was the prompt response. "Your trumpeter is a child of the wilds. He cannot be adjusted to confinement."

His new friend, Slade admitted, seemed to know his bird life all right.

His eye-squint deepened as he noticed two heavier cases being lifted aboard. "By the way, are you taking radio or wireless in with you?"

"Why should I do that?" Frayne questioned. "It is with the lady swan I wish to converse."

"But how'll you come out?" asked Slade. "How'll we know where to pick you up?"

Frayne's gaze again became diffused.

"That may not be necessary," he finally explained. "We shall perhaps work our way through to what are locally known as the Barrens and come out along your Hudson Bay coast. It is a country you may happen to know?"

Slade smiled.

"I know it all right. As much as a white man can know such ice-fringed emptiness."

The bush pilot found himself being inspected with a new interest.

"That is extremely good news," averred his passenger. "As we fly north, I hope you will give me information about a country that is still distressingly unknown to me."

Slade resisted the temptation to observe that it wouldn't be so unknown to him by the time he'd wintered there.

"But you won't get swans as far east as the bay," he pointed out instead. "At least, not trumpeters."

Frayne's smile became more friendly.

"Already," he announced, "you are helping me. And there is another point on which you might enlighten us. Is the Anawotto River navigable?"

"No, it's not navigable," answered Slade. "It's blocked by too many falls and rapids. That's what's kept the country closed. Even Tyrrell couldn't get into it."

"But there were no planes when Tyrrell made his survey," observed the scholar.

"It's sure empty country," asserted the pilot, who had his own memories of the Anawotto.

"Then," murmured the swan hunter, "is entirely to my liking."

"But you're not entirely to my liking," was the thought that hovered about at the back of Slade's head. Lynn, he felt, was right. Yet he was their Santa Claus, as Cruger had expressed it. He had paid well for service, and he'd get service.

Slade dismissed that thought and turned to study the silver-winged Lockheed that rested on the waters of the Snye. It looked spick and span in its new coat of aluminum.

He realized, as he swung about, that the man in the bifocal glasses was also studying the Lockheed.

"An attractive ship," the scientist observed. "It was my intention to own her. But in that I was forestalled by your friend Cruger."

Slade smiled at the sharpened note in the other's voice.

"You have to scramble for 'em, nowadays," observed Cruger's bush-hawk partner.

"So I am learning," announced the swan-seeker. He said it casually. But some newer timbre in the speaker's voice made Slede think of a gun pit smothered in tree branches.

The brief northern night was at its darkest when Cassidy, newly made watchman for Norland Airways, shut off the radio. He sighed as he reached for his thermos at the end of the deal table and drained it of its last cupful of coffee. Then, lighting his pipe, he stepped out into the open and blinked about through the darkness.

He wished he could be having a second thermos of coffee. But there was no bright-lighted eating room in that third-rate outfit on the edge of Nowhere. Its air lanes were as short of ships as its administration building was short of paint. All it was, in faith, was a rough-and-ready jumping-off place for a lot of lunatics who wanted to dig holes in a wilderness where the frost went deeper than the gold. It could never be classed with those high-toned airports he'd heard many a far-traveled pilot talking about.

No, Cassidy decided as he made his rounds, this was a melancholy place for a man of spirit. He didn't like the quietness of the hangar where the twin-motored Grumman amphibian stood surrounded by the engine entrails the workmen had left scattered about. He was glad to move down to the dock edge, where there was a little sound of water-riffles against the floats of the Postcraft that would be going out in three hours' time. Beside it, the only remaining ship in the harbor, loomed the new Lockheed that looked more like the ghost of a plane, in the uncertain starlight, than a workaday framework of metal and linen well covered with aluminum paint.

It startled him, as he stood watching it, that anything so quiet could give birth to movement. But as he watched he saw a shadow detach itself from the shadowy fuselage. He saw that shadow drop to the near-by float, and then leap, quick-footed, to the dock edge.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Tuesday Night

Dear Ken:

I should have written sooner thanking you for the Courier every week. I can't think of a good excuse why I didn't, so will just say thanks a whole lot.

It is really appreciated and I doubt very much whether I can express my appreciation in this letter. If all the fellows in the Army and Navy and elsewhere who you send your paper to appreciate it as I do, you can be sure you are making us fellows happy every week.

This is the hottest place on earth now, or at least I think so. Would like to be back in "good old Charlevoix" for a while even if it were only to cool off. If Charlevoix needs any anti-aircraft protection, let me know and I will coma right up. Also don't expect to be here much longer as our training is about up.

Well, will quit for now and thank you once again for the Courier each week.

GET YOUR SCRAP RUBBER INTO THE BIG SCRAP: HURRY!

Your country needs every bit of old rubber you can dig up.. and it may avert gas rationing!

NATION-WIDE
Scrap rubber drive ends next Tuesday
JUNE 30

• PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has asked every American to get into this Scrap Rubber Drive. Here's a real opportunity for you to help speed the day of victory. Turn in your old rubber and help "give the Axe to the Axis."

And also remember, this drive may avert gasoline rationing. The need for this rationing in the Middle West is based not on a shortage of gasoline but on a need to save tires for possible future war use. If enough scrap rubber is provided by this drive, nation-wide rationing of gasoline may be avoided.

The petroleum industry has offered its thousands of service stations as convenient collection points during the drive. When you bring your scrap rubber to your Standard Oil Dealer, or to any other service station, the rubber will be weighed and you'll get your money at that time.

No oil company will receive one penny profit for this service. Each will turn the collected scrap rubber over to the government and be paid for it at the rate of $25 per ton (2000 pounds). The difference between the amount we pay and the amount Uncle Sam pays us has been pledged to the USO, Navy Relief, Army Relief, and American Red Cross.

The success of this drive—the ability of Uncle Sam to avoid the necessity of gasoline rationing—may well depend on the cooperation of every patriotic citizen. Get in the scrap rubber!

Don't delay! Bring the rubber today to your Standard Oil Dealer or Agent. He will pay you 1¢ a pound for your reclaimable rubber, such as:

tires, tubes, boots, rubbers, hot water bottles, garden hose—anything made of rubber.

OVER-OPTIMISM IS DANGEROUS

(Detroit News)

A run of favorable war news, such as the Midway island battle following the tremendous RAF blows at Cologne and Essen, always is followed by a wave of excessive optimism.

Lately one has heard frequently in conversation the confident prediction that the war is due to end before this year is over with an Axis capitulation.

That kind of talk is dangerous. It is true the outlook is more promising than it has been. There is less doubt than before of an EVENTUAL United Nations victory. But no one with access to informed military quarters is making the mistake of even hoping, much less predicting, a successful outcome in 1942.

That kind of seership is reserved to the ignorant, uninformed of war's hazards in general and in particular of the danger spots on the current world-wide war map. Such ignorance is excusable perhaps; Washington's own reticence and mistaken confusing of "good morale" with optimism in part is to blame for it.

But is defiaitely is a dangerous ignorance, because it breeds an over-confidence we can ill afford to indulge. A let-down in our national sense of urgency in the war effort readily could result in the present circumstances in prolonging the war for years. Such a let down could proceed from over-confidence itself or—what is quite as likely—from despondency over a sudden shift of the war news from "good" to unrelievedly bad.

President Roosevelt not long ago issued a warning against excessive optimism. He urged the people in effect to assume that the war is going to be a long, a tough but, eventually, a victorious struggle, and then to stick to that assumption in the face of any turn the fighting might take.

That was very good advice, and we wish the President would issue and reissue it as often as necessary.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

Farmers who have taken AAA fertilizer to be used in making up their soil-building allowance should remember that no credit is earned until the fertilizer is spread on hay or pasture land. Those who will receive their fertilizer late particularly should be ready to put it on the fields as soon as the hay crop is removed. Any fertilizer not used for purposes designated, or left unspread this fall, will draw a penalty of double the original cost, plus the loss of the payment for its application. Please see to this as soon as possible. We do not wany any farmer to be penalized in Charlevoix county.

If the scrap iron and rubber collector has not called at your farm, inform your township committeeman when he checks your farm so that he may, in turn, inform Chairman Henley of the War board. This is important—don't put it off.

GEOLOGISTS SEEK MORE METALS FOR WAR EFFORT

Three exploring and mapping parties of the state conservation department's geological survey, searching for more copper and iron, have begun their summer's work in Dickinson and Ontonagon counties. In other years a routine job, the search this year holds public interest because of the wartime demand for these essential Michigan minerals.

FEWER FIRES HAVE DESTROYED MORE ACREAGE

Thirty-eight fewer forest fires occurred in the first 10 weeks of the current forest fire season than in the first 10 weeks of the 25-week season last year, yet the 1942 fires (averaging 20 acres compared with seven acres in 1941) have burned acreage equal to 91 per cent of last season's total damage.

RECORD REVEALS RAINBOW MIGRATE 289 MILES

Michigan's most migratory fish, the rainbow trout, hung up a new travel record when one that was tagged January 13, 1941, at Cuilcy pond on the Au Gres river, Iosco county, showed up in a pound net 25 miles northeast of Point Pelee in Lake Erio, in Canadian waters, 289 miles away.

SEEKING PICKERS FOR HARVEST QF CHERRIES

U. S. Employment Service Will Register All Workers

Walter P. Rice, farm placement supervisor of the Petoskey office of the United States Employment Service, states that orders have been received for a large number of cherry pickers to be employed within the next two weeks for work in Charlevoix county.

The production of food is much more important as a war measure than many people realize. It is essential that no food be allowed to go to waste through lack of people to harvest fruit or vegetables. As most of this work can be done by persons without previous experience, Mr. Rice urges that women and children volunteer for the work, and suggests that business men also may be able to spare some time from their regular affairs to help in an emergency, or to spend their vacation time at this work.

Mr. Rice may be contacted at 208 E. Mitchell St., Petoskey, or through Harvard Smart at the Community Room in the basement of the Charlevoix city hall every Tuesday morning from 9:00 until 12:00.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from the See Funeral Home for Mrs. Jane Andrews, 69, a resident of Charlevoix a number of years ago. Rev. H. J. Pulsipher officiated at the services. Interment was at Brookside cemetery.

Mrs. Andrews died Saturday at St. Mary's hospital in Saginaw as the result of injuries incurred in an auto accident June 4.

Jane Daugherty was born March 24, 1873, in Bracebridge, Ontario, Canada. She came to Charlevoix with her parents about 60 years ago. On July 18, 1891, she married Richard Gregory. FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

Garden makers who work by rule of thumb will find it wise to keep an eye on beets. There is no other vegetable which will indicate as accurately the condition of the soil, especially as to its acidity. When tops are yellowish in color and a lack of thrift in the growth of the plant is evident, garden makers should suspect that the soil is too acid and that an application of lime is needed.

A lack of the proper fertilizing element may be indicated, too, but if a balanced fertilizer has been applied in reasonable quantities the lack of satisfactory growth in the beets probably means that lime is needed. Although lime is usually applied before the garden is planted, there is no reason why ground limestone should not be used at any time throughout the season.

PLANT BROOK, RAINBOW IN LAKE LOUISE

Conservation Department Experiment Is Now Under Way

Two unusual features of Charlevoix county's Lake Louise (formerly known as Thumb lake) uncovered by a survey party of the conservation department's institute for fisheries research are some definite possibilities for trout fishing and the lake's unique manner of controlling excessive perch population.

A few trout have been known to live for some time in the 485-acre lake which has one spot 152 feet deep. To test its ability to support trout, the institute recommends planting of 3,000 yearling brook trout and 3,000 yearling rainbows late each fall for the next three years, and then making a thorough checkup of the sport afforded and the success, if any, the trout have reproducing in the lake.

Only other stocking advised is of 5,000 marked smallmouth bass each year for the next three years, recommended because of the danger of sterilization of some bass now in the lake infested with the bass tapeworm.

Perch in Lake Louise are now growing very slowly, averaging only six and one-half inches in their four summer, where the average Michigan perch reaches the legal-six-inch size in its second summer. But every six or seven years—the last time in 1937—there is an unexplained, extremely heavy mortality among the stunted perch, after which the perch remaining increase greatly in size. Perch fishing immediately improves for three or four years, then smaller and smaller perch show up in the catches until the next die-off.

MAY ALLOW BULK PURCHASE OF SUGAR SOON

Plan Outlined to Ease Overcrowding Warehouse Facilities

Overcrowded warehouses in some sections of the country have forced the Office of Price Administration to consider a plan under which housewives could buy a year's allotment of sugar in advance.

Such a system, officials said, would make it possible for housewives to help store the nation's sugar stock on their own shelves.

The present allotment of one-half pound of sugar a week for each person would not be changed. But under the system being studied it would be possible for a family of four, for example, to buy at once the 104 pounds of sugar it would be entitled to during a year.

The proposal for seeking housewives' aid in storing sugar was revealed as the OPA increased the amount of sugar purchasable with ration book stamp No. 5, starting June 28. At present each coupon in the book is good for one pound of sugar—a two weeks' supply for the individual. Stamps No. 5 and 6, however, will be good for two pounds each, but each stamp will cover four weeks instead of two weeks.

NATIONAL MUSIC CAMP WILL OPEN JUNE 29TH

Three Hundred Boys and Girls Attend Eight-Week Session

The youngest symphony orchestra in the world is getting together at Interlochen this week end. Three hundred boys and girls are coming from all corners of America to the National Music Camp, which begins its 15th season June 20.

Every camper is a musician. For eight weeks the youngsters will study and play the great classical symphonies under the batons of such famous masters as Dr. Frederick A. Stock of the Chicago symphony orchestra, and the world renowned pianist, Percy Grainger.

The Interlochen season is one long music festival which annually draws thousands of visitors. The orchestra will broadcast this year from the concert howl every Saturday afternoon after the ball game. Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, camp president, says that on Sundays there will be band concerts, choral performances, and formal symphony concerts. Thursday nights are devoted to faculty recitals, and Fridays to plays and operettas.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
11th District, Michigan
Fred Bradley

I am disgusted every time I go into a restaurant and the waitress hands me one lump of sugar for a cup of coffee. The average person either wants two lumps of sugar in a cup of coffee or he wants none, and I get disgusted every time my wife reminds me of the need for conserving sugar at home because of the rationing program. Perhaps, there is some reason for my disgust. Let us see.

I am disgusted with the present sugar rationing because on December 13, 1940, the Agriculture Department decreed that domestic beet sugar acreage in 1941, which is a principal crop in Michigan, would be reduced 16.2 percent. Beet sugar was cut because of a similar cut in the production of sugar cane in our contiaental United States, all in the furtherance of our 'Good Neighbor Policy.' In the 1940 annual report, the Secretary of Agriculture observed that sugar is one of our agricultural imports that can be produced in the United States, and he boasted how the operation of the ever-normal granary as applied to sugar had protected farmers and consumers during the past year.

I am disgusted because on February 20, 1041, Miss Harriet Elliott, consumer commissioner of the National Defense Advisory Commission, stated, "Rumors of sugar shortage, sugar rationing, and price increases have no basis of fact and are entirely unwarranted. Existing stocks of sugar readily available to consumers in the United States are now considerably larger than usual. If necessary sugar production can be expanded materially in domestic areas as well as in nearby foreign areas." I am disgusted because on April 19, 1941 the Agriculture Department's sugar division announced that there was no need whatsoever for increased domestic production in view of the international situation. It denied an increase in allotments for domestic sugar acreage by saying that the availability of large reserve stocks in some of the domestic areas, as well as in nearby foreign areas, made that inadvisable.

I am disgusted because Vice President Wallace on May 27, 1941, said, "There seems little likelihood that we shall have meatless days or days without sugar. Apparently we shall not have to cut down on our own food needs in order to make sure that there is a surplus to send to our friends across the sea." All of this—why? Because as he put it—"In this war, thanks to the ever-normal granary and the efficiency of modern farm production, we can approach the problem more constructively than during the last year." Now all of this was before Pearl Harbor. Now see why I am disgusted after Pearl Harbor. On December 12, 1941, the Washington Post reported that government officials stated—"Supplies of sugar, the bulk of which is obtained from offshore producing areas, continue ample for months ahead." This even though they conceded that war in the Pacific might cut off supplies from the Philippines. I am disgusted because as late as December 27, 1941, R. M. Evans, in charge of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, assured us that there were ample food supplies, that there would be no rationing, because "we had planned it that way." On January 18, 1942, only three weeks later, Secretary Wickard announced the existence of a sugar shortage and on January 25, 1942, less than a month after Mr. Evans' statement, Leon Henderson announced that rationing plans for sugar were being drawn up and would be put into operation within the next few weeks.

Have we reached a state in this nation where men as great as Leon Henderson, and as the Secretary of Agriculture, and as the Vice President of the United States can't see beyond the end of their nose?

If there is a shortage, why is there a shortage? Because the policy of the administration has been to pay out huge checks to sugar corporations to raise less sugar.

For the Congressional Record of May 20, 1942, Senator Byrd of Virginia stated, "These benefit payments originally were made on the basis of a reduction of sugar planting. They are now being continued in order to stimulate planting. The policy of the Department of Agriculture with respect to sugar appears to be very flexible, as—without any change in the law—benefit payments aggregating nearly $50,000,000 to sugar producers are first made to reduce acreage and then later to increase acreage. The facts are that had the Department of Agriculture not imposed restrictions on planting for the year 1941, the sugar situation would be far better than it is today."

According to the figures of the Department of Agriculture, which were given in the May 20th Record, some 282 growers are recorded as receiving in excess of $10,000, of which the following corporations received the largest sugar benefits:

Luce & Company, Puerto Rico	$014,043.01
Fajardo Growers, Puerto Rico	528,839.15
Oahu Sugar Company, Hawaii	510,062.04
U. S. Sugar Corporation, Florida	470,007.41
Eastern Associates, Puerto Rico	447,959.73
Waialua Agriculture Co., Hawaii	444,225.07
Ewa Plantation Company, Hawaii	443,021.49

Have any of you Michigan beet growers—or any combination of you—seen any such payments as the above coming in your direction? I think the 'Good Neighbor Policy' may be all right, but I think we had better take a little care of ourselves here at home just once in awhile; and so in conclusion—just what is the shortage, if any? And these figures make me more disgusted than ever.

According to information, which I have no doubt is reliable, and which has been handed to me, Lowry and Company put forth these figures: The Demand figures below are based on the assumption that the present allowance of one-half pound of sugar per person per week will be in effect for the balance of the year and that Industrial users will be permitted to use 80% of the sugar they used in 1941. Further notice, these figures do not take into account any Lend-Lease or other commitments to our Allies.

Estimated 1942 "Demand"
(Short tons raw)

Industrial users—80% of "normal use"	2,100,000
Individual - household 26 lbs. per capita	1,700,000
Total consumptive requirements	3,800,000

Supply Outlook for 1942
(Short tons raw)

Cuba, (excluding molasses, local consumption, etc.)	3,400,000
Puerto Rico (estimated total crop)	1,250,000
Hawaii	800,000
Domestic beets, old crop carry-over on hand Jan. 1, 1942	1,400,000
Domestic beets, from the new crop (estimated at about 2,000,000 tons)..	600,000
Domestic cane	600,000
"Recapture" of invisibles	500,000
Total available	8,550,000

It is a well known fact here in Washington that sugar warehouses all over the country are crammed to the doors with sugar which the rationing program will not permit them to dispose of as fast as receipts come in. I talked to a man the other day who said that his job with the government was to try to get sugar warehouses emptied in order to store critical war materials therein, and he knew from practical experience that these warehouses are jammed to the doors with sugar. I am going to make a prediction to you right now that sugar rationing will be discontinued, of necessity, within the very next few weeks.

This is another example of bureaucratic mismanagement which is extremely harmful to the national morale. The American people are patriotic, and we will cheerfully make any necessary sacrifices to win this war, but it does seem that fellows like Leon Henderson ought to get their facts straight and be able to see things through to the end before they issue crackpot, unnecessary regulations as the sugar rationing program. It's no wonder that I am disgusted, and I know you are too, especially when we hear one of these bureaucrats bleat, "We planned it that way."

Fishing for Father and Son

Bass fishing on Michigan's many lakes, beginning June 25, appeals to anglers of all ages, and especially to father and son combinations. The boy and his dad, above, with a four and one-quarter pound smallmouth taken on a flyrod won't soon forget the excitement of landing this one. Because the state's lakes are so well distributed, plenty of fishing is available, whatever the travel restrictions may be. Fishing for bluegills begins June 25 also.

Work is now under way in the park on Bridge street, opposite the State bank, on a set of four bowling alleys and an automatic baseball machine, similar to the one we had last year. H. A. Ackley, of New York, is the man behind the gun. His outfit, together with the rink and the swimming pool at the Inn, gives us a respectable quota of summer sports.

Albert H. Loeb, of Chicago, has purchased 800 acres of land on Pine lake, and plans extensive development of the property.

Charlevoix and surrounding territory fell slightly short of the quota assigned it on the Liberty bond subscription. About $20,000 has been subscribed and purchased. Almost three billion dollars was subscribed in the entire country. Congress is to appropriate six hundred million dollars to perfect the American air craft program of a huge fleet of 36,000 aeroplanes. American auto plants will be utilized to make standardized engines for aerial craft.

Plans of the American Legion post for the Fourth of July celebration at Charlevoix now include chartering of the steamer Ossian Bedell, of the Beaver Island Steamship & Development Company, for two round trip excursions to East Jordan and Boyne City out of Charlevoix. Arrangements for the parade include members of the three county Legion posts, Petoskey and Charlevoix drum and bugle corps and one or two bands, also a number of floats. Aerial fireworks, boxing bouts; street dancing and sports in the blocks between Antrim street and Park avenue, and numerous concessions all promise a peppy celebration.

The oldest bridge in Minneapolis—a 70-year-old landmark, is going to the war. The city has given it to the U. S. for its salvage value and its 450 tons of wrought iron will be processed into steel for military equipment.

LANSING LETTER

Farm labor shortage, town labor shortage, transportation difficulties, salvage and scrap collection, shortage of machinery and parts, use of idle machines, plants and equipment, migration of skilled workmen from your town, purchase of war bonds and stamps and housing of war workers.

For example, a farm labor shortage may or may not exist. It is a waste of time to speculate about it.

Members of the Grange, 4-H Clubs, Farm Bureau and other farm groups can secure estimates from each of their own members, and each member can gather the information from four or five neighbors. In this way a town war plan can act intelligently on facts of your local situation.

Townsmen may be willing to give a few days to helping farmers get in the crop. Such a cooperative arrangement has been made by many Michigan towns—Vassar, Fowlerville and Tecumseh being a few illustrations.

Salvage and scrap. Talk about the home front! Here is a direct challenge to Main Streets—collection of worn out wires, scrap iron, old broken machinery, and other vitally needed products of war production.

How about the old unused canning jars? Home canning and preservation should be encouraged to the fullest during the war. Women of each church, members of the Women's Clubs, or the Parent-Teachers association might sponsor a drive in the town war plan to round up all unused canning jars and get them into the hands of folks who will use them.

The home battlefront consists of many obvious and commonplace things.

Tapping sugar maple trees in a community "sugar bush" project is one of many possibilities. Victory gardens are popular. Cold storage lockers may help to preserve fresh fruits for winter dinners.

Because glycerine is needed for making gun powder, housewives are urged to save their bacon drippings and fat. These can be collected at a central point and sold to the nearest rendering company. The local butcher can give you the information.

The money obtained from the sale can be used to provide prizes for war effort, purchase war stamps, or help the Red Cross or USO.

Nutrition has soared into national prominence since the selective service authorities disclosed the regretable fact that one-third of the men declared unfit for military service have had defects which could be traced either directly or indirectly to faulty nutrition.

Even the kitchen becomes a part of the home battlefront!

The women of your town will want to know more what kinds of food to buy, how to cook it so as to get the most nourishment, and how to keep it so it will retain its nutritive value.

Sewing bees is just another possibility, suggested by the U. S. Department of Commerce. Since wool is needed for our army, housewives may reline coats, cut down adult's garments for children, reknit sweaters, retrim dresses, and use the needle and thread to make and remodel family clothing at a minimum of expense and material.

Old used wool can be used again to make new warm woolens. Don't throw away any woolen garments no matter how badly worn.

Farm income is up. In 1939 the average farm family's income totalled $1,443; last year, $1,628, and 1943 it may reach $2,365.

"You probably will never again have as good a chance as now to improve business in your town," states the "Small Town Manual." "The tire shortage is bringing new opportunities to small towns. People can now be influenced easier than ever before to shop at home. Make sure that farm families choose your town rather than some other one to do their trading in."

There is the silver lining—and the big challenge. But a plan is needed. And when it comes to promotion, remember Burnham's often quoted advice, "Make no small plans—they have no power to stir men's minds." Such a community program, carefully conceived and consistently supported, may contribute much right at home in helping to win the war as well as improving business.

AT THE MOVIES

"Henry and Dizzy"

The trio who hit it off so well in the last Henry Aldrich screen escapade, "Henry for President," are together again in a new Paramount comedy, "Henry and Dizzy," which comes June 30 and July 1 at the Palace Theatre. Jimmy Lydon as Henry, Charles Smith as Dizzy, and Mary Anderson as Henry's girl, Phyllis, again live through some pretty hectic—and hilarious—adventures.

This time their troubles come about through the accidental sinking of a motor boat which Henry had borrowed for a spin around the lake. Henry is accused of having stolen the boat. He must either replace it with another one, pay up $120 or go to jail. The three friends put their heads together and come up with some amazing ideas.

"They Died With Their Boots On"

Ever since it was announced that Errol Flynn's next starring picture for Warner Bros. would be based on the military career of Gen. George A. Custer, the studio has received by phone and mail offers from more than 30 "survivors" of the famous Last Stand regiment who wanted the job as technical director.

Only survivor of the bloody debacle of June 25th, 1876, at the Little Big Horn was a horse named Commanche which, though wounded badly during the battle, survived and lived to be 26 years old, a pampered mascot of the 7th Cavalry at Fort Lincoln, North Dakota.

"They Died With Their Boots On," in which Flynn co-stars with Olivia de Havilland, starts a local 2-day run on July 3 at the Palace Theatre. Arthur Kennedy, Charley Grapewin and Gene Lockhart head the large supporting cast.

Beaver Island Proud of Scrap Rubber Effort

Uncle Sam can be proud of that little spot 30 miles off the mainland in Lake Michigan known as Beaver Island. It's 250 inhabitants ransacked barns, woods, docks and cellars to bring out 4,020 pounds of scrap rubber in the President's drive. This is an average of 160 pounds per island person.

It all started when Glen Logan of tha war production board phoned Fr. Branigan, the island priest, and asked him to form n coinmittee to gathor the scrap rubber. Logan's estimate of one ton was doubled by the efforts of Fr. Branigan and his poeple. The rubber pile held tires, tubes, fishermen's boots and storm coats among numeroua other itema.

Capt. Leroy Allers and his erew donated the haul of the rubber to the mainland in their mail boat Mary Margaret. The rubbor was brought over Thursday, fourth day of the drive.

In above photo, Capt. Leroy Allers of Motorship Mary Margaret and Joe Howard, Charlevoix harbor master, stand by pile of ruhber salvaged by Beaver Island residents.

SHOT AT RANDOM

in line to he served, each was ailoted the same amount in proportion to the size of family. It was interesting to observe.

When I stopped last Sunday in East Jordan to get a boat from Teddy Kotowich, well known Jordan river fishing guide, I fnund u sign on his door reading, "Closed Until the Japs Are Licked." Ted goes to the army this week and if the sign he left is any indication, fightin's going to he mighty serious business with him.

And while on the subject of sugar, there's now a proposal to allow the housewife to purchase a year's allotment when sho goes to the market next time for sugar. The present allotment of one-half pound per person wouldn't be changed, but under the studied plan a family of four could buy at once the 104 pounds it would be entitled to during a year. The reason for this proposed OPA plan is to relieve over-crowded warehouses—yet we've been led to believe right along that shortage is the reason for rationing. It all makes about as much sense as a lot of othor administration bungling idens.

Six-year-old Mary awoke about 3 o'clock in tha morning. "Tell me a story, Mama," ahe pleaded.

"Hush, darling," said mother, "daddy will be in soon and tell us both one."

The motorist should be able to get a laugh out of that $5 auto use tax stamp we're supposed to have hy July 1. With tire rationing a reality and gasoline rationing threatened, the word "use" in connection with the nutomobile seems sort of a misplaced term.

The nverage individual would douhtless be willing to mnke greater sacrifice in the nntion's war effort if Washington officials would "plsy ball" too. Administration spokesmen sny that congress will be asked—after election—to enact legislation making it possible to draft boys of 18 and 19 years years. Why wait until nfter election were it not thnt congressmen apparently fear they will loso votes if they arc forced to decinre themselves on this issue before the November ballotting? If young men of this age aro needed to win tho war, then let congress forget its own politicnl ambitions and quit side-stepping a war issuo which might react unfavorable back home. There are plenty of othar issues in which tho "stink" of politics has boen uppermost, as well.

I've taken a lot of good natured and some serinus kidding over a mistake appearing in an article in last week's edition setting forth regulations governing tho bass flshing season which opens Thursday. I'll stick to the excuse that a typographical error was responsiblo for a statement the legal limit for bass is 7 inches. It should have rend 10 inchas, though, and, regardloss of what the newspaper snid, don't let the game wnrden catch you with 7-inch bass, because he won't take it na an excuse.

CANNING SUGAR PERMITS GIVEN

ESTIMATE COUNTY USERS ALLOTED NEARLY 7 TON

Registration for Industrial and Institutional Users Now Open; Issue Month's Supply Stamps

It is estimated 3,500 persons registered for canning sugar allotments with volunteer registrars at six Charlevoix county registration places last Thursday and Friday.

Presuming the 12,566 persons signed at the consumer registration in May were provided for last week on the basis of 11 pounds per person for fruits and jams, a total of 138,226 pounds, or nearly seven ton of sugar was alloted. No official figures are available on the amount, however.

An indication that local registrants obtained sugar for canning immediately following registration is the fact that some local stores had sold out their sugar supply completely by Saturday night. Plentiful stocks were on hand this week, however, and with it allowable for persons to buy their allotment at any time, no future shortage is anticipated following the initial buying spurt.

Fenton R. Bulow, administrator of the county rationing board, announces that the next registration, now open and remaining so at the office in tha court house until July 5, is for industrial and institutional users to obtain cards for their July and August quotas. This group includes hotel and restaurants, hospitals, etc., who registered for their May and June quotas in April.

A change in the rntioning allowance for home consumers is announced for July and August. On stamp No. 5 there may be purchased two pounds of sugar for each person, this supply for the period of June 28 to July 25. Likewise, stamp No. 6 will purchase a like amount, the allotment for the period of July 26 to August 22nd. The half-pound allowance per person is not changed, but the amount allowed is for a 4-week instead of two-week period. The change was made, it is understond, to relieve storage congestion in some parts of the country.

In the future, Mr. Bulow announced, non-residents will not be rationed canning sugar. Such persons must register with the boards in their home communities.

Members of the rationing board have expressed their deep nppreelation to those persons who volunteered their time to conduct the registrntion last week.

Great Lakes sport fishermen still enjoy far more liberal creel limits and fewer restrictions than do fishermen on inlnnd wuters, even when regulations added by the 1041 session of the state legislature are counted in.

Lake trout trollers may now take up to 25 pounds and one fish where formerly five fish of any size could be brought in each day. The new limit on the other "big game" fish—black bass, northern pike and walleyed pike—is 10, of which all 10 may be wallcyes, but not more than five may be black bass and not more than five may be northerns, according to the state conservation department.

Clarification of another law at the 1041 legislative session now prevents the sale of perch and walleyes taken from Great Lakes waters, except when taken on a commercial fishing license.

EXTENO RUBBER DRIVE TO JULY 10

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ASKS FOR GREATER SUPPORT

Charlevoix County, Believed to Have Collected 100 Tons, Continuos Effort for Success

President Roosevelt's order of Monday extending the scrap rubber collection campaign until midnight of July 10 was the signal for a renewed effort in Charlevoix and Charlevoix county to greater results in an already successful drive.

Barney Milstein, of East Jordan, county salvage chairmnn, urged that officials of each city, village and township request citizens to search every nook and corner for items of rubber which may be added to the present collection. Mayor Robert Bridge, heading the Charlsvoix effort, complied by ordering a street-by-street collection with truck by members of the city street department. A sizeable quantity of rubber was obtained and, before the additional 10-day period closes, it is expected every available bit of scrap rubber in the city will have been turned in.

While no figures have been officially released, it is believed Charlevoix rubber collection amounted to in excess of 25 tons during the original 15-day period set for the campaign. On this basis, it is thought collections for the entire county would amount to in the neighborhood of 100 tons.

The collection program instituted when the campaign opened on June 15, will be continued during the 10-day extension. Oil station operators will pay 1c a pound for all scrap rubber delivered to them.

Saw a nice deer cross the highway near the south end of Susan lake Tuesday morning.

Delegates to the convention of a large church society petitioned Congress recently to ban the sale of intoxicating beverages in or near military posts . . . So these "tender youths" of the Army and Navy are old enough to die for their country and mature enough to be entrusted with the safety of America's homes and its people, but so young and weak they must be protected from the temptations of the tavern! In our way of thinking the military authorities are the best judges of what measures are needed to maintain the health and the morale of the armed forces, and they are united in opposing prohibition at the camps. The experience of the United States, between 1919 and 1933, when prohibition was in effect, is ample proof that no morality attaches to such legislation as is being sought, unless murder, gangsterism, corruption, deceit and hypocrisy are to be regarded as moral virtues. It's a pity that the prohibitionists can't give up their campaign for the duration. After all, the men in service are giving up something, too.

"No, that's what he went out for."

Lakes in the vicinity produced the usual quota of bass on opening day of the season last Thursday. LANSING LETTER

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Keep fit for war work by healthful vacation in Michigan!

This theme of the four tourist and resort associations has been sanctioned in spirit by the office of Defense Transportation for the nation's war-time requirements.

It may rescue Michigan's $300,000,000 recreational industry, highly concentrated in north Michigan and the Upper Peninsula, from the economic doghouse this summer.

Two months ago the uncertainties of war made the summer outlook dismal indeed. Then reservations for cottages began to arrive. And folks are staying for the summer, too. Now, the first week in July, things are on the "up and up" in north Michigan, from all reports. As is often the case, facts are better than fears.

Transportation is the key to the 1042 vacation season.

Anticipated gasoline rationing, a means of conserving rubber tires for the war duration, has been postponed. The contradictory statements of federal and state officials have confused the situation. Resort owners are frankly worried, but the silver lining to date is this: It is not unpatriotic to fish and swim and otherwise to keep physically fit.

From the White House down to governors', executive offices, leaders recommend the desirability of recreation for needed morale.

What are the favorable factors?

First, Michigan is convenient to the national center of population. Long trips to the West or New England are impractical this summer. Michigan is within a day's access of millions of people, many of whom are working long hours in war plants, earning high wages, and probably will continue to do so for many months to come.

Second, a short war lessens the need of a civilian furlough, but a lengthened strain upon our manpower will increase its importance. Recent over-optimism has been checked by military reverses of the past few weeks. Victory in 1942 no longer seems possible,

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

The price ceiling covers all of Main Street now.

From one end of Michigan to the other, it stands above the cash register in the shoeshine shop as well as the butcher shop. It has been extended until it shields the man who wants a clock repaired or his hat blocked quite as much as it does the customer at the corner grocery or drug store.

All these additions to the price control structure—the whole list would fill innumerable pages—fall into the category of what are called "consumer services." They are controlled as of July 1 by a new office of Price Administration regulation.

Extension to the price roof which shelters us from the high cost of living is a sizeable one—one which will be reflected (and happily) in almost every family budget.

It will, for instance, be reflected in what the average family pays for repairs to all sorts of things.

The new regulations flaish the complete price ceiling system begun on April 28. In the space of two months we have aet our economic house in order for war, with solid barriers against rising living costs.

Be sure you remember that the new regulations apply only to consumer services rendered "in connection with commodities." They have nothing to do with fees charged by your lawyer, doctor, dentist, barber or at your beauty shop.

Manpower Commission Chairman Paul McNutt and War Production Chief Donald Nelson took a step last week which should speed skilled workers to war jobs—and keep them there.

In the past, if an unemployed automobile worker was called back to his old job he was forced to report within a week or lose his seniority rights. Now, if the worker has been trained for a new job he may choose to stay with his new war employer and still retain his seniority in the old plant.

Transportation must not be a bottleneck if men and materials are to move to far-flung fronts in sufficient quantities to defeat the Axis.

Trained soldiers waiting at cantonment, finished weapons piled high on docks are of no value on the battlefront.

The office of Defense Transportation has opened a new offensive on the transportation problem with formation of a "U. S. Truck Conservation Corps." This corps will enlist owners and drivers of our 5,000,000 motor trucks in a national campaign to save their machines and tires. The President opened the campaign, saying that "it has become the patriotic duty of every truck operator to help make his truck last longer.

Automobile "graveyards" yielded 383,253 tons of scrap metal in May, a 10 per cent increase over April....last summer's aluminum drive netted 6,398,051 pounds, only 42 per cent of the amount expected....several million pounds of honey have been made available as a substitute for sugar in bakery goods, ice cream, candy and soft drinks....and beekeepers have been encouraged to produce more honey by a WPB order increasing the output of wooden beehives....your landlord has not been prohibited from re-painting or re-decorating your apartment or home if it constitutes normal "maintenance or repair"....enemy-owned patents seized by the U. S. Alien Property Custodian cover a wide variety of machines and processes—among one group seized last week were patents for coal mine conveyors, automatic drills for use in airplane building, oil refining processes, and chemical compounds....the patents were owned by German, Italian, Japanese and Hungarian corporations and individuals....movie producers have advised WPB they are taking steps to reduce the amount of film in Hollywood and the quantity of material used in sets.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Potatoes Need Series of Sprays

Don't stop spraying potatoes as soon as the potato bugs are killed because leaf hoppers alone cost unprotected fields 40 bushels or more an acre in loss each year.

That is the warning to potato growers from J. H. Muncie, extension specialist in plant disease at Michigan State College. Potatoes, he claims, also must be protected from disease as well as insects.

Sprays or dusts should begin when the potatoes are 4 to 6 inches high and repeat applications should be put on every 10 days to two weeks until danger of late blight is over in late fall. For spraying he recommends Bordeaux mixture in a strength of 8-12-100 applied at the rate of 100 gallons an acre.

Monohydrate copper sulphate-hydrated lime 20-80 is the standard dust recommended by Dr. Muncie at an average of 40 pounds to an acre throughout the season.

Spraying or dusting is indicated to the extent of keeping the new growth of the vines covered. Research indicates five applications of spray are equal to seven applications of dust. Availability of water, type of equipment and acresge are factors which determine which means of protection a potato grower should use.

In case blue vitriol or copper sulphate is not available for making Bordeaux mixture, one of the fixed copper materials can be used as a substitute. On the basis of 50 per cent metallic copper content, fixed coppers are used at the rate of four pounds in 100 gallons of water with the additiou of four pounds of hydrated lime or flour to increase sticking. If monohydrate copper sulphate is not available for the dust, fixed coppers can be substituted in the proportion of 7 per cent copper material (of 50 per cent metallic copper content) plus 15 per cent flour and 78 per cent talc or other suitable inert filler.

In order to complete our war time merchant ship program we shall have to turn out an average of three ships a day during this year and the next.

Actually Cleans As It Lubricates

Shoveler Substitute Invented

Latest product of the conservation department's forest fire experiment station at Roscommou is this gasoline-powered sand-slinging machine that will do the work of 25 men with shovels, fighting ground fires in the woods. Especially adepted to the sandy soils of Michigan's pine plains, it moves along at a walking pace, cutting a trench to mineral soil and spreading the excavated sand in an even, flame-quenching blanket on either the right or left side of the fire line. Shortage of manpower in the north would make such machines especially useful this season, but materials for manufacturing them are difficult to obtain.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Although he suspects him of being up to something, Alan Slade has agreed to fly "Doctor" Frayne to the Anawotto country to find the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. Slade and his partner, Cruger, have had a hard time keeping Norland Airways going in the face of stiff competition from the larger and better equipped companies, and Frayne has paid them enough to buy another plane, a Lockheed. While in town on an errand, Slade meets Lynn Morlock, daughter of the "flying Padre," and goes with her to help a flyer named Sum Tumstead, who has been wounded in a fight. Tumstead has already lost his license for drinking, and is little better than an outlaw, so Alan is not pleased to discover that he knows about Frayne's expedition and about the new Lockheed. When he leaves Lynn, Alan goes down to the dock to watch Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, load their supplies on the plane. His suspicions are again aroused by their equipment. Now, that night, a prowler has just approached Cassidy, watchman for Norland Airways.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER V

Cassidy's pipe fell to the boards as that shadow confronted him.

"Stick 'em up," was the curt and altogether unexpected command. "Quick!"

Cassidy, instead of obeying, reached for his fallen pipe and fell back a step or two. He noticed, for the first time, how the lower part of the stranger's face was covered by a bandkerchief.

"What is this, anyway?" he demanded, doing his best to decipher the face above the masking handkerchief. But a second hand of white that showed under the stranger's lowered hat brim kept him from seeing much of the face.

"Don't talk," said the stranger. "Turn around. Now walk ahead of me into that shed."

Cassidy's hesitation was brief. It seemed foolish to argue against that little round "O" of black metal which at the twitch of a finger could spit death into his body.

"Stop there," was the next command. "Now put your hands behind you."

He could feel the sudden bite of copper wire being twisted about his crossed wrists.

"Stand closer to that upright."

He saw the blink of a flashlight as the stranger caught up a strand of mooring line. Before he quite realized the meaning of that movement Cassidy felt the rope swing about his body. He could feel the coils grow tighter as the rope ends were quickly knotted together.

Cassidy's first impulse was to shout aloud to all the world, to shout with the full strength of his hound and abused body. But he remembered the bleak-metalled automatic, and shut his teeth on that passing temptation.

He stood silent, watching the stranger, who hurried toward the hangar. He could see the flashlight flicker interrogatively about the dismantled Grumman and then go out. He could see the shadowy figure drift down to the dock edge and climb aboard the Postcraft that floated there, fueled and ready for its sunup take-off to Winnipeg and the East. Cassidy twisted about a little, under the rope coils that constricted his body, chilled by the thought that a plane was being stolen from right under the Company's nose. He even welted for the expected engine-spit and flash of awakened propellar blades.

But the Postcraft remained motionless. The watching man could see in the starlight softened by the distant Aurora.

The darkness, he saw, was thinning a little. The stranger no longer needed the flashlight as he threw off the mooring lines and clambered aboard. It wasn't until Cassidy heard the bark and sputter of the starting engine that he gave vent to a repeated shout of protest.

But that shout was lost in the mounting roar of the motor as the blades bit into the air and the silver-white Lockheed moved away.

Cassidy could see it as it taxied down the shadowy water of the Snye.

He could see it veer and face the wind and finally rise in the air. He could see it as it floated up, phantom-like, above the serrated black line of the spruce ridges and then swing about so as to head more directly into the North.

The gray light of morning was breaking over Alberta by the time Cassidy had worked himself free and stumbled up to the administration building telephone. His call brought a ruffled and half-dressed Cruger to the airport, on the run.

"Now tell me what happened," he panted, "and tell it intelligently this time."

Cassidy did the best he could. That brief and indignant recountal, however, left much to be desired.

But Cruger was thinking of other things. He was thinking of his lost Lockheed and the setback it meant for Norland Airways.

"It doesn't make sense," he cried.

"Faith, and he was sensible, all right," persisted Cassidy. "A heap more sensible-lookin' than them two swan-hunters young Lindy Slade flew out o' here yesterday mornin'."

Cruger, instead of answering, climbed aboard the Postcraft. His face, when he returned from his investigations there, remained perplexed.

"He knew his onions, all right. That high-jacker fixed this ship so it couldn't follow him." Cruger's eye scanned the brightening skyline.

"You say he flew north?" he questioned. "You're sure of that?"

"I am," averred Cassidy.

"Then it's time to get busy," cried Cruger, "or this outfit goes broke."

"Then what'd we best he doin'?" asked Cassidy.

Cruger's accruing sense of frustration flowered in a shout made sharp with exasperation.

"If we don't get that Lockheed back, you'd best cut your cowardly throat!"

Slade, flying north with his two self-immured passengers, found something consoling in the quietness which his engine hum merely seemed to accentuate. It was pretty lonely-looking country they were traversing. Yet there was, he felt, consolation in loneliness like that. It gave you time to think things out and explore your own mind. And it made you less dependent on outsiders.

After refueling at Frenchman Forks the Viking-eyed pilot saw a torn drift of clouds lower his ceiling and a freshing wind sweep down out of the northeast. If his passengers understood that lowered ceiling they ventured no comment on it.

Slade was lightly casual as he gunned the motor and taxied out to clear water. His eyes steadied as he nosed into the wind, slapped a run of wave tops with his floats, and rose above the stunted spruce ridges.

Yet one segment of his circling attention still went to his passengers. He noticed that Freyne had unrolled a chart, over which Karnell and the birdman bent, from time to time, as they quietly talked together. They seemed to be having difficulty in linking up their chart lines with the terrain beneath them.

It was dreary country, Slade admitted, and the low-sweeping clouds made it look dreaier. But it had its grandeur. Even Lynn Morlock, he remembered, had caught the spirit of its immensity. "These Barrens," she had said on one of his happier flights from Coronation, "can be so empty and ugly they're able to turn into something beautiful."

He was still thinking of Lynn as he battled his head wind, steadily growing stronger. He noticed, for the second time, the powerful German binoculars with which Freyne was studying a chain of lakes that grew wider as they droned over them. Then he awakened to the fact that Frayne was calling out to him.

"Your plane is not modern," his passenger was complaining.

Slade nettled a little at that charge.

"She still hangs together," he retorted. To confirm that claim he opened the throttle and zoomed defiantly up over a mountain of shredded gray wool. He took it like a hunter taking a hurdle.

"Why," asked Freyne, "do you fly without two-way radio?"

Slade laughed.

"I'm a bush pilot," he proclaimed. "And two-way radio weighs exactly sixty-five pounds. That'd ship just about sixty-five dollars off my pay load."

"I also observe," said Frayne, "that you are without a direction-finder. Is that not like refusing to accept what science has placed in your hands?"

Slade's glance flickered down to his meager instrument board.

"She's an archaic old tub," he agreed, "but I get through, as a rule."

He declined to announce that he'd flown that country for nearly seven years without a major crash. He had, of course, known his minor mishaps. He'd smashed tail-skids and punctured pontoons and buckled ski-struts and straightened them out again. He'd turned more than one somersault bucking a snowdrift; he'd capped his engine and made repairs at forty below, and knocked the ice from his ailerons with a fishing pole as he went. He'd pancaked down through cotton-wool fog on ooze and muskeg-soup only three feet deep, and he'd pushed the old kite through snow clouds seven thousand feet up, with the haze red on one side and green on the other as his wing-lights plowed through the blanketing mist.

His ship was something to look at, in those days, in her fresh coat of pale gray that took on the appearance of white in the arctic sunlight, so white that from Cooking Lake to Coronation she had been known as the Snow-Ball Baby. She was a bit old and battered now. But she'd never failed him.

"In the face of such hazards," Freyne was saying, "you are well paid, I take it, by your company?"

"I'm part of the company," said Slade. "But it doesn't bring me in anything to brag about."

"In that case," suggested his passenger, "you must have hopes for better things."

"What better things?" Slade inquired.

"There is, of course, always the matter of money. It means little to a man of science. But it must have its consolations for a young man with his way to make in the world."

"It counts," acceded the pilot. His thoughts, at the moment, were on Barrett Walden, the Barrett Walden who could hunt big game and cruise in the Caribbean and airily buy his way about the world.

"Then perhaps the prospect of making a good deal of money might appeal to you?" Slade's passenger was suggesting.

"How'd I make it?"

There was a moment of silence.

"By flying for me, perhaps," Frayne suggested out of that silence.

The tone was friendly enough. But the suggestion left Slade wondering why it confronted him with a prospect that remained so uninviting.

"Hunting swans' nests?" he asked with a smile.

Frayne ignored any possible touch of scorn in that query.

"There are nests," he observed, "that sometimes contain what is known to your countrymen as a nest egg."

"Not for me, thank you," Slade announced more decisively than he had intended.

"You do not care for adventure?" Freyne was suggesting.

Slade laughed.

"I get all I need of that," he said, "flying this old crate. And if the weather thickens you'll know what I'm shooting at."

Frayne glanced out at the lowering ceiling. But the weather failed to interest him.

"Your company, I understand, is not as prosperous as it might be."

"We've had our ups and downs," Slade acknowledged. "But there's zip to it when you're not sure of the outcome. I'm going to stick to puddle-jumping until we pull into the clear."

"Then my enterprise fails to interest you?"

"It interests me," said Slade, "only as an outsider."

Frayne shrugged and bent over his chart. Then, after consulting his watch, he studied the desolate-looking terrain through his binoculars.

"We are not making good time," he complained.

"We're bucking a head wind," Slade retorted, "a head wind we weren't counting on. There's no one, you see, to hand us weather reports on this route."

The caustic note seemed lost on Frayne, who was busy looking down at the world flowing past them.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Cassidy's pipe fell as the boards as that shadow confronted him.

Farmers who have not been able to get their fertilizer should get their orders at the AAA office in Boyne City immediately. As soon as the hay is off the fields, it may be spread according to the Food for Freedom program.

Old tires and other rubber scrap have been coming in to the various receiving stations at a good rate. The largest amount brought in by a farmer was nearly 500 pounds, reports John Olson, of Boyne City. He credits Mr. Howard, of Chandler Hill. Who can beat this?

The county farm AAA checkup is proceeding rapidly, and, except for second inspections, will soon be completed.

All farmers having milkweed forms should fill them out and mail to the AAA office in Boyne City as quickly as possible. The harvest of pods will not be ready for some time but, unless you have your applications in, there may be some individual delay in securing the bags for their curing and storing. The milkweed floss is needed in making life preservers for the Navy to replace kapok, which can no longer be secured from the East Indies.

AT THE MOVIES

Abbott and Costello Laugh Riot as Spy Chasers in Musical 'Rio Rita'

Combining mirth, music and romance, "Rio Rita" opens at the Palace Theater for two days on July 5, with Bud Abbott and Lou Costello cavorting into the twelfth year of their amazing partnership as comedians.

When it is considered that they were relatively unknown only five years ago, their rise is phenomenal. Now popular on stage, screen and radio, they reach the apex of their climb in the new picture.

Kathryn Grayson and John Carroll offer romance and melody as a background for the antics of the comedians. Miss Grayson in a duet with Carroll sings "The Ranger's Song" and "Long Before You Came Along." Carroll sings the theme song, "Rio Rita," and Miss Grayson solos with "The Shadom Song" from Dinorah.

A capable supporting cast includes Patricia Dane, Tom Conway, Arthur Space, Peter Whitney and Dick Rich. They form a band of spies who are intent on eliminating Abbott and Costello, but their efforts are futile, of course.

Michigan's Beauty Spots are at your door

When you want to telephone home while taking a Michigan holiday, please avoid the busy hours. The best times to make your Long Distance calls are:

BEFORE 10 A. M. — FOUR TO 7 P. M.
NOON TO 2 P. M. — AFTER 9 P. M.

You can help keep lines clear for vital war calls by keeping personal calls brief and by making them at other times than during "rush" hours.

WINNING the war is a job for vigorous Americans, ready to put all they've got into production and to work overtime cheerfully. But on days off they need to renew their energies out in the open. • In Michigan, you don't have far to go. Here you'll find almost any kind of recreation you want — fishing, swimming, canoeing, camping — all close at hand. Five thousand miles of streams and rivers and millions of acres of woodland are your playground. • Michigan workers are fortunate in having all these opportunities within easy reach by bus, boat or train.

HEINZ COMPANY WILL MAKE AIRPLANE PARTS

Operate Local Pickle Salting and Receiving Stations

Production of airplane parts from plastic bonded plywood soon will be added to the vital wartime work of H. J. Heinz Company, it was announced recently by H. J. Heinz II, president.

"Because our company believes that hastening victory is the first job of all industry, we long ago offered to the government the adaptable facilities of our factories extending from coast to coast," Mr. Heinz said, "for in addition to producing considerable quantities of specially prepared rations for the United Nations armed forces and the 57 Varieties for civilian consumption, we wished to make a direct contribution to the country's military effort.

"A thorough study of our factories revealed that some of their equipment was adaptable immediately to specialized work—particularly the manufacture of plywood aircraft parts. Specific details of the project cannot, of course, be disclosed, because they are military secrets, but large-scale production soon will be realized. One of the company's machine shops already is operating nearly 100% on sub-contracts to assist in the output of war materials."

H. J. Heinz Company recently purchased the pickle salting and receiving stations in this region owned by the Charlevoix Pickle and Produce Company and operated by the late A. J. Stelter. A good acreage of pickles under contract has been written and all stations will be operated. The planting has now been completed, and the crop is growing. Good stands are reported from field surveys conducted by company fieldmen.

The growing of contract pickles provides a ready cash market in this region and farmers find the crop fitting well into their rotation plans.

The 70,628 tons of lead which were used last year in autos, golf clubs, toys and refrigerators figures out at about four pounds for each of 35 million American families. This four pounds of lead would provide all the lead needed in making five big shells for 240 mm howitzers.

CHANGE SYSTEM FOR SELECTIVE SERVICE

Establish Four Groups for Order of Military Induction

National Selective Service Headquarters has established a "four category" system of inducting men into the armed services whereby all eligible single registrants of local draft boards are to be called to duty before men with dependents are taken.

After the single men, the next group called will be those with dependents other than wives and children. Men with wives only would be inducted in the third group, and men with both wives and children, or children alone, would be the last called to duty.

Category 1—Registrants otherwise qualified for military service who have no bona fide financial dependents.

Category 2—Registrants otherwise qualified for military service who have financial dependents other than wives or children mentioned in categories 3 or 4.

Category 3—Registrants otherwise qualified for military service who have wives with whom they are maintaining a bona fide family relationship in their homes and who were married prior to Dec. 8, 1941, and at a time when induction was not imminent.

Category 4—Registrants otherwise qualified for military service who have wives and children, or children alone, with whom they maintain a bona fide family relationship in their homes, who were married prior to Dec. 8, 1941, and at a time when induction was not imminent.

ADJOURN JUNE MEETING OF SUPERVISORS

Charlevoix Given Valuation Cut; Vote More Welfare Money

Charlevoix county supervisors adjourned last Wednesday afternoon, concluding the annual June session.

The county's assessed valuation was set at $8,962,525, an increase of $180,120 over last year and $376,207 over two years ago. Charlevoix's valuation was decreased from $2,870,850 to $2,804,865, a drop of $65,985. Last year $10,845 was lopped off, providing a drop of $76,740 in two years. Boyne City's valuation was increased from $943,875 to $998,350 and East Jordan's from $739,360 to $785,560. Valuations of several townships were increased also.

The board voted not to exceed $2,000 per month for welfare purposes for the months of July, August and September, after voicing a warning that cost of relief was exceeding revenues and must be curtailed. Special emphasis was placed on hospitalizations cost. The board adopted a welfare committee resolution requesting that closer investigation be given applications for hospitalization before admittance except in the most extreme cases of emergency as a means of curtailing the cost of this type of relief. Economy in all county departments was urged.

Claims for dog damage aggregating approximately $149 and representing probably half of claims filed, were allowed.

The board adjourned subject to call of the chairman.

The drive to save household fats is expected to net 500,000,000 pounds a year, or enough to make from 50 to 100 million pounds of glycerine; 100 pounds of fats will yield enough glycerine to make 24½ pounds of nitroglycerin.

A Busted Hot Water Bottle May Help Win The War!

REMEMBER the old time ballad which says, "For the want of a rider a battle was lost?" Well, we are not going to lose this war, but a leaky hot water bottle may supply the extra ounce of scrap rubber that will more quickly give the Axis the axe.

Uncle Sam wants that old rubber right now!

Yes, the government wants every disused or worn out article made of rubber that can be sent to the nation's stock pile, and want you to help get it there in a hurry.

Oil Industry is collecting it!

Starting June 15th, and continuing through July 10, gasoline stations from coast to coast will help collect scrap rubber and will pay . . .

A penny a pound spot cash for every pound!

contributed by you . . . so take all the old rubber you can collect to the nearest gas station today.

None of the oil companies will receive one penny of profit for this service to the nation. Through the cooperation and efforts of thousands of dealers and gasoline company employees, the scrap rubber will be turned over to the government and will be paid for by Uncle Sam on the basis of $25 per ton (2000 pounds). The difference between the amount paid by the oil companies and the amount paid by the government has been pledged to the USO, Navy Relief, Army Relief and American Red Cross.

May help avert gasoline rationing in Central West

Since a shortage of rubber is considered the main reason for the threatened rationing of gasoline in the central states, this is one important way to do your part, and it may help to ward off the need for curtailment of this vital commodity.

The Charlevoix Courier

On this sacred anniversary of the birth of liberty in the United States, we pledge that we will not rest nor cease our efforts until tyrants throughout the world have been deposed and liberty has been restored to those from whom it has been taken. When next the liberty bell shall ring, all the world will hear and rejoice.

What Will Win the War?

THERE are many statements, loosely circulated, to the effect that food, faith, hope, courage, production, unity, etc., etc., each is the one thing that will win the war. Hawever the truth is that military might will win — nothing else. The things mentioned abave, and many athers, are highly important, some vitally so. But let's not be distracted from the fact that FORCE is what we must have to win. Let's bend aur every effart to build the greatest striking farce af all time.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

Petroleum is verily the life-blood of the present war. Airplanes cannot fly without gasoline and air superiority is apt to be directly proportional to the grade of gasoline available for the planes. For instance, the average private flyer has always used 87-octane gasoline as aviation fuel. A military plane, powered by that fuel in actual test climbed to fighting altitude of 26,000 feet in 19½ minutes. The same plane, powered with 100-plus octane gasoline—now perfected and in use by our Air Force—reached the same altitude in 12 minutes. That gasoline has been made available to our Allies. Germany's best gasoline is rated at 91-octane. The Allies present superiority in the air over Europe may be directly attributed in no small measure to superior gasoline.

Tanks cannot roll without aviation gasoline or, perhaps diesel fuel oil. Other modern motorized equipment is also dependent on various grades of petroleum products. Battleships and submarines cannot sail without fuel and diesel oil. The lubrication of the modern war machine is of vital importance because without satisfactory lubricants the already abnormal amount of wear and tear on the modern war machinery is greatly accentuated.

The United Nations, fortunately, control all but about 6 per cent of the available oil in the entire world. This explains then the seriousness of the situation for Hitler and his allies on the one hand, and the imperative necessity on the other hand for us to keep him from getting control of any more oil fields regardless of what it may cost us. According to all available figures that we have, Hitler and his allies are now using oil very much faster than they can replace it. In his Russian operations alone, he is said to be using oil at the rate of 21 million barrels per month. By comparison during the 45-day 'blitz' in which Hitler over-ran Norway, France, and the Low countries, he is said to have used only 12½ million barrels of petroleum. Further by way of comparison the best figures we have is that when France fell Hitler was able to seize only some 20 million barrels.

Hitler himself at the start of the war in all of his own German fields had only two-tenths of one percent of the world's supply. His conquest of Poland, Rumania and a few Balkan states gave him control of an additional 2.2% of the world's supply. Roumania is at present Hitler's principal source of raw petroleum, which explains the vital mission upon which our own American bombers were engaged last week. Faced with this basically meager supply of raw petroleum and faced with the enormous demands of a mechanized war, Hitler long ago embarked upon methods of producing synthetic gasoline from coal. Two principal methods are employed, and Hitler has numerous synthetic plants scattered throughout Germany and in a few of the occupied countries. These are vital targets for the RAF and American bombers. According to all available figures which we have, Hitler's total production of synthetic gasoline is less than 50 million barrels per year, and as previously noted, it has not yet been possible for him to obtain more than a 91-octane gasoline out of either of these processes. Furthermore the lubricating oil obtained therefrom are decidedly inferior. Both of these factors must of necessity reduce the effectiveness of his war machine. In any event it can be seen that the petroleum shortage for the German armies must be very acute indeed.

The Japanese so far have gained control of about three percent of the world's supply, but we must not forget we ourselves are fundamentally responsible for that. We must unhesitatingly and everlastingly blame ourselves for permitting, yes for soliciting, the privilege of supplying Japan with at least two years' supply of our highest grade aviation gasoline and lubricants. For instance in the nine month period between July 1, 1940 and March 15, 1941, we appeased Japan to the extent of selling her 157,500,000 gallons of crude oil, aviation gasoline and other refined petroleum products. Indeed, as late as February and March of last year we were shipping to Japan four-fifths as much of this valuable petroleum as we were shipping to our friends, the British, under the lend-lease program. Also, it will be a long, long time before anyone can be found who can satisfactorily explain the Administration's policy by which we appeased Japan to the tune of eight million tons of scrap iron since she started her conquest of China. And let us not forget that there was scrap iron and gasoline on the high seas on the very day that Pearl Harbor was attacked. All this despite the fact that Admiral Thomas C. Hart, just recently testified before the House Naval Affairs committee that he found it advisable and necessary—and did—put his Asiatic Fleet on a war basis, ready for instant action, as far back as last July; and that both he and General MacArthur constantly and continuously begged for a fleet of at least 200 fighter planes to be stationed on the Philippines which, had this request not been denied, Admiral Hart believes would have successfully frustrated all Japanese attempts to seize the Philippines, and without which her conquest of the Malay states would have been impossible.

Nevertheless reserve stocks, no matter how large, soon diminish and no combination of nations today can win a war while controlling less than six percent of the available supply of petroleum in the world. We ourselves control in this country 62 percent of the world's supply, while there is some 10 percent available in South America. Our problem, naturally is a question of transportation—of getting this to the fighting fronts. Nevertheless this whole petroleum picture, therefore, readily explains the intense activity in the German campaign against Russia in the Black Sea area in an endeavor to capture the Caucasian oil fields, representing 10 percent of the world's supply; and if successful in that endeavor a further push to secure control over the United Nations' protected Iran and Iraq fields, which represent four percent of the world's supply. In other words, Hitler's campaign is an all-out effort to increase his present control of less than six percent of the world's supply up to around 20 percent. This, too, explains the seriousness of the African campaign. Even should Hitler succeed in capturing the Caucasian and Mesopotamian fields, he would still be exposed to heavy aerial bombardment of these fields from land-based aircraft in the hands of a United Nations' controlled African coastline. Furthermore, control of Africa means much less danger to, or interruption of, Britain's lifeline between Australia and the British Isles. The seriousness of the situation on both shores of the Mediterranean, and the necessity of relieving pressure on both fronts was graphically illustrated by the recent sudden arrival in Washington of Winston Churchill.

CAMP CHARLEVOIX OPEN FOR SUMMER

the eighth season; Kaleigh "Beau" VanDeren, University of Arizona, is the new cowboy this year; Don Neisch, Grosse Pointe high school, is back for the second year; Jim Plate, of Kalamazoo College is with us for the first time this year. The assistant counselors are: Sandy MacDonell, Lima, Ohio; Bill Matheny, Highland Park, Mich., and Bob Mackenroth, of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

The business office is headed up by David Turner, University of Michigan, with Harry Bingham, principal of Charlevoix high school, and Ruby Smith (Mrs. Ken Smith) as his helpers in the business end of the camp. Ana Hart (Mrs. Tom Hert) is once again the nurse and everyone rests assured that their health will be looked after very capably.

The source of all camp happiness, the kitchen, is headed up this year by Mrs. Elizabeth Teabolt, of Ypsilanti, ably assisted by Mrs. Hazel Haggerty, Pearl Davis, Evelyn Pearl, and Bill Hoezar. Jerry Haggerty is the caretaker.

Now you can see that we have quite a staff lined up, and when the season is over, I feel confident that we will all agree that it has been another one of "Chief's" TOP staffs.

Boys from these cities are with us this summer, Detroit: Hal Caldwell, Terrance and Dennis Croghan, John Davis, George Dowley, Larry Rossler, and Frank Watts; Grosse Pointe, Rex Emery, David Harding, Howard Kay, Bill Kerr, and Chuck Lambert; Lansing, Geno Davenport; Adrian, Buck, Dillon, Bill and Loring Kampe; Ann Arbor, Bud Grimes, Konrad Mstthaei, Jack and Jim Tanner; Pontiac, John Church, Robert House, and Jim Howlett; East Lansing, Cary and John Bachman, and Jimmy Gross; Toledo, Ohio, Louis and Bill Scher; Mansfield, Ohio, Frederic and Millard Pryor; Saginaw, Sargo Harvey, and Peter Morley; Shaker Heights, Ohio, Charles and Quay Kinzig, and Barclay Newell; Jackson, Don Korten and Bill Lutz; South Haven, John Niffenegger; Benton Harbor, Alan Becker; Midland, Peter Hanson; Champaign, Ill., Dick Noel; Ypsilanti, Jimmy Fox and "Kip" Kipke; Richmond, Ind., Charles McQuire; Kokomo, Ind., Tommy Thompson; Kalamazoo, Paul Winans; Lima, Ohio, Ernie Evans and Johnny MacDonell; Albion, Barry Ewbank, Frank and Paul Smith; Battle Creek, Billy Farley and Buddy Gage; Grand Rapids, Al Birdsall, Bob Black, Sammy Greenawalt, Johnny Hunting, Jim McGerry, Fritz Steketee, and Bill Usher; Rockford, Ill., Mike Brend; East Jordan, Jim Lewis; Monroe, Gene Chapman and Billy Newcomer; Washington Court House, Ohio, John Craig; Stockbridge, Ray Culver and Tom Dancer; Chelsea, Bob Daniels; and Petoskey, Robert Dau.

One of the first "new" things the boys saw was the raft with a diving tower on it. This will please many young hearts and it is a bit of added equipment which every boy will take pleasure in.

The program for the week is all set up with the highlight being the Annual Lamb Bar-B-Que on the Fourth of July. Harry Bingham is supervising this big event and if custom is followed it will be a day to long be remembered.

Plans are already under way for the rodeo, Dads' Day, and other special days in the life of Camp Charlevoix. It looks like a great season, and if you feel that you can spare the wear and tear on the tires, head the car northward, and visit us up here, as you are always welcome.

Until next week, Adios.

P. S.—I nearly forgot to tell you all that in order to have campfires when it is dark, and not to have the boys go to bed when it is still daylight, we have set our clocks back two hours. That is, when it is eleven o'clock in your fair city, we are going to bed at nine o'clock. So when you plan to visit camp, remember that we are TWO HOURS SLOWER than your time....More next week....Adios.

GASOLINE RATIONING VS. NATIONAL 40 M. P. H. SPEED LIMIT

Editor's Note:—With all the confusion now existing because of threatened gasoline rationing to save rubber, it is interesting to read an apparently ignored proposal by the National Rubber Manufacturers' Association to establish a national 40-mile-per-hour speed limit and thereby affect a savings of 50% in automobile tire equipment now in use. Assuming tire manufacturers know, through tests and experimentation, the facts regarding tire wear, it is surprising their plan has not been given a trial, at least. Read the following and perhaps your conclusions will be the same as ours:

With the exception of the East Coast, gasoline rationing has been indicated as being necessary, in order to conserve rubber.

Any rationing plan requires extensive facilities to operate; regardless of the effort that is made to prevent it, discrimination and "chiseling" cannot be avoided. Furthermore, it affects practically all types of business and, in some cases, in such an adverse manner that they will never recover from it.

Gasoline rationing, in its present proposed form, will reduce mileage, but this does not affect the prime factor in tire wear, which is speed. Therefore, a plan which would substantially reduce car speeds could be expected to provide something equivalent in the reducing of tire wear, without causing serious and drastic effects on communities generally—as in the case of the rationing plan—and at the same time all businesses could be permitted to function in a normal manner. Principal factors to be considered are as follows:

1. Present day tire equipment has been built to provide normal mileages, with vehicles being operated at consistently high speed of from 60 to 70 miles per hour. Reducing these maximum speeds to 40 miles per hour would result in this tire equipment providing approximately a 50% increase in mileage; which would represent a corresponding saving in rubber per year, or for any given period.

2. Reduced speeds would result in reduced total mileages, representing further rubber savings per year.

3. Tire injuries would be substantially reduced, as punctures and fabric breaks are in many cases the result of high speeds.

4. In the event of tire failures—through punctures, etc.—the ability to stop quickly would prevent permanent destruction of the tire and tube, which, in many cases, is the result when such injuries or failures occur at high speeds.

5. The mileage that could be obtained from recapped tires would be increased in even greater proportion, than in the case of new tires.

6. Lower speeds would permit the continuance in service of badly worn tires, which could not be safely operated at higher speeds; as, of course, any failures at the lower speeds would not result in loss of control of the car.

7. Trucks and busses operated at these lower speeds would result in tremendous rubber savings and reduction in tire failures.

8. Substantially reduced gasoline and oil consumption.

9. Increased car life.

10. Reduction of accidents—particularly of a serious nature—which would have a beneficial effect on man-power available for the war effort.

11. In issuing rationing certificates for complete sets of tires for cars and trucks, oversize could be specified; which, with an increase of approximately 25% in crude rubber content, would increase mileage at least 50%.

12. So-called "joy riding" or pleasure driving would undoubtedly become negligible at this lower speed.

The forfeiting of drivers' licenses, for the duration, for anyone exceeding the speed limit, would automatically control it.

Further benefit could be derived by establishing traffic regulations which would permit officers to curb and control the degree of acceleration, which is another form of car operation that has a very definite effect on tire wear.

In any event, it would seem logical to consider this an initial plan for a period of at least 90 days, as it could be made effective immediately with existing facilities; and rubber savings could be effected at once, rather than being deferred for the period that would be required to set up gasoline rationing facilities. This would, therefore, substantially conserve rubber during the summer months, when tire wear is the most excessive. During such a period, it could be determined whether or not this plan would provide a sufficient reduction in tire wear; and, if not, gasoline rationing could be added to whatever extent is necessary in order to accomplish the desired results.

Furthermore, all the patriotic and voluntary effort that is now being encouraged to conserve tires, could be continued; which, combined with the reduced speed plan, would accomplish the desired objective.

When a tanker loaded with gasoline is sunk by an Axis submarine enough gasoline is lost to have driven 5,000 autos for a whole year at the normal rate.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The Aerial Camera for use on Scout and Observation and Reconnaisance planes is essential to both the Army and Navy air forces in planning battle formations and in obtaining information on enemy fortifications and movements. They look something like a cannon, and cost about $3,400 apiece.

The aerial cameraman can plot wide territories in bold relief so that Army or Navy Intelligence can make accurate measurements of enemy territory. We need many of these cameras so necessary to the air arms of the Army and Navy. You can help buy them with your purchases of War Bonds. Invest at least ten percent of your income every pay day, and help your county go over its War Bond Quota.
